HAIL AIR HERO IN CAPITAL

GUNMAN NAMES BIRGER SLAYER OF PRICE, WIFE

Indict Gang Leader, Four Lieutenants.

BULLETIN.

Springfield, Ill., June 11.—(AP)—Charles Birger, southern Illinois gangster, named in the confession of Art Newman as the slayer of State Highway Patrolman Lory L. Price, was brought to the Sangamon county jail tonight. Birger was removed from the Franklin county jail at Benton when reports were received of a mob forming in Williamson county.

Nashville, Ill., June 11.—[Special.]—Charlie Birger, southern Illinois gangster, rum runner, arsonist and murder suspect and four of his lieutenants were indicted late today by the Washington county grand jury for the murder on Jan. 17 of Lory L. Price, state highway patrolman and his wife Ethel.

Those indicted with Birger were Leslie Simpson, Riley Simmons, Ernest Blue, and Connie Ritter.

Gangster Confesses Slaying.

The indictments were voted after Art Newman, a member of the Birger gang, had told the jurors the story of the double murder which for five months, since the couple disappeared from their home in Marion, has been a mystery. Newman was not indicted, nor was Fred Wooten, named as a member of the murder party, now serving a federal sentence in the Atlanta penitentiary.

His story to the jury, following closely his confession made to State's Attorney H. H. House and Chief John Stack of the state highway police, revealed details of a crime almost unique in its cruelty of inception and brutality of execution.

Lured From Home.

He detailed how Price and his wife were lured from their home because Price "knew too much" of the activities of the Birger gang and how they were taken in separate automobiles on the rides that were to lead to their deaths.

He told as an eye witness of how Birger shot Price four times with a revolver and when the patrolman still lived drove with him to a lonely spot where his body was later found and dispatched him with a machine gun, disregarding his pitiful pleas.

Price's Wife Slain.

He related how four members of the gang, Ritter, Blue, Simmons, and Freddie Wooten had told him before Price was killed that they had "done away" with Ethel Price so she could not tell who had slain her husband.

Newman, who was arrested in Long Beach, Cal., May 22, as a suspect in the murder of Mayor Joe Adams, of West City, Ill., was secretly rushed out of Nashville after he had testified and tonight is in jail in some remote county, where he will be safe from gangster reprisals.

His confession tallied in every way with that of his wife who was arrested yesterday at the home of her sister in East St. Louis.

Price's Body Found.

According to Chief Stock and State's Attorney House, the confessions of Newman and his wife say that Price was killed near Du Bois, Washington county, where his mutilated body was found in a field some weeks later. Mrs. Price was murdered at the mouth of an abandoned mine in Williamson county. Her body was thrown into the mine and has not been recovered, as the mine entrance has since caved in.

Sheriff Coleman of Marion and a force of deputies and mine workers tonight were digging in the mine shaft in an effort to recover the body which a former search had failed to reveal.

Newman Drives Car.

The confession goes on to say that Newman was driving a new car the night of the abduction, Jan. 17, and that Freddie Wooten and Charles Birger were riding with him.

At the same time another car, driven by Leslie Simpson, was with them. In that car was Ritter, Blue, and Simmons.

Newman's story is that Birger coaxed Price to go for a ride. He does not know how the coaxing was done and does not know how Price and his wife were separated.

Price got in his car, Newman said, and they drove first to Birger's home in Harrisburg, where Birger got out of the car and went into his house, getting a revolver. Frank Shrader and Jack Crews were at the Birger home. The cars then returned to Shady

IS THE PRESIDENT THINKING OF BREAKING SOME KIND OF RECORD?

Wife Admits Unworthiness; Husband Sues

A philosophic essay on matrimony, in which his wife declares herself unworthy of being her husband's partner, was presented by Clarence L. Garner, of 1156 Farwell avenue, to substantiate his charge of desertion against Mrs. Evelyn Garner, a social welfare worker, in his suit for divorce before Circuit Judge Thomas J. Lynch.

The essay was a farewell letter written to Mr. Garner when his wife left their home on April 25, 1925, according to the evidence. It reads in part:

"It is not easy to leave you, and to contemplate a future without ever seeing you is far from pleasant, but it is not only wrong but also impossible for us to go on the way we have been . . .

"Appreciation Is Sincere."

"My appreciation of what you have done for me in showing 'myself to me' mercilessly is really sincere. I could have accomplished nothing, going on as I was, though I lived to be a thousand. I shall always regret that so many years of your life had to be sacrificed, but there is a price for everything, and that seems to have been the cost of waking me up. If I can just go ahead and amount to something it should be some consolation to you, for I admit now that it will be in large part due to you—and thank you in advance.

"I shall believe and pray that the future may be kinder to you than the past. I hope you will find love, as well as success, to complete your life. . . .

"As for me, I do not know what love is. My selfishness has prevented me from finding out, so far. How could I love? I have not learned the fundamental things of life. I begin to see what it might be, however, and intend to become more worthy of it and possibly some day I may merit and know it.

Hopes to Earn Friendship.

"At present, I do not even deserve your friendship, and do not ask for it. I hope I may become the sort of person you would be glad to have for a friend. That remains to be seen. In withdrawing from our partnership [in which one of the partners has done it all and the other nothing] I do only what you would expect a friend to do. Any one who contributed nothing would have the decency to withdraw and refuse to accept any of the profits."

Mr. Garner, who is connected with the Republic Gear Co., 1475 South Michigan boulevard.

Judge Lynch indicated he will sign a decree.

MRS. W. B. EGAN IS GIVEN DIVORCE AND $150,000

An alimony settlement of $150,000 was incorporated in a decree of divorce obtained yesterday by Mrs. Christine T. Egan, Highland Park society woman, from W. Bradshaw Egan, vice president of R. W. Wilsey & Co., investment brokers at 76 West Monroe street.

The settlement, arranged out of court, provides for immediate payment of $75,000 cash and the rest to be derived from sale of real estate, to be paid after two years and within ten.

Mrs. Egan testified during the trial in the Circuit court at Waukegan, that her husband deserted her Dec. 27, 1924, without justification. They were married 19 years ago and have one child, William, 14. She was given the custody of the boy but the father must support him until he is 21, including the cost of his education.

Last year Mrs. Egan sued for divorce in the Cook county courts. She obtained temporary alimony of $1,000 a month after testimony showed her husband's income in 1925 was $58,000.

Her attorney, Martin Isaacs, and his partner, Benjamin B. Davis, refused to explain why the case was taken to Lake county.

GREATEST CHERRY THIEF AND EATER, AGE 11, IS CAUGHT

South Chicago police with the assistance of a watchman and Engine Co. 46 of the fire department, last night solved the great cherry robbery mystery, and captured the thief—David Gallaga, 11 years old, of 9232 Baltimore avenue—perhaps the greatest cherry punisher of all time.

The Greenwald commission house at 3102 East 92nd street, had been entered three times during the week, and in each case ten pounds of cherries had been stolen—and eaten right there—for the pits littered the floor around the cases.

So the watchman was on the watch last night and heard footsteps, stealthy steps on the second floor. He went to a door leading up stairs but found the thief had locked him out. He then called the police who in turn called the fire department and the firemen entered a second story window and found young Dave, his face all stained up with cherry juice.

"What puzzles me," said Greenwald, owner of the commission house, "is how any human being could eat all the cherries this lad has consumed and still be alive."

Robbers Loot Home of A. F. Madlener Jr.

Burglars some time last night looted the home of Albert F. Madlener Jr., 220 East Walton place and escaped with jewels valued at nearly $10,000, belonging to Mrs. Madlener, formerly Harriet Lowden, daughter of former Governor Frank O. Lowden. The thieves are believed to have entered the Madleners' apartments on the fourth floor of the building, which is occupied by wealthy society people, by means of a pass key.

The Madleners discovered the robbery when they returned to their home shortly after midnight. The rooms had been ransacked and Mrs. Madlener's gowns and furs were scattered about the place as if the robbers had intended to take them, but did not have the time to bundle them up. Hurrying to her jewel case, Mrs. Madlener found it empty.

Only a Maid at Home.

No one was at home last night except a maid and the Madleners' two months' old daughter, Nancy. The maid, Clara Weaver, told the police that about 9:30 o'clock she heard a noise in the rooms occupied by Mrs. Madlener. However, the sounds were not repeated and as she was busy in the nursery caring for the baby, she did not investigate. All the rooms except the nursery were ransacked.

Loot Taken by Robbers.

The jewelry obtained by the robbers consisted of a diamond bracelet, a string of pearls, two diamond pins, and a gold mesh bag. The thieves overlooked $5,000 in silverware.

The Madleners were married at Sinissippi farm, near Oregon, Ill., the Lowden country place, on Oct. 2, 1925, and the wedding was one of the leading social events of that season. A daughter was born to Mrs. Madlener on April 13, this year. Mr. Madlener is vice president of the Cosmopolitan State bank, Clark street and Chicago avenue.

AMERICA LEADS IN MAIL PLANES; NEEDS AIRPORTS

Lindy Compares Our Flying and Europe's

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., June 11.—[Special.]—"It wasn't an order that brought me home—it was advice."

This, Col. Charles Lindbergh confided to the members of the National Press club and their six thousand guests in the Washington auditorium when he told the inside story of why he did not linger in Europe as he had planned.

"I landed at Bourget," he continued, "with the expectancy and hope of being able to see Europe. It was the first time I'd ever been abroad. I'd only been gone from America two days and I wasn't in any hurry to get back.

A Battleship Waiting.

"But after I had been in France a week, in Belgium one day and in England two days, I opened a few cables. I talked with three ambassadors and I don't know how many attachés and found that it did not make much difference if I did want to stay——"

A gale of laughter and Lindy, smiling broadly, continued:

"They told me while it wasn't an order, there'd be a battleship waiting. As one admiral said to me, 'It's not an order, just advice.'"

The speaker spread his hands in a "what could I do?" gesture which brought the great throng to its feet shouting.

"But," he resumed, "as I sailed up the Potomac this morning, I wasn't sorry that I listened to those ambassadors."

Why He Made Flight.

Then he went on in a serious vein to tell his eager listeners of the urge that prompted him to undertake his lone attempt to span the Atlantic—that the day of commercial aviation in the United States on a large scale and trans-Atlantic air liners flying on regular schedules might be hastened.

"All Europe," he said, "looks at our air mail lines with reverence. There is nothing like them anywhere abroad. But, where we have mail lines, they have passenger lines.

"It seems to me that it is up to us to develop passenger routes to compare with our mail routes. Government subsidy built European lines. We don't want that here. In the long run, the routes and the service would be regulated and dictated by the subsidy.

"What we need here is a series of airports in every town and city.

"Given these airports, Europe in a few years will be looking at our passenger lines as they do our mail lines.

Stamp Bears His Likeness.

Postmaster General Harry New, full of pride in the fact that the hero was an air mail pilot, presented Lindbergh and his mother with the first two impressions of the new Lindbergh air mail stamp.

"The postoffice department has issued a stamp designed for special use with the air mail which bears your name and a representation of the other member of that very limited partnership in which you made your now famous journey across seas," said Postmaster General New, handing the booklet containing the first stamp to Lindbergh.

"It is the first time a stamp has been issued in honor of a man still living—a distinction you have worthily won."

Unofficial Ambassador.

Secretary of State Kellogg added another title to the long string now possessed by the flyer when he declared, "I greet you as the unofficial ambassador of the state department."

Richard Oulahan, New York Times correspondent in Washington, welcomed him as a newspaper man, referring to Lindbergh's "journalistic flight" of the last two weeks, his own story of his achievement.

On behalf of the National Press club, Mr. Oulahan presented Lindy with a gold watch and to Mrs. Lindbergh he presented a wrist watch. Then came a steady stream of gifts, commendatory scrolls forwarded from cities all over the country and presented by official delegations, among them the invitation of the city of Chicago to be its guest on his way to St. Louis.

Mother's Kiss Final Seal on Son's Acclaim

BY GENEVIEVE FORBES HERRICK.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 11.—[Special.]—Charles A. Lindbergh in a secluded cabin on the crowded U. S. S. Memphis along about noon today swung his arms around the waist of a serenely happy woman in a printed chiffon gown, kissed the smile still deeper into her lips, and learned, once and for all time, that his lone crusade through the air had been worth while; his busy return, worthy.

His mother, there in his arms, told him so.

With cabinet members waiting outside the door, with the President of the United States waiting three miles away, and with the world crowding in on all sides, this tall, quiet young pioneer who three weeks ago yesterday adventured his way across the Atlantic, alone, rounded out the circuit and, alone, was welcomed home by Mrs. Evangeline Lodge Lindbergh.

Mother Whispers Her Welcome.

She winked her eyelids until the moisture was blinked away, and she whispered to her son Charles words that nobody heard and nobody will ever know. Then she pressed into his hand a small bunch of purple iris, the kind that grows in the garden in front of her small white cottage home in Detroit. The boy—he's a colonel now—gave his mother a package, a small, square thing, done up as any man does a package, in rumpled tissue paper tied with a string, and they both laughed.

Go Forth to Receive Greeting.

Then the famous aviator's mother and the erstwhile obscure chemistry teacher's son went out to the gun deck of the big gray ship to smile down on the several thousand officials and their friends who had been granted entrance to the navy yard.

They made a fine picture.

Lindbergh, tall, slender, with just a slight bend to his shoulders, was wearing a dark blue suit, soft white shirt and a dark blue tie. His hands, large hands, they are, moved about in gestures of greeting. He held on to a gray crushed hat. The wind, when it swept the sizzling heat aside every once in a while, caught up his yellow brown hair and twirled it around in the back. His face, a rather longish face and well featured, was tanned.

Mrs. Lindbergh Modish Figure.

The woman next him was shorter than he and heavier. She looked very young for 51, and very modish for any age. Her gown was of tan and rose; printed chiffon, with a tan georgette flower at her shoulder. Her large black hat was trimmed with a single white flower. The gloves were tan silk, her hose a light tan, and her pumps of black.

Mrs. Lindbergh carried, and it never left her hand, one large water lily, and nobody seemed to know just why.

They stood there, two long-to-be-remembered silhouettes, as the sailors in their whites, the officials in their black, and the crowds in multi-colors cheered and shouted and screamed.

Welcomed by Cabinet Members.

In a moment, up the gangplank came the welcoming committee—Secretary of the Navy Wilbur, Secretary of War Davis, and Postmaster General New. They were presented. Some guns went off. There had been so many different salutes already that people had stopped counting.

To the right, the Mayflower band, a white and gold dazzle in the sunlight, struck up a tune. To the left, perspiring marines were trying to keep the line straight. Overhead, several dozen airplanes and the stately, complacent, mighty Los Angeles, sailed across the blue sky.

And right in front, down the gang.

LINDBERGH HAS DAY OF HOMAGE; IS UNRUFFLED

Coolidge Gives Him Flying Cross.

"You have seen the affection of the people of France and of Europe for the people of America demonstrated to you. When you return to America take back that message to the people of the United States from the people of France and of Europe."

—Message brought back by Lindbergh from Europe and delivered by him to the President and a multitude gathered at the Washington monument.

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 11.—[Special.]—"And now he has brought his unsullied fame home."

With those nine words about Charles Lindbergh, the President of the United States this afternoon went straight to the essential notes of Charles Lindbergh's homecoming.

The note of unspoiled youth and the note of home.

Everything about this colossal day has been simple, spontaneous and real.

Plain Charles Lindbergh, whom President Coolidge described as "a son of the people," has this day lived up to every expectation of the 600,000 persons, white and black, notable and unknown, rich and poor, who stood in two lines three deep from Capitol hill to the Washington monument to greet him.

Bears Self as Real Man.

He has lived up to the expectations of the notables by bearing himself on this gorgeous day of his life as a thoroughly mannerly man; he has lived up to the expectations of the plain people by bearing himself as a real man amid excitements which would have made most men heady and excessive.

No oversureness of himself has made Lindbergh obtrusive; no self-consciousness has flustered him.

Most men when they shake hands with a President of the United States, even in the quiet of the executive office of the White House, consider the incident an episode and something to tell the little ones at home about.

But Lindbergh, in the presence of 100,000 people massed on Monument hill, shook hands with the President as one who was saying to himself:

"This gentleman seems friendly; I think I can properly respond in a friendly way."

Remains Serene Amid Plaudits.

And yet all day adjectives have enveloped him and cheers have deafened him. But he has remained serene, alert, correct. He was not flustered even when the President pinned on his breast the Distinguished Flying cross.

The throngs which welcomed him at noon and which, as the swift southern twilight closes in, still are acclaiming him, have caught his fine note of equanimity.

During eight hot, jubilant hours there has been no surging over the ropes that were strung double ply along the line of march, so that if the people broke over the one ply the second would disconcert and hold them; there has been no hysteria; there has been no unseemliness.

President Salutes with Adjectives.

What of all the day's resplendent doings that longest will linger in the memory of the writer of this dispatch is Charles Lindbergh's meditative smile—just touched with whimsicality—when Calvin Coolidge was enveloping him in adjectives. It was a presidential salute of adjectives.

Our President is not given to adjectives on the ordinary days of his ceremonial routine. But on this extraordinary day he unleashed them and, beaming happily upon the homecomer, he seemed to revel in them. The lines of care, which in the last year have startlingly deepened in his face, lifted and vanished as he uttered the words set down about Charles Lindbergh by army officers who in the last two years have examined Lindbergh for promotion.

Those words the President had secured copied out for use in his speech. Among the sixteen were "energetic," "dependable," "purposeful," "alert," "quick of practice," "serious," "deliberate," "efficient," "frank," "modest," "congenial," "moral" and "regular."

Adds His Own Encomiums.

Every time the President uttered one of those words he came down with precision on his heels, and with a widening smile on his pale face. And when he had finished with the words out of department files he followed them with the words "wholesome," "earnest," "fearless," "courageous," "genial," "modest."

Every time the President fired an adjective at Lindbergh, Mrs. Coolidge, whose eyes were fixed upon her husband and whose hands were clasped before her bosom, moved her hands in a swift gesture of emphasis.

On Mrs. Coolidge's left Charles Lindbergh sat, his head bared to the warm breeze that swept over the slope surmounted by the monument; on her right sat Mrs. Lindbergh, who, like her son, remained unflustered by the torrent of adjectives.

She looked down at the bouquet of red roses that lay in her lap, and only fleetingly lifted her eyes to look out over the thousands who cheered rapturously when the President, in the third paragraph of a speech of ten not very long paragraphs, reached these words:

"His mother, who dowered her son with her own modesty and charm, is with us today. Engaged in the vital profession of school-teaching, she has permitted neither money nor fame to interfere with her fidelity to her duties."

Calvin Coolidge came down hard on the word "duties." That was like Coolidge. That is what he would love—the woman's sedate loyalty to her daily task during days when two continents were rejoicing over her son's performance of a task that has made new history in a new science.

Lindbergh Repeats Message.

Lindbergh's response to the President's greeting was the delivery of the greeting to America which France, Belgium, and England has intrusted to him. He faced the hundred thousand with searching eyes and he spoke to them in steady tones.

"On the evening of May 21 I arrived at Le Bourget, France. I was in Paris for one week, in Belgium for a day and was in London and in England for several days," he said. "Everywhere I went, at every meeting I attended, I was requested to bring a message home to you. Always the message was the same.

"'You have seen,' the message was, 'the affection of the people of France and of Europe for the people of America demonstrated to you. When you return to America take back that message to the people of the United States from the people of France and of Europe.'

Almost before the multitude realized that the homecomer had begun he had finished. He snapped away from them with the words, "I thank you," and a brief bow.

Laughter at Finale.

At that routine finale a shout of laughter went up. Lindbergh had been merciful, as well as modest. The noonday sunshine was descending in shafts of heat as straight as the monument. Many women had turned faint and children were whimpering. There were those on the scene who recalled how, on this identical slope, seventy-seven years ago, President Zachary Taylor, old soldier though he was, had collapsed at a ceremonial under the ardent sun of Washington's midsummer, and in a few days had died. They were glad, therefore, to see the sweltering multitude of today dismissed with that brisk "I thank you."

Then came receding shouts of command as the troops and the bands moved away from the temporary speakers' platform, where the chief magistrate of the land had told the lone eagle of ocean and of air that he was a good trustworthy boy whose compatriots were proud of him.

Thousands of the sweltering people followed the President and the flyer to the white marble Patterson mansion in Du Pont circle, which is serving as temporary presidential mansion while the White House is being re-roofed.

Lindbergh Rides with Mother.

In that program of a mile's length between lines of cheering men, shrilling children and kiss waving girls, the President and Mrs. Coolidge were in the first automobile, Lindbergh and his mother in the second, and Secretary of War Davis, Secretary of the Navy Wilbur, and Postmaster General New in the third.

After the greeting at the monument grounds Secretary of State Kellogg, who, like the President, wore a high hat and a black cutaway coat, and Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, who made a rational surrender to Washington's June temperature by wearing a gray linen suit and a straw hat, vanished from the pageantry.

The President and his wife then remained the most animated figures in it. Lindbergh and his mother were the figures the people were most anxious to see but they were so sedate that the presidential couple remained the life of the party.

President Seems Elated.

None of these—either White House attachés or newspaper correspondents—who daily have observed Mr. Coolidge since he became President four years ago, can recall a day when he seemed so elated as he has seemed today.

Everything—the bombardment of daylight fireworks after Lindbergh's speech, the clouds of planes, manned by the aristocracy of aviation, which swept the June sky, the flight of 48 carrier pigeons, one for each state of the Union, released from beneath the speaker's stand just before Lindbergh spoke—interested and delighted the President and nraptured his wife.

Lithe and laughing, swaying in unison with the strains of the army band as it hurtled through "The Stars and Stripes Forever," Mrs. Coolidge clapped her hands rapturously when Lindbergh mounted the platform in the midst of the music.

Homecoming Is Homelike.

Thus the homecoming of the hero became as homelike as the Coolidges themselves. It was not a ceremonial; it was a handclasp and a smile. It was homecoming in all the word implies of intimacy and simplicity.

Even when the President reached the ceremonious closing word of his speech—"as President of the United States I bestow the Distinguished Flying Cross, as a symbol of appreciation for what he is and for what he has don, upon Col. Charles A. Lindbergh."—even then the President's tone was not formal but fond, and the slow, solicitous precision, followed by a brief affectionate pat, with which he pinned the cross on the left lapel of the flyer's dark blue—and rather wrinkled—mack

2,000 Home Folk from Minnesota Led by Kellogg Pay Homage to Lindbergh

BY GENEVIEVE FORBES HERRICK.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C. June 11.—[Special.]—While a score of stout, middle aged women, balancing atop their chairs in the Willard hotel ballroom tonight murmured, "The dear boy, he just looks as if he needed a lot of mothering," the young man they were discussing, quite able to take care of himself, stood out before them at the Minnesota Society reception and explained that established trans-oceanic aviation still is a good ten years away.

Boisterously and blithely these 2,000 hosts welcomed Col. Charles A. Lindbergh as a "fellow Minnesotan."

By his side sat Secretary of State Frank B. Kellogg, who introduced him to the crowd as "one of Minnesota's sons who has written a memorable page in the world's history."

One seat removed from him sat Lindbergh's mother, a little tired it seemed, and a little anxious lest her son be tired. She sat forward on the edge of her chair, when her tall son, looking ever taller in his evening clothes, started to speak. But when Lindbergh went along, evenly, carefully, something like a schoolboy who's got his speech well in hand, she relaxed and slipped back into her chair.

"Having spent so many years in Minnesota," he began, "it certainly gives me great pleasure to be able to be with so many people from that home country tonight. In the early days of my flying I covered many miles in Minnesota and I hope soon to do so again."

And, of course, they cheered and shouted. And a heavy, matronly looking woman cooed, "Oh, isn't he just too precious?"

But the speaker couldn't hear her, so he went on, seriously, "While trans-Atlantic flying is the center of public interest I would like to say a few words on it.

"Many people believe that communication by air is now so well established that within the next few months there will be a regular service between Europe and the United States.

"Any such statements to that effect will do nothing more nor less than retard the progress of aviation.

"It will not come in a month or two months, nor a year nor two years. Five or ten years of careful research will be needed before flying regularly between the new world and the old world will take place. It is of supreme importance to base trans-oceanic flight on a sound foundation; any other procedure is sure to defeat the purpose. The advance may be slow but it is inevitable."

Then everybody began to applaud.

As he concluded his speech, he had crinkled up his nose and smiled.

The band played "Hot Time in the Old Town," and the line formed at the right. The boys from Little Falls, Minn., were the first to greet the Lindbergs, who stood between Miss Bede Johnson, president of the Minnesota society, and Secretary Kellogg. They shook hands with a tall, tired young man who smiled a direct smile at every person who passed before him.

coat, was something paternal and beautiful to see.

Those who today have seen and talked with Lindbergh for the first time since fame enveloped him find him unchanged. Among them were Harry H. Knight and Harold M. Bixby of St. Louis, financial promoters of his New York to Paris flight. After his visit with Lindbergh at the temporary White House, Mr. Knight said, "He's just the same as ever! He's one thousand per cent! Always has his feet on the ground!"

Details of Lindbergh's home coming to St. Louis were submitted to him and decisions were left to him, "because," as Mr. Bixby put it, "his good judgment is always with him."

Six times during the afternoon the throngs lingering around the Patterson mansion peremptorily demanded Lindbergh's appearance. Six times the presidential chief usher, Isaac Hoover, led the flyer either to the doorway or out on to the balcony saying, "Raise your hand and wave it."

Chat with Mother at Last.

Obediently, Lindbergh raised and waved and then withdrawing would wag his head and pull the lobe of his right ear in a manner eloquent of skepticism as to what all this hullabalioo of adulation is about.

At his fourth appearance the throng set up a shout of "Mother" and then the son escorted Mother to the balcony. But it was not until 5:30 o'clock that Charles had a real visit with his mother. They chatted for half an hour in her bedroom, and then he was shooed away to dress.

Gifts arrived at the house all the afternoon, among them a cake that was as instructive as a Smithsonian relief map, for it showed two continents and a candied Paris and a frosted Atlantic, and it bore aloft a sugar airplane. There were bouquets—one of them from patient postal employés who are working day and night to clear away Lindbergh's mail of half a million letters, and there was a silver casket from a Washington jeweler.

Everything Is Lindbergh.

There were Lindbergh plaques and Lindbergh medals and Lindbergh bracelets and Lindbergh portraits and Lindbergh special editions of newspapers and Lindbergh scrolls, one of which—presented by the National Press club of Washington—contained this fine sentence composed by the veteran journalist, Charles Michelson, brother of the illustrious Michelson of the University of Chicago.

"When the tempests blew you rose above them to the calm; when the clouds beset you you found a path between them and the waves that snatched to bring you down."

And Charles Lindbergh looked at the cakes and the flowers and the caskets and the scrolls on the table in the Coolidges' front hall, and wagged his head and meditatively pulled the lobe of his right ear.

COOLIDGE'S ADDRESS

President Coolidge, in his remarks in presenting the medal to Col. Lindbergh said:

"It was in America that the modern art of flying heavier than air machines was first developed. As the experiments became successful, the airplane was devoted to practical purposes. It has been adapted to commerce in the transportation of passengers and mail and used for national defense by our land and sea forces.

"Beginning with a limited flying radius, its length has been gradually extended. We have made many flying records. Our army flyers have circumnavigated the globe. One of our navy men started from California and flew far enough to have reached Hawaii, but being off his course landed in the water. Another officer of the navy has flown to the North Pole. Our own country has been traversed from shore to shore in a single flight.

Mentions Nungesser, Coli.

"It had been apparent for some time that the next great feat in the air would be a continuous flight from the mainland of America to the mainland of Europe. Two courageous Frenchmen made the reverse attempt and passed to a fate that is as yet unknown. Others were speeding their preparations to make the trial, but it remained for an unknown youth to tempt the elements and win. It is the same story of valor and victory by a son of the people that shines through every page of American history.

"Twenty-five years ago there was born in Detroit a boy, representing the best traditions of this country, of a stock known for its deeds of adventure and exploration. His father, moved with a desire for public service, was a member of congress for several terms.

"His mother, who dowered her son with her own modesty and charm, is with us today. Engaged in the vital profession of school teaching, she has permitted neither money nor fame to interfere with her fidelity to her duties.

"Too young to have enlisted in the world war, her son became a student at one of the big state universities. His interest in aviation led him to an army aviation school; and in 1925 he was graduated as an airplane pilot.

"In November, 1926, he had reached the rank of captain in the officers' reserve corps. Making his home in St. Louis, he had joined the 110th observation squadron of the Missouri National Guard.

Reports of Superiors.

"Some of his qualities noted by the army officers who examined him for promotion, as shown by reports in the files of the militia bureau of the war department, are as follows:

"'Intelligent,' 'industrious,' 'energetic,' 'dependable,' 'purposeful,' 'alert,' 'quick of reaction,' 'serious,' 'deliberate,' 'stable,' 'efficient' 'frank,' 'modest,' 'congenial,' 'a man of good moral habits and regular in all his business transactions.' One of the officers expressed his belief that the young man 'would successfully complete everything he undertakes.' This reads like a prophecy.

"Later he became connected with the United States mail service, where he exhibited marked ability, and from which he is now on leave of absence.

"On a morning just three weeks ago yesterday, this wholesome, earnest, fearless, courageous product of America rose into the air from Long Island in a monoplane christened 'The Spirit of St. Louis,' in honor of his home and that of his supporters.

"It was no haphazard adventure. After months of most careful preparation, supported by a valiant character, driven by an unconquerable will and inspired by the imagination and the spirit of his Viking ancestors, this reserve officer set wing across the dangerous stretches of the North Atlantic.

He Lands in Paris.

"He was alone. His destination was Paris. Thirty-three hours and thirty minutes later, in the evening of the second days, he landed at his destination on the French flying field at Le Bourget. He had traveled over 3,600 miles and established a new and remarkable record. The execution of his project was a perfect exhibition of art.

"This country will always remember the way in which he was received by the people of France, by the president and by their government. It was the more remarkable because they were mourning the disappearance of their intrepid countrymen, who had tried to span the Atlantic on a western flight.

"Our messenger of peace and good will had broken down another barrier of time and space and brought two great peoples into closer communion. In less than a day and a half he had crossed the ocean over which Columbus had traveled for 69 days, and the Pilgrim fathers, for 66 days, on their way to the new world.

French Show Good Will.

"But, above all, in showering applause and honors upon this genial, modest American youth, with the naturalness, the simplicity, and the poise of true greatness, France had the opportunity to show clearly her good will for America and our people."

"With like acclaim and evidences of cordial friendship our ambassador without portfolio was received by the rulers, the governments and the peoples of England and Belgium. From other nations came hearty messages of admiration for him and for his country. For these manifold evidences of friendship, we are profoundly grateful.

"The absence of self-acclaim, the refusal to become commercialized, which has marked the conduct of this sincere and genuine exemplar of fine and noble virtues, has endeared him to every one. He has returned unspoiled.

"Particularly has it been delightful to have him refer to his airplane as somehow possessing a personality and being equally entitled to credit with himself, for we are proud that in every particular this silent partner represented American genius and industry. I am told that more than a hundred separate companies furnished materials, parts, or service in its construction.

Bestows Flying Cross.

"And now, my fellow citizens, this young man has returned. He is here. He has brought his unsullied fame home. It is our great privilege to welcome back to his native land, on behalf of his own people, who have a deep affection for him and have been thrilled by his splendid achievement, a colonel of the United States officers' reserve corps, an illustrious citizen of our republic, a conqueror of the air and strengthener of the ties which bind us to our sister nations across the sea, and, as President of the United States, I bestow the Distinguished Flying Cross, as a symbol of appreciation for what he is and what he has done, upon Col. Charles A. Lindbergh."

TRANSATLANTIC AIRPLANE MAIL CONTRACTS LET

PARIS, June 11.—(AP)—The first business deal looking toward regular trans-Atlantic air service was announced here today, at the very time Charles A. Lindbergh, the prophet of practical overseas air navigation, was arriving home to receive the homage of his countrymen.

A cablegram to the Latecoere French Air line this afternoon confirmed the ratification by the president of Argentina of a contract by which the French company agrees to reduce from 21 to 9½ days the delivery of mail between France and Argentina, first by a combined air and water route and eventually by the air route exclusively.

Orders were at once placed to install aerodomes on the Cape Verde archipelago, off the coast of Africa, on the island of Fernando Do Noronha, off the coast of South America and at Pernambuco.

Of the 7,500 miles from France to Buenos Aires, all but 1,500 will be covered by air.

It is hoped that before the end of another year, planes will carry the mail the entire distance.

Home Town Sends 10 Lbs. of Butter to Hero by Plane

Washington, D. C., June 11.—(AP)—Col. Lindbergh tonight received a gift, rushed 1,840 miles by airplane, from his old home town of Little Falls, Minn. It was ten pounds of butter, sent by the town's cooperative creamery. The plane, which negotiated the trip in 12 hours and 40 minutes flying time, was piloted by J. C. Miller, an old friend of Lindbergh.

NEW YORK RIOT OF COLOR FOR LINDY'S COMING

City and State Both Will Honor Him.

New York, June 11.—[Special.]—A mighty welcome awaits Col. Charles A. Lindbergh when he arrives Monday. New York, gorgeous in bunting and seething with enthusiasm, will give the trans-oceanic flyer the greatest reception ever accorded to an individual and will keep it up until he departs on Friday.

The last wrinkles in the official program of the city were smoothed out tonight, and the scope of that program and the spirit manifest in the streets were in themselves indicative that the metropolis, a veteran in greeting, would outdo itself.

Will Use Army Plane.

The flying colonel, upon arrival in Washington today, confirmed his approval of all plans. He will guide an amphibian plane, lent by the war department, to rest in the Narrows off Quarantine at 10 a. m., or 10:30 a. m. His mother, Mrs. Evangeline Lindbergh, will join him, probably at the city hall. The time of Mrs. Lindbergh's arrival here on Monday was still unsettled tonight. Lindbergh will leave Bolling field, Washington, at 8 a. m. eastern daylight time Monday.

The drop of the flyer's plane to the surface of the Narrows will be the signal for 200 airplanes, of all sizes and types, to whizz into the air. As he is transferred from the cockpit of the plane to the city boat, Macom, for the trip to the Battery, the planes will soar above, and when the Macom moves toward Manhattan the aerial paraders will circle the island.

The Macom, dressed in flags from stem to stern, will steam through a lane of 250 vessels. The marine guard of honor will extend from Quarantine to within a short distance of the Battery sea wall, and while the guns at Governors island boom in salute the ships will loose their whistles in a bedlam of noise.

To Receive City's Medal.

After a brief reception at the pier 10,000 soldiers will move up through the canyon of lower Broadway and to the city hall. There a gold medal of the city of New York will be bestowed by Mayor James J. Walker and Col. Lindbergh will receive freedom of the city and an illuminated scroll. It is expected that he will make a brief response.

After the ceremonies at this point he will continue with the parade to the Eternal Light in Madison square, where he will place a wreath. After this he will follow the parade to the mall in Central park, there to receive the welcome and the honors of the state from the hands of Governor Smith.

Guests of Mackay.

Col. Lindbergh and his mother, it was announced today, will be the guests of Clarence H. Mackay at a reception to be given on Monday night at Mr. Mackay's home, Harbor hill, Roslyn, L. I. Mayor Walker and other persons prominent in New York's financial, political and social activities will be present.

Mr. Mackay said today: "The mayor's committee of welcome, wishing to afford Col. Lindbergh the opportunity of resting in the country after his arduous day in New York, has done me the honor of suggesting that Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh come to Harbor hill and spend Monday night there. I naturally feel much honored and I am glad to be able to be of service to the mayor's committee on this occasion."

Thousands Greet Ocean Flyer in His Triumphal Parade

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., June 11.—[Special.]—The national capital has seen many parades, some of the joyous, some of them solemn, but it never before has seen the like of the one today.

It has had the review of the grand army at the close of the civil war; the march of the inaugurations, the mournful cortege of those who honored the unknown dead; it has seen tremendous crowds gathered to greet new presidents; it has seen the colorful ranks of the preparedness parade; it has heard the martial music and the steady tramp of soldiers.

Thousands Wait to Honor Him.

But today it saw throngs marching as hundreds of thousands watched to do honor to a youth, unknown a few weeks ago. It was the joyful welcome of the nation's capital to the youthful flyer who had conquered the Atlantic—Charles Lindbergh.

Past thousands and thousands of shouting, whistling, and screaming people, Lindy's triumphal march down historic Pennsylvania avenue to receive President Coolidge's commendation for his achievement was a spectacle never to be forgotten, and one which for sheer enthusiasm surpassed anything witnessed here in a generation or two.

As the big open car bearing Lindy, his mother and John Hays Hammond, the chairman of the citizen's reception committee, swung out of the capital grounds into the avenue thousands of voices roared a welcome that was taken up all the way down the avenue until it literally was deafening with the blowing of automobile horns and sirens before the procession even got under way.

Heat Settles Like Blanket.

Hours before Lindy's cruiser had even entered the Anacostia river on the last lap of its journey to the navy yard, Pennsylvania avenue was jammed with humanity, fighting for places of vantage and seemingly careless of the terrific heat which settled down like a blanket early this morning.

Under the blazing sun, dozens of women and many men collapsed and were carried through the crowds into nearby stores, where they were quickly revived in most cases, and soon were struggling desperately to regain the places they had lost. From peace monument at the foot of the avenue half way to the treasury building the crowd was at least two or three and in many places five or six deep.

Steel Cables Hold Back Crowd.

Steel cables had been stretched on both sides of the avenue throughout its length and nearer the treasury the sidewalks were jammed with a sweltering crush from curbs to building lines.

Merchants along the avenue reaped a harvest by renting window space, as did all the hotels along the line of march, and boxes, barrels, crates or anything that would serve as a seat or a bench on which to stand commanded premiums.

Whole families had come early to participate in the historic welcome to Lindy and thousands of school children added to the crowds which bement departments and stores released many thousands more into the street. came a mob at noon when the governBut it was an orderly mob and the metropolitan police, schooled in the handling of other great crowds, during inaugural processions and similar occasions had little trouble with the good natured crowds who milled back and forth in the sun waiting for Lindy to appear. Once or twice, the thousands threatened to surge over the steel cables but they did not get far before being pushed back and instead of falling into line behind the parade, they marched along the sidewalks, converging on the monument grounds where another 100,000 had been gathered since early morning.

Dressed in carnival array, Pennsylvania avenue was a lane of flags and bunting, capped by the largest perfect American flag in the world which was hung on a wire from the Postoffice Department building to a building across the street. In every window were pictures of Lindbergh, the Spirit of St. Louis and banners of greeting and welcome to the intrepid flyer.

Follows Military Escorts.

As an extra precaution against the possibility that overenthusiasm might lead some of the great crowds to storm Lindy's car, Brig. Gen. S. D. Rockenbach, commander of the military district of Washington and grand marshal of the occasion, reversed the ordinary procedure, and Lindy, instead of leading the procession, followed his military escorts.

Thus, it was planned, if the crowds should break the police lines at the curb, more than 2,000 soldiers would be turned about instantly to form a human wall around Lindbergh's car, which was surrounded throughout the march by the "President's Own," a crack troop of cavalry from Fort Myer, Va.

Gen. Rockenbach with his aids rode immediately behind the metropolitan police escort and then came the army band followed by the Third battalion of the Twelfth infantry. In order came the Thirteenth engineers regiment, the Third cavalry band, the Sixteenth field artillery, the Second squadron of the Third cavalry, the marine band, a battalion of marines, the navy band, a detachment of blue jackets and the District of Columbia national guard.

Cabinet Members in Procession.

Following Lindy's car came Secretary of the Navy Wilbur, Secretary of War Davis, and Postmaster General New, and in another car the commissions of the District of Columbia. Then came the cars bearing Senators Copeland, Curtis, Hale, Harrison, Hawes, Robinson of Arkansas, Reed of Missouri, Schall, Shipstead, and Swanson.

In other cars were Representative Fred A. Britten and members of the committee named by Speaker Longworth to represent the house in welcoming Lindbergh, and then a number of cars with members of the various official and citizens' committee. Three screened mail trucks, carrying more than 500,000 air mail letters of congratulations to Lindy from all over the country, brought up the rear.

ONLY GIRL THAT GOT OPPORTUNITY TO KISS LINDBERGH DECLINES

Washington, D. C., June 11.—[Special.]—While hundreds of women were shouting staccato ecstacies over Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, the only girl who got a chance to kiss him declined.

The little girl, for she is only 5 years old, is Margaret Seal, the aviator's second cousin. Her father, Earl Lindbergh Seal, whose mother was a sister to the late Mr. Lindbergh Sr., took her, her brother, Earl, 9, and their mother, to the navy yard to meet "Cousin Charlie." They were among the first to shake the flyer's hand.

"And this," said Mr. Seal, "is Margaret. You've never seen her. Margaret, this is your cousin, Charles."

Margaret curtsied and Lindbergh stooped down to kiss her. But she was shy and ran behind her mother's skirts.

"Young lady," said Mr. Seal, as he piloted her through the crowd, "you don't know what you missed. A lot of girls would have traded places with you."

55,000 IN U. S. WIRE LINDBERGH CONGRATULATION

Telegrams Are Delivered at White House.

Washington, D. C., June 11—[Special.]—Telegraphic congratulations from more than 55,000 persons throughout the United States and Canada were delivered to Col. Charles A. Lindbergh today by the Western Union Telegraph company, according to officials here.

When the U. S. S. Memphis arrived at the navy yard shortly before noon the telegrams were in a huge Western Union bus nearby in charge of 100 picked messengers. When it was decided that the messages should be delivered at the White House, one fell in line of parade there and with the U. S. air mail truck continued with the Lindbergh party up Pennsylvania avenue to the Washington monument.

Actual delivery of the congratulatory messages was accomplished at the White House this afternoon. Of the messages delivered was one of 17,700 signatures from Missouri. This message, which had been received over special direct wire in continuous rolls of paper, was 1,500 feet in length.

Missouri Guard Officers to Greet Lindy in New York

Jefferson City, Mo., June 11—Robert Otto, colonel on the governor's staff of Gov. Sam A. Baker, and Gen. A. V. Adams, left at noon today for New York to offer Missouri's welcome to Col. Charles Lindbergh, trans-Atlantic aviator of the Missouri National Guard. At St. Louis they will be joined by Brig. Gen. Walter A. Raupp, of Pierce City, Mo., commander of the National Guard.

20,000 FEET UP IN FOG, CHAMBERLIN HUNTS FOR GOAL

Trans-Ocean Flyers Lost in Sky for Hours.

BERLIN, June 11.—In this, our fourth article, we will tell of the last lap of our trans-oceanic flight—the trip over Europe.

As we flew through the second night of our journey over England and eastward, the fog reached almost down to the ground and we had to buck a northwest wind which forced us out of our course. The wind had been pretty strong during the afternoon and before we sighted land, but it got much stronger during the night—in fact we finally were flying through a continuous strom, the wind shifting from northwest to the south as the night wore on.

The last place we saw before the fog and darkness shrouded everything from our eyes waas Plymouth in the south of England, which we spied through a little hole in the fog while we were flying over the English channel. After that, though, the fog closed in solidly on all sides, and to make matters worse it kept getting higher all the time.

Go 20,000 Feet or Higher.

We had intended to bear south across the channel to Paris and then northeast again to Berlin. We had about 65 gallons of gasoline left which we calculated would be more than enough to carry us through the night until we landed after daybreak Monday at Berlin. Our plan was to cruise around over France and Germany during the night, just killing time and wait for the first streaks of daylight before attempting to land as we did not relish at all the idea of coming down through the fog in absolute darkness without knowing whether the fog reached all the way to the ground.

We had reached an altitude of 20,000 feet or higher and some of the clouds around us appeared to reach up as high as 25,000 feet. The indicator of our altimeter recorded only up to 20,000 feet and our thermometer showed 18 degrees above zero.

Levine Takes the Stick.

Chamberlain was so exhausted from working the plane several hours without intermission at this high altitude that he had to turn it over to Lavine, although the latter had had practically no night flying experience, but he managed to get away with it. From a height of 20,000 feet or thereabouts we dropped down until we were something like a mere 300 feet above the ground.

We found ourselves flying just over the tops of the factory chimneys of some German town which we could not identify at that moment. [We learned afterward it was Dortmund]. By this time the wind was blowing a regular gale and rain was falling steadily. Chamberlin thought we were over Essen on account of all the steel mills we saw down below, while Levine thought the place was the port of Bremerhaven.

See Flash of Rockets.

Though we circled around several factories none of them helped us to locate ourselves and we were puzzled what to do until suddenly we heard a noise and saw a flash of rockets in the distance.

"Maybe they are signaling for us to come down," said Levine, "and we had better do it, because they might start shooting with anti-aircraft guns."

So we dropped down to investigate and found ourselves over the flying field at Dortmund, from which rockets had been send up in the hope of attracting our attention, as Dortmund, like the rest of Germany, knew we were somewhere in the air over Europe. We flew very low over the field and shouted "Berlin!" as loudly as we could. The soldiers down below all pointed eastward, so we headed our plane that way.

Watch Gasoline Diminish.

By this time we had only ten or twelve gallons of gasoline left, for we had wasted a lot climbing and circling while trying to dodge the storm.

Around Dortmund the fog had lifted somewhat, so it was fairly clear up to a few hundred feet above the ground, although there was still a drizzling rain.

All the while the gasoline situation was getting more and more serious. On our last reserve tank there was a sight glass and we both sat watching its gauge drop lower and lower until it became quite clear that we had no chance of getting to Berlin before replenishing our supply.

We debated whether to pick a good field and land while we still had a bit of gasoline left or to go on flying until the last drop was gone. Chamberlin wanted to land near some large town before the gas gave out entirely so that he might use his engine in landing, whereas Levine was for continuing until there was no more gasoline and the motor stopped.

This latter course was adopted. We made a few more miles and finally landed with a dead motor near a village in the vicinity of Eisleben. It was a pretty good landing; at least, we did not break anything on the plane.

For some time nobody came up to us, because in Germany people don't seem to live on farms, but in villages, and in this case they had to reach us from various villages some distance away. It was 5:55 Monday morning, June 6, by local time—12:55 a. m. by New York daylight saving time. We both got out of the machine. Chamberlin could scarcely stand. He had to keep moving in order to preserve his balance. Levine jumped around as if he were skipping a rope, to get the kinks out of his legs.

Woman Frightened; Runs Away.

Soon several people came running up. A woman spoke to us excitedly in German, and when we answered in English she got frightened and ran away—perhaps her fright was because of our appearance. Levine was wearing a hood over his head something like a Ku Klux Klan hood (though it was black), and both us were so dirty that maybe she thought we were a couple of devils from hell.

We asked for gasoline. After waiting for a couple of hours we obtained about 30 gallons of benzol from one of the villages nearby—it wasn't what we wanted, but it was good enough. The man who fetched it had no funnel, so we borrowed a coffee pot and poured it into that from the cans and then into our tank.

Like the Germans who tried to help us we two couldn't agree as to the right direction, so first Chamberlin flew the plane for a while one way and then Levine took hold and flew it another way. Finally, while we were arguing, our benzol ran out completely and we saw we must land again.

Farm Wife Demands Damages.

The first person to reach us was a woman who was in a great state of excitement about who was to pay for the damage to the field. She pointed to the rut which we had made when the nose of the plane dug itself into the mud, and kept wringing her hands and shouting "Bezahlen," which means "Pay, pay."

By this time there was a little crowd around us. They helped us to bring the tail of the machine down and to get the propeller out of the mud. We found that we were right outside the village of Klinge, near Kottbus, and more than seventy miles southeast of our goal.

Then the mayor of Kottbus came rushing up to welcome us with outstretched hands, and we were escorted in triumph to Kottbus. And then came the big reception there and the tremendous welcome in Berlin, and life for us since then has been just one round of festivities after another.

Chamberlin's Motor Jammed; Delays Hops Over Europe

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.

[Copyright: 1927: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BERLIN, June 11.—Clarence Chamberlin and Charles A. Levine's tour of the capitals of Europe has been postponed for a few days.

The valve mechanism of the motor of their airplane Columbia is jammed, and the repairing is slow. Special wrenches needed were left in the United States owing to their weight, and the German mechanicians have to dismantle the motor to get at the part jammed.

Through their official engagements the flyers have been prevented from examining the plane earlier. They will take advantage of the delay to rest in Baden Baden. They will travel there in a Lufthansa plane tomorrow, if the weather improves.

No final date for the European tour will be set until the motor is repaired.

Hints He Will Fly Back.

"We will sail home under the American flag," Chamberlin confided to THE TRIBUNE correspondent today. "It will either be on the United States lines or our own airplane, and I am pretty sure it will be our own vessel."

The flyers spent part of today at the kaiser's former palace in Potsdam where they were presented with a gold honor pin by the German Lufthansa, an aviation company.

They found time to pose for the movies and to cable Col. Lindbergh:

"Sincerely regret our inability to share with the other Americans in your welcome. Please accept this greeting as a manifestation of our great personal esteem and admiration for you."

Seen Regular Ocean Flying in Year.

BERLIN, June 11.—(AP)—Regular trans-Atlantic aerial freight service connecting America with all continental cities will, in the opinion of Charles A. Levine, be in operation within a year.

Levine announced tonight, after a talk with officials of the German Aerial league, that he would return to Berlin after his trips to Warsaw and other places, and perfect plans.

His plans now provide for crossing the Atlantic in two hops, from New York to Iceland and the continent in the summer, and from New York to the Azores and the continent in the winter, with a similar arrangement on the east to west flights. The first European terminals have not yet been selected.

Mr. Levine proposes using multimotored machines with a cruising rangs of 2,500 miles and capacity for 2,000 pounds "pay load." These planes, by relays, should cover the distance across in forty hours.

"We might use Zeppelins," he added.

He suggested that the operating company be international in scope with an international directorate.

"When we get going," he said, "we will require a capital of $10,0000,000 but an initial capital of $2,000,000 will start it. I am ready to invest."

MOTHER'S KISS FINAL SEAL ON HERO'S ACCLAIM

Mrs. Lindbergh Welcomes Son on Memphis.

plank from the Memphis, across the Anacosta river onto United States soil walked Charles A. Lindbergh. At his elbow rather at the side, in order that the homecoming flyer might lead, walked Vice Admiral Burrage. Directly in back of them came Mrs. Lindbergh, on the arm of Secretary Wilbur. The last couple was Secretaries Davis and New.

"Lindbergh, Good bless you," somebody else screamed.

"Look here, this way, no, this way," importuned the photographers.

But mostly the crowd just looked and waved their hands, and many brushed tears from their eyes.

Almost Shy in Hour of Glory.

It was Lindbergh's hour but he did just as he was told. He moved along rather slowly, unselfconscious, but almost shy. When they told him to look to the right, he did it; when they yelled to move to the left, he did it. The crowds jammed up close now, as they encircled Lindbergh and Commander Byrd and Rear Admiral Moffet. For the crowd wanted a closer and still closer view of the young man whose silhouette they had been watching for half an hour.

They had spied him first when the Memphis rounded the bend at Hunters point and veered, straight and smooth, toward the Mayflower.

"That's him, that's him, there on the bridge; sure it is," the volunteer lookouts had announced.

As the ship had neared the dock a White House motor car appeared from somewhere. Lieut. Francis Dalling, junior aid to the President, and John Hays Hammond, in charge of the welcoming ceremonies, got out.

Seeks Eyes of Her Son.

In the tonneau they left a woman, in a printed chiffon gown, with a large water lily and a small bunch of iris in her hands. She stood up on the seat, leaned against the back of the car and looked out and up until she got the blue eyes of the boy on the bridge.

Lindbergh raised his right hand in salute and kept it that way for a long time. Then the boy dropped his hand, the woman bent her head.

It wasn't many moments, but they were nervous with activity, until the gangplank was lowered and as they came down the gangplank the flyer was almost hoisted through the air toward the automobile. Mrs. Lindbergh got in first. In a moment her son was sitting at her left side.

"Stand up," the crowd urged him. He didn't hear.

Again the spectators cried, directing their plea this time to Mrs. Lindbergh.

"Aw, tell him to stand up," the crowd cried.

"Honey," and her voice was low and even. "They want you to stand up."

Col. Lindbergh stood up and waved again to the crowds that claimed him as their hero. But the while he waved, Mrs. Lindbergh pressed her hand against his knee with just the proprietorship that claimed him as her son.

30,000,000 LISTEN ON RADIO TO CHEERS GREETING LINDBERGH

New York, June 11.—[Special.]—Thirty million persons listened to the shouts of Washington acclaiming Lindbergh today. The cheers that came over the radio as the hero arrived at the reviewing stand, where President Coolidge was waiting to greet him, woke a thrilling echo in the heart of every listener.

Sets had been more carefully prepared for the occasion than for any previous event, and when the description of the announcers who were watching the procession and relaying their impressions to the radio audience were interrupted by that giant shout, every listener-in felt he was right there, joining in the tumult.

GREENEBAUM TO GIVE CITY FIRST AVIATION BEACON

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, June 11.—A thorough inspection of Croydon airdrome was made last night by Walter J. Greenebaum, vice president of the Bank of America, who is seeking ideas for his plan to erect the first aviation beacon light in America on top of the Roanoke building at Madison and La Salle streets, Chicago.

"Croydon is the finest landing field I have seen," Mr. Greenebaum told THE TRIBUNE correspondent.

"In Chicago we will copy your neon red light to penetrate fogs and smoke. The entire skeleton of the new tower, rising 500 feet above street level, will be outlined with this special light. We hope to have the light in operation by next September."

Mr. Greenebaum will leave tomorrow to inspect Le Bourget field, near Paris. He plans to report to the department of commerce at Washington, D. C., and return to Chicago this month.

Civil War Veteran, 79, Flies to Capital to Greet Lindy

Philadelphia, Pa., June 11.—(AP)—With a jaunty wave to his friends, Capt. Henry M. Richards, 79, of Lebanon, Pa., veteran of the civil and Spanish-American wars, today flew to Washington to greet Col. Charles A. Lindbergh in the name of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

LINDY AND CAL OUGHT TO GET ALONG FINE, OLD SALT SAYS; BOTH QUIET

Washington, D. C., June 11.—[Special.]—"Well, now you know," mused Pilot Will Luckett this afternoon, "this Lindbergh boy and President Coolidge ought to get along mighty well over at the White House. They're both awful quiet."

Luckett, or Pilot Bill, as everybody calls him, has sailed the seas for more years than he remembers. This time he brought the U. S. S. Memphis into port, and he had Col. Lindbergh standing next him.

As the boat made her way through the river the pilot looked up at the airplanes, down at the cruisers, and over at the crowds, then he turned to the youth at his side and said:

"Well now, I guess you're the first private citizen they ever did this for."

"And what did Lindbergh say?" Luckett was asked.

"Didn't I just tell you, he doesn't say much ever. He just kinda nodded his head."

Huge Sign, 344 Feet Up, to Welcome Lindy to Gotham

New York, June 11.—(AP)—A gigantic electric sign 344 feet above the sidewalk, said to be the highest sign in the world, will flash a welcome to Col. Charles A. Lindbergh all next week from the top of the Manufacturers' Trust company building at Columbus circle on the southwestern edge of Central park.

ADDRESS C B 101, TRIBUNE

LINDBERGH GLAD HE DIDN'T STAY LONGER ABROAD

Writes Impressions of His Homecoming.

By COL. CHARLES A. LINDBERGH

[Copyright: 1927: By the New York Times and The Chicago Tribune.]

Washington, D. C., June 11.—[Special.]—The Washington reception was wonderful. It was dignified, but it certainly made me feel right at home and I'm genuinely glad to be back. I said in Europe that I would like to stay a little longer and fly to various countries and study aviation, but now that I have reached home I'm awfully glad I didn't stay any longer.

After all, I am back among my own people. Paris was marvelous and London and Brussels as well, and I would not for the world draw any comparisons. But I will say this, the Washington reception was the best handled of all. The police and troops had perfect control all the time from the moment I stepped ashore at the Washington navy yard until I entered the temporary White House on Du Pont circle.

Will Never Forget Scenes.

I shall never forget, as long as I live, the scene at the monument. Thousands greeted us. It did me good to see all the children; in fact, the children were the first on the job in Washington. Just as I was about to go to sleep on the Memphis at Piney Point last night a large motor boat full of boys and girls succeeded, by some means or other, in locating my cabin.

They surely serenaded me with all the pep they could summon. I enjoyed it until it seemed it was going to keep up all night, so I stuck my head out of the cabin and told them it was the wrong boat. But that did not discourage them. They knew well enough I was on the Memphis. Eventually they departed, singing and cheering.

Pleased to See Old School.

It is eleven years since I was in Washington. It is good to see it again. I recognized a lot of familiar places immediately. I was particularly pleased to pass my old school and the apartment house where I lived as a boy and where I used to look up at the big capitol just across the park.

The reception on the Potomac river was just as wonderful, in many ways, as it was as I drove through the streets of Washington. Of course, one of the greatest thrills I had was meeting the President and Mrs. Coolidge and being able to tell them later, at the temporary White House, the story of my flight and the receptions in Europe.

The air men who came out to welcome the Memphis did some of the prettiest flying I ever saw in my life. It gave me a real thrill to see these flyers doing everything that the greatest flyers in Europe are doing and doing it equally well. Both the army and navy planes were out at 6 o'clock this morning. They came zooming down over the deck and I got up half an hour later to go on deck to see them.

Yearns to Be in Air.

There must have been fifty planes in the air by the time we reached Hain's Point, which sticks out from Potomac park. The guns at the army war college were booming out their salute by this time and we were responding. All along the Potomac the banks were lined with people and I had a busy time waving to all of them.

As I stood on the bridge with Vice Admiral Burrage, commander of the American naval forces in European waters, who returned on the Memphis, and watched all the wonderful aviators I felt exactly like a man who had been fed on bread and water for a week, and then had a banquet set before him. It certainly would have been nice to have been up there with them.

Just as soon as I can, I want to get up there with them. I can hardly wait to start flying again, and am anxious for the time to come when my plane will be unpacked.

Catches Glimpse of Mother.

The gangplank was just about to be put aboard the Memphis when I caught a glimpse of my mother—the first time I had seen her since she left me just before I hopped off from New York three weeks ago. A way was made through the crowd immediately for the car she drove up in, and in a few minutes the gangplank was in place and Admiral Burrage escorted her on board.

My mother and I went into the admiral's cabin, where we were alone for a few minutes. Just afterward, the admiral and his staff came into the cabin where they were presented to my mother. She thought I looked fine and fit; I told her I had a very good trip coming across on the Memphis. Then we parted and I went out to meet Secretary Wilbur, Secretary Davis of the war department, and Postmaster General New, whom I was particularly anxious to see because I am still in the air mail service.

I am going to hop off Monday morning for New York in an amphibian plane. I can't fly my own plane because they want me to come down in New York harbor. I am sorry I cannot fly back to New York in the same plane I crossed the ocean in.

I appreciate the honor of staying at the temporary White House as the guest of the President and Mrs. Coolidge.

Sorry He Missed Buddies.

They told me that some of my old buddies in the air mail service were here today to welcome me. I wish I could have seen them all personally. There are no finer fellows in the world than the air mail pilots and there are no better flyers anywhere. They do their work quietly every day and every night too, and sometimes I wonder if the public knows the wonderful work they are doing.

I was invited to have dinner tonight at the temporary White House with the members of the President's cabinet. It was wonderful to be there. Afterward, I went to the big reception the National Press club gave me at the Washington auditorium. I was pretty tired by the time I got there but the way the people received me made me feel fine again. On the way to the Press club reception I went to the party given by the Minnesota state society and it certainly was good to see people from my home state.

LEADERS OF BIRGER'S GANG INDICTED FOR MURDER

The gunmen who have conducted a reign of terror for months in southern Illinois are shown outside one of their resorts in Williamson county. 1—Art Newman, who testified to the murder of a state highway policeman and his wife and on whose story five were indicted. 2—Charlie Birger, leader of the gang, and 3—Connie Ritter, who were indicted.

LINDBERGH'S PLANS FOR FUTURE AWAIT RETURN TO ST. LOUIS

Washington, D. C., June 11.—(AP)—After a conference today with some of those who co-operated with him in arranging for his trans-Atlantic flight, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh announced he would wait until after his arrival in St. Louis late next week before disclosing any plans for the future.

Three of Lindbergh's backers from St. Louis, Harry H. Knight, Harold M. Bixby and William B. Robertson, were among the first to call upon him at the temporary White House.

"We are hardly able to offer Col. Lindbergh any suggestions because his ideas are always better than ours," said Knight on leaving the mansion.

"It is not possible to come to any decision on Lindbergh's plans until he has arrived at St. Louis and the situation quiets down."

Knight said that Lindbergh expected to carry out his plan of flying from New York to St. Louis.

GUNMAN NAMES BIRGER KILLER OF PRICE AND WIFE

Indict Gang Leader, Four Lieutenants.

Rest, Birger's roadhouse, where Price got out and they all went into the barbecue stand.

Birger in a Rage.

"Price walked in and sat on a table," Newman said, "his back to the door and facing Birger. He was not alarmed. Birger was in a rage.

"With a terrible oath he accused Price of tipping off some of the gang's activities, relating particularly to the robbery of the Pocahontas bank and the burning of the Birger road house when four gangsters were killed.

"Price held up his right hand and said, 'I swear, Charley, I am innocent.'

"Birger again cursed and fired four shots, all striking Price."

By this time the other car had arrived and after Price was shot, Newman says he exclaimed, "My God you're shooting him and his wife knows Price is with us." He says Connie Ritter then spoke up and said, "You needn't worry about the woman; we did away with her and threw her in a mine."

"'All right,' said Birger, 'we'll put him with her.'"

"'We can't,' said one of the men. 'We filled up the place with tin and timbers.'

"'I know another old mine near DuQuoin,' said Birger. 'Throw this man in Newman's car.'

Wounded and bleeding, Price was again placed in the car, pleading for his life. Newman says that at this point he told Birger he would have nothing more to do with the case and that Birger then jumped on the running board of his car with a machine gun and told Newman to drive ahead.

Begs for His Life.

Finally, north of Carbondale, Birger said, "I can kill him, but I can't ride with him." Newman says that Birger became sick and got into the other car. Connie Ritter then got into that car and sat on Price's shoulders. Price, he said was still conscious and begging for his life. Ritter, he says, kicked Price and kept him covered with a gun all the time Birger was in the other car.

Near Duquoin the cars stopped and Birger went to a nearby mine to see if they could throw the body there, but found a watchman, so went on farther north to the field, just inside of Washington county where the body was found on February 5.

Ritter, Blue, Simpson and Simmons took Price from the car and carried him over beyond the weeds that hid his body from the road. Birger followed with a machine gun and opened fire. This accounts for the bullet holes in the body, some of which had been fired downward from the top of his head. The steel jacketed bullets found in the body were the machine gun bullets.

Final Plea for Life.

Newman says that he and Freddie Wooten stayed in the cars and were not near when he gasped his last plea for life. Newman said that Price turned to him in a final plea and said, "I thought you were my friend, Art," and that Newman saw his Masonic ring and said, "I am sorry Lorry, but I've gone as far as I can."

The last thing he heard Price say was, "You'll be sorry for this."

"The man who rode back with us," Newman continued, "told us they took Mrs. Price from her home immediately after we left and drove direct to the old mine and ordered her out.

"He said she did not say a word or at any time ask where they were going. As she stepped on the running board one of the men shot her twice in the back and she screamed and fell on her face. Another then stepped out and shot her twice more in the back as she lay on the ground.

"The four then carried her to the shaft and threw her in. She went down, the men estimated, about 75 feet and hit water. They then threw large pieces of corrugated iron and timbers down on her."

Full credit for the solution of the mystery goes to Chief Stack, who started to work on the case the day after the Prices disappeared.

Knowing that Newman was one of the participants in the murder of Price, but lacking convicting evidence, Chief Stack kept operatives watching Newman and traced him to Long Beach, California, where he was arrested.

With the return of Newman came the arrest of Mrs. Newman at the home of her sister, Miss Catherine Payne, in East St. Louis on Tuesday.

It was, however, the arrest of Mrs. Newman and her confession of the double murder that also brought about the confession of her husband.

Venue Change Denied.

Benton, Ill., June 11.—[Special.]—Judge Charles H. Miller in Circuit court this afternoon denied a petition of Charles Birger, gang leader, for a change of venue from Franklin county. Birger's attorneys argued there is prejudice in this county that would prevent Birger from getting a fair trial.

Defense Attorney R. E. Smith then asked the court to set an early trial date. State's Attorney Roy C. Martin agreed to this.

CHICAGO GOES WILD WITH JOY AS LINDY LANDS

Loop a Bedlam in City's Tribute to Flyer.

A third of a continent away from Washington and the actual presence of America's hero of the century, Col. Charles Lindbergh, Chicago's pride in his feat nevertheless furnished enthusiasm yesterday for a welcoming celebration that reverberated through the loop and was echoed in all parts of the city.

Promptly at noon, when the aviator was scheduled to leave the cruiser Memphis to set foot once more on his native soil, bedlam broke loose in the loop district.

Whistles and Bells Lead Din.

Factory whistles started it with prolonged blasts. Automobile horns took it up, church and school bells chimed in, and river and lake steamers and the city fire boats added to the din.

Flurries and then clouds of paper, streamers and torn bits of newspapers sifted down from the roofs and windows of skyscrapers, until sidewalks and streets were littered as under a drifting snow. New straw skimmers went sailing into the air with whoops of exhilaration from their owners.

A band on a motor bus coursed up and down, playing national airs and concentrating on a composition dedicated to Lindy by George M. Cohan.

Newsie Pays His Tribute.

At State and Madison streets a little newsie, buffeted by the crowds surging past, anchored himself to his stand with one hand, while with the other he extricated from somewhere a large photograph of his idol, manipulating it expertly into place on the top rack. His dirty little fist came up smartly in salute. Then he turned back to the business of peddling his papers.

The carillon at St. Chrysostom's church, 1424 North Dearborn parkway, joined in the tribute to the homecoming hero, as Harold B. Simonds, organist played "The Star Spangled Banner" and other patriotic selections.

The Rev. Robert Van Meigs, pastor of the Immanuel Baptist church, has issued an invitation to Colonel Lindbergh to worship at his church when he comes to Chicago.

Harry E. Rice, Jr., secretary of the Missouri State society, received a telegram yesterday from Mayor William Hale Thompson in Washington, advising him that the invitation of the organization would be conveyed by him personally to Colonel Lindbergh, to accept the hospitality of the members while in Chicago on June 24, 25 and 26.

CHIEF SUSPENDS JOHN STEGE, TWO OTHER CAPTAINS

Police Headliners Under Dever Face Charges.

The ax of Chief of Police Michael Hughes fell suddenly at six o'clock last night on three police captains—John P. Stege, Daniel Murphy and Dennis Carroll—all headliners in the police program of the late Dever administration.

They were summarily suspended pending the filing of charges with the civil service commission. The action was not unexpected in police circles for each of the trio, immediately upon the appointment of Chief Hughes, had been relieved of his command and left to warm a bench in a west side police station.

Stege Former Deputy Chief.

Stege had been deputy chief of detectives; Murphy in command at the Chicago avenue station and Carroll at the Stanton avenue station.

Murphy and Carroll were charged with allowing gambling and vice to go on unmolested in their districts. Stege is to be accused of making false statements on the application he filed when he entered the department.

Hughes says Stege used a fictitious name on the application and stated he had never committed or been charged with a felony, although he had served a sentence in Pontiac reformatory for manslaughter.

But the real reason behind the discharges, it is said, is that the trio were too popular with the old administration to be very popular with the new.

Such at least was said to be the case with Murphy and Carroll. Murphy was known as a great friend of former Mayor Dever. Carroll was sent from the northwest side to the black belt and conducted wholesale raids for the Dever administration there.

All Near Pensions.

All three captains were within a year or two of being eligible for pensions. Were they allowed to go on until their twenty years had been served each would be eligible for at least $1,300 a year, and perhaps as high as $2,000.

Pensions under the old Thompson administration went as high as $1,900. When the Dever administration went in a corporation counsel's opinion cut this to $1,300—"half pay up to $2,600," a survival of that period when captain's pay was only $2,600 a year. It is now about $3,500.

"A policeman," said one old member of the force last night, "looks forward to that pension in the light of money in the bank. For instance, he figures $1,300 a year as 6 per cent of some $22,000; $2,000, as 6 per cent of some $33,000. In other words, drawing a sure pension is like drawing interest on money in the bank."

SUNSHINE CUTS CORN PRICE 15C WITHIN 10 DAYS

A week of good sunshine, June growing weather, changed sentiment in the grain markets. Corn has declined 14⅝c to 15¼c from the high point inside of about ten days. Wheat is off 8c to 9⅝c.

All the big traders, including Arthur Cutten, Tom Howell and several downstate operators who are in the market on a large scale at times, have been sellers of corn for the last few days.

Their profits are said to be large and while some of them are understood to be out on their holdings, others have considerable quantities still on hand which were bought at low prices.

Yesterday's low price was 92½c for July and 97⅛c for September, showing declines of 8c on the former and 6c on the latter from the high point on Friday. The finish was on a rally to 93⅜c for July and 98c for September.

Trading in corn on Friday was the largest on record since the government has kept the returns, sales aggregating 72,053,000 bushels. Saturday's business also was unusually large.

NORTHBROOK PARK IS VOTED.

Citizens of Northbrook yesterday elected to establish the Northbrook park district and voted five commissioners into office. The latter are: Wallace Clore, Clarence Barteime, Herman Meier, E. D. Landwehr, and T. W. Jackson.

17 HURT IN PARIS RIOT AS ROYALIST DEFIES POLICE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, June 11.—Seventeen persons were injured, four seriously, in fighting late tonight outside the office of L'Action Francaise, where Leon Daudet, the militant royalist leader and son of Alphonse Daudet, was barricaded to prevent arrest and beginning his five months' prison sentence.

While M. Daudet, entrenched behind barbed wire defenses, sat writing editorials for tomorrow's issue and the police stood guard, L'Action Francaise followers attacked the police. The gendarmes fought back with billies and made numerous arrests. As the fighting grew hotter, communists joined in. Finally the republican guards were called out.

The cabinet met today but was unable to make up its mind what to do with the belligerent leader who is defying the state to arrest him for libel as a result of his published charge that members of the police force assassinated his son Philippe in 1923.

AUTO TOLL GOES OVER 400 MARK AS 3 MORE DIE

Cook county's automobile death toll since Jan. 1 passed the 400 mark yesterday. In 1926 this total was not reached until the middle of July.

Three deaths were reported, bringing the total to 402. Charles F. Judd, 74, of 4332 Clarendon avenue, was killed when he was struck by a motor bus crowded with passengers at Montrose avenue and Sheridan road. The driver, Roy Noble, was released after witnesses said Judd stepped into the path of the bus.

Mrs. Yetta Wertheimer, 60, of 4034 Grenshaw avenue, died of injuries suffered on June 7, when she was struck by an automobile driven by Mrs. Andrie Bell, 5412 Ardmore avenue.

Peter Gray, 54 years old, 513 South State street, died in St. Luke's hospital of injuries he received when struck by a machine at Michigan boulevard and Ohio street on May 30.

Motorcycle Policeman Paul Schweiger, 27, of Hinsdale, was killed in Du Page county when he collided with an automobile driven by Donald Meyers of Hinsdale.

TWO MEN TIE AND WHIP HOUSEWIFE; MOTIVE MYSTERY

Whipped by two mysterious men who invaded her home, Mrs. Mary Lindner, 10030 Lafayette avenue, last night was in a hysterical condition and attended by physicians.

The attack followed another on upon her husband, Conrad, perpetrated by three men the night before.

Although the Gresham police are working on a theory which points to a dispute over an automobile accident as the origin of the beatings, they express themselves as not entirely satisfied with the theory, and are seeking other clews.

Dispute Over Auto Damage.

Conrad Lindner, workman in an electrotype foundry, told the police that a week ago he was driving home in his automobile when, at Michigan avenue and 111th street, another car cut sharply in front of him, scraping the side of his car. The driver failed to stop, Lindner said, and he gave chase, forcing the other motorist to stop.

Getting out of their cars, the two men argued and Lindner struck the other down. Thereupon the other swore out a warrant for Lindner's arrest, and the latter was fined $5 by Judge Alfar M. Eberhardt.

Lindner told the police that on Friday evening his car was forced to the curb by another with three men in it. They set upon him with jack handle and motor crank, beating him severely, Lindner said.

Attacked in Her Home.

At 10:30 yesterday morning Mrs. Lindner was at her household tasks when suddenly two men appeared, having gained access through the basement. They punched and kicked her, Mrs. Lindner later said, and struck her with a stick. A butcher boy found her tied to a post in the basement and in a hysterical collapse.

PLEDGES BETTER RADIO RESULTS FOR THIS FALL

Greatly improved radio conditions for the fall and winter of 1927 were promised listeners last night by O. H. Caldwell, eastern representative of the federal radio commission. Mr. Caldwell spoke at a banquet in the Palmer house given by E. T. Cunningham, Inc., tube manufacturers, to radio dealers and distributors assembled here for the First Annual Trade show, which opens tomorrow at the Stevens hotel.

"The new allocations go into effect on Wednesday," Mr. Caldwell said, "and for the next sixty days the commission will watch the results closely. Many adjustments probably will have to be made before the new station set up will be really working at its best."

Cosgrave and 3 of Cabinet Win in Free State Election

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

DUBLIN, June 11.—The counting of the vote in the Irish Free State elections on Thursday proceeded slowly today. At 5 o'clock only twenty-eight returns were declared. These showed victories for ten government candidates, four independent, four labor, three national league and seven De Valeraites. Peter Hughes, minister of defense, was defeated in Louth, but Ministers Kevin O'Higgins, Ernest Blythe, James J. Walsh and President William T. Cosgrave were elected.

SEIZE 280 BOTTLES OF BREW.

Two hundred and eighty bottles of home brew, five gallons of alcohol, and four barrels of wine were seized by prohibition agents yesterday in a raid at 4222 Sheridan road. Frank Mocio, 29, was arrested.

AIR-COOLING TRIUMPHS!

COLONEL LINDBERGH RETURNS!

Throughout the Nation

His achievement is acclaimed — his courage and ability praised — his name honored — as Colonel Lindbergh is welcomed home. Justly proud of his great accomplishment, our welcome reflects the admiration and renown he has so justly earned.

One man's courage and ability have written a remarkable page of modern history—written a record of endurance and achievement. His daring has proclaimed to the world that today's spirit of conquest, together with modern engineering, recognizes no limits.

FRANKLIN AUTOMOBILE COMPANY
SYRACUSE, NEW YORK

Throughout the Motor World

One of the major factors in this epoch-making flight is cited in Colonel Lindbergh's comment in the New York Times, "I had what I regard as the best engine."

It was an air-cooled engine—a fact of tremendous significance to every automobile owner.

Franklin's achievement in perfecting air-cooling for the world is thus once again acclaimed. Franklin principles, advanced, tested, basically sound, have given irrefutable proof of their value.

Franklin is proud and justly so, of this achievement of the air-cooled motor. This triumph vindicates Franklin's faith and adherence to a basically sound automotive principle.

Unswerving belief in air-cooling—over a period of 25 years—has been grounded on facts which Lindbergh's flight has so spectacularly demonstrated — that air-cooling is essential to utmost reliability, to greatest simplicity, to scientific weight saving, to attentionless and economical operation.

There are other exclusive Franklin features—just as advanced — just as correct as air-cooling—and to these Franklin adheres with the same faith, courage and sureness.

And again this faith is vindicated by the increase in Franklin's 1927 sales — the greatest rate of increase in the whole fine car group — by the enthusiastic praise of Franklin Owners and by the fact that the Franklin Owner's next car is so generally another Franklin.

Chamberlin's heroic flights—both when making the New York-to-Germany record flight—and when establishing the 51½ hour endurance record — were accomplished with the aid of an air-cooled motor.... Hour after hour—unfalteringly—man and motor kept up the terrific grind—until the goal each time had been attained.

SOVIET TERRORS STIR GERMANS TO URGE BREAK

Many Demand Berlin End Russian Relations.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

[Copyright: 1927: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BERLIN, June 11.—For three hours Georges Chicherin, foreign minister of the Russian soviets, conferred with German officials yesterday in an effort to induce them to sink further funds into Russia, to provide its industry and agriculture not only with machinery, but also with capital to learn how to use it. His efforts were in vain.

In view of the reports of the wholesale slaughtering of anti-Reds issued by the Russians themselves, a big movement has been started in Germany against Russia. Petitions are being circulated in Berlin requesting the government to break off entirely with Russia, as England has done.

Demands Propaganda Stop.

Even Foreign Minister Gustav Stresemann, who is endeavoring to stress Germany's neutrality in the conflict between England and Russia, at yesterday's conference with Foreign Minister Chicherin declared Germany will refuse to give Russia manufactured goods, as well as credit, unless it gives up the "propaganda in Germany and the countries to which it is bound through the Locarno treaty."

Telegrams from Warsaw and the Polish border assert the victims of the Russian reign of terror amount to more than 100. Reports say the peasants of Ukraine and White Russia have been planning an uprising, and the purpose of the new terrorism is to frighten them into obedience of the soviet rule.

Reports France Prepares for War.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

COBLENZ, Germany, June 11.—The newspaper Sachtag asserts the French occupation troops have been reinforced in the Rhineland and are prepared to interfere in case of armed conflict between Russia and Poland and to be protected against a "surprise move by Germany."

Guard Red Envoy in Lithuania.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

KOVNO, Lithuania, June 11.—The Lithuanian police reinforced the guards about the Russian legation here this morning after the details of an anti-Russian plot had been revealed by the secret police.

The Russian official representatives here when interviewed on the new reign of terror in Moscow asserted the executions had been deferred for the last six months in an effort not to displease Great Britain.

"These people were saved for the sake of England, but now that Great Britain has broken off relations with Russia, there was no reason for her to spare Prince Dolgorukov."

Bury Slain Envoy in Red Square.

MOSCOW, June 11.—(AP)—The body of Peter Voikoff, soviet envoy who was assassinated at Warsaw by a young Russian monarchist, was buried this evening at the edge of Red square, near the Kremlin wall. The ceremonies were impressive. A tribune had been erected fronting the Lenin mausoleum and eulogistic speeches were delivered. Strict police regulations were enforced and the attendance was limited to the holders of special cards.

The special train bearing the body from the Polish capital arrived at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon. It carried a representative of the soviet legation in Warsaw, the secretary of Foreign Minister Zaleski of Poland, A. P. Rosengolz, former charge d'affaires in London, and a delegation from the soviet commissariat of foreign affairs which went aboard at the frontier.

Predicts Class War.

Russia's war minister, Clement Voroshiloff, told a meeting of workers today that England had so stirred up feeling against Russia that a class war loomed.

Terming the international situation "acute" and asserting that "no slackening of the hostilities against us can be expected," he added: "There are many who believe we can avert a conflict, but I declare we are nearing the point where class war is inevitable."

STRENGTHEN LEVEES. TO PREVENT FLOOD, IS HOOVER'S PLEA

New Orleans, June 11.—(AP)—The levee system to keep the Mississippi river in check and for the prevention of such devastating floods as just have been suffered needs to be revised and strengthened, Secretary of Commerce Hoover declared in a copyrighted article written for the North American Newspaper alliance.

Not only does the levee system need to be revised, Mr. Hoover said, but "above all, we must have some other safety devices which will relieve the strain on the levee system in periods of superfloods and thereby make them absolutely sure once and for all."

"L" STRIKE VOTE IS AUTHORIZED; PARLEYS GO ON

Employes of the elevated roads at their meeting last night authorized the taking of a strike vote if the occasion arises. Frank E. Lawrence, head of their union, said he had arranged for another conference with Vice President Bernard J. Fallon of the Rapid Transit company next Wednesday and if at that meeting there is any prospect of a wage agreement a strike vote will be unnecessary.

From Mr. Fallon's office came the statement that the wage parleys at present are on a friendly basis. The elevated motormen, conductors, and guards, receive a slightly higher wage than the surface lines men, and in addition have group insurance and sick benefits.

It is the opinion of men on both sides that, even though the surface lines employés have authorized President William Quinlan to call a strike if he deems it advisable, and the elevated employés may do the same thing, there is still little immediate danger of a strike. It was pointed out that both the employers and employés are awaiting the outcome of the five transit bills in the state legislature and that little can be done on either side until the legislature has finished.

HANDS OFF CHINA, CRY OF NEW YORK CROWD TO BRITISH

Stage Demonstration at English Consulate.

New York, June 11.—[Special.]—A demonstration staged by the "hands off China committee," in front of the British consulate here this afternoon by a large crowd of men and women of different nationalities as a protest against England's policy in the far east, resulted in disorder and intervention by the police. The consulate had closed half an hour before the demonstration started.

The trouble began a few minutes after members of radical labor groups, students, and others appeared with banners and started to parade in front of the building occupied by the consulate. On the banners were the inscriptions, "China for the Chinese," "Stop Killing Chinese Students," "Down with British Imperialism," "British Control in China Obtained by Opium War," "Stop Attacks on Soviet Union," and "New and Free China."

Hisses and Catcalls.

Hisses and catcalls from homeward bound office workers and from a number who poked heads out of windows greeted those carrying the banners. Paper clips, rolls of paper, and showers of water were thrown from windows indiscriminately on those taking part, as well as those not participating in the demonstration.

Attempts to deliver speeches brought more missiles from windows. Sergt. I. W. Burbeg appeared in a police automobile, ordered the crowd to disperse, and questioned Julia S. Poyntz, lecturer and writer on labor problems, who was in the midst of a speech denouncing British and American imperialism.

Sergt. Burbeg ordered Miss Poyntz taken to the station house. She told the desk lieutenant the meeting was a peaceable one and she wanted to make a speech. She was released and returned, being greeted on her reappearance with cheers by her followers, catcalls, hisses, paper clips, and more water from office windows.

Speaker Booed and Cheered.

At the suggestion of the police, Miss Poyntz had obtained an American flag. She wrapped this about her and from the steps of the Navigazione Generale Italiana building she again began to speak. The crowd increased in size, so did the volume of booing and cheering.

The noise became so great that one of the officials of the Italian line came out and asked the police to request Miss Poyntz to move elsewhere. Followed by the crowd, she went to the corner of Pearl and Whitehall streets, where, from a temporary stand, she protested against British and American forces in China.

SEES STRIFE END IN NATIONALIST RULE OVER CHINA

New Peking Government Expected Promptly.

BY CHARLES DAILEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1927: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PEKING, June 11.—It is now permissible to reveal that the victory of the nationalist movement is all but complete. The prospect looms of the nationalist capital being established in Peking and of a government being formed temporarily until the people's assembly is held under the original ideas of Dr. Sun Yat-sen, China's first president and the founder of the nationalist movement.

Pending the working out of the details, Marshal Chang Tso-lin will remain in Peking as the commander of the northwestern revolutionary army, controlling Chihli province, Manchuria, and the special areas of eastern and inner Mongolia.

THE TRIBUNE correspondent is convinced that the Kuomintang split, with the rival governments being set up at Hankow and Nanking, was deliberately conceived with the idea of deceiving the foreign powers into holding off on their action for the Nanking excesses and also to lure Marshal Chang into a false sense of security, thus leading him into a costly and unsuccessful campaign south of the Yellow river. THE TRIBUNE correspondent further is convinced that the Hankow and Nanking differences will vanish instantly as soon as Marshal Chang raises the revolutionary flag and accepts the principles of Dr. Sun.

Larger Program Screened.

Although the nationalists have been unable to organize any territory captured, as is evidenced in Hunan, Hupeh, Kiangsi, and other occupied provinces, this apparently is due to the larger program which has been carefully screened. All the factions lack money and must delay organization. The nationalists believed the capitulation of Marshal Chang offers an opportunity for gaining the support of the people north of the Yangtse river, who are utterly exhausted from financing wars.

From the outset it was evident that Gen. Tang Shen-chi, Gen. Chiang Kai-shek and Gen. Feng Yu-hsiang were conducting a coördinated campaign with Peking always the objective. Yen Hsi-shan, the model governor of Shansi province, came into the scheme and assumed leadership of the pacification movement.

Offers Terms to Chang.

Having raised the revolutionary flag in his capital, Gov. Yen, on behalf of Gen. Chiang Kai-shek, submitted the following terms to Marshal Chang Tso-lin, which probably will be accepted in principle:

The An Kuo Chun is to be dissolved and reorganized into the people's revolutionary army; Marshal Chang is to assume the duties of commander in chief of the revolutionary army, remaining at Peking, charged with maintaining order in North China and Manchuria; a commission is to be chosen for the adjustment of the political situation at Peking; representatives of the Kuomintang political department will participate.

Will Let Treaties Linger.

THE TRIBUNE correspondent learns there is no immediate intention to abrogate the unequal treaties or abolish the extraterritoriality, but the Hankow, Nanking and Peking governments will be amalgamated until the people's conference completes the details for the formation of a republican government along the lines Dr. Sun proposed. This, necessarily, will require some time, pending which labor and other radicalism will be restrained and a program will be carried out along the lines enunciated in Gen. Chiang's interview with THE TRIBUNE correspondent published Nov. 23.

Last November, after having brought five provinces under the rule of the South China nationalists, Gen. Chiang, known as the Roosevelt of China, served notice upon the foreigners that his government is determined to crush both militarism and imperialism and remove the special foreign rights.

"Immediately after the military victory," he said at that time, "a people's conference will be held for settling all the national affairs and establishing a government with powers to nullify all unfair and unequal treaties and negotiate instead treaties of mutual respect, putting us on a level with all the world powers."

He laid down a domestic policy of seventeen points that included the rooting out of dishonest officials; gave liberty of speech, assembly, press, and creed; would unify the financial income, cancel improper taxes, forbid opium, establish a maximum land rental and a minimum wage, and increase educational facilities.

Young Pastor Calls Movies the "Devil's Banquet Halls"

Franklin, Mich., June 11.—[United Press.]—Moving picture houses are the "devil's banquet halls," in the opinion of the Rev. Leo Hooper, militant pastor of the Little Methodist church here.

The pastor, rebelling against a church organization sponsoring a moving picture show, got himself into trouble with the law last night when he excitedly hammered a moving picture machine into bits.

"I kept the movies out of my church since I came here last October and cautioned the women that I would not tolerate any such entertainment. I warned the moving picture company. When I found there was no other way to stop this work of the devil I used the hammer.

"After all," continued the 26 year old parson, "movies are all immoral. I've visited houses in Pontiac, Detroit, and Chicago and secured a number of facts for use.

"The only thing that seems to obtain attention is immoral suggestion. Last night no one laughed at the so-called "comedy" until one of the characters had a leg of his trousers cut off. Then the crowd almost fell down."

"I know," he continued defiantly, "that the village has been strong against my stand. I don't believe that of my 70 members there are 10 who would qualify as real Christians.

"But as long as I have my authority as leader of this church I am going to see it fulfilled."

Prosecutor Underwood indicated that the young minister would be prosecuted for malicious destruction of property. In addition the moving picture promoter, Jack Colemen of Detroit, has indicated he would enter a civil suit.

THE UNITED STATES IN ANOTHER NAVAL CONFERENCE.

Preparations are being completed for the second naval conference to be held at President Coolidge's call at Geneva June 20.—France and Italy, which decided that they had nothing to gain from any possible new agreement and might have something more to lose, will have observers present, but there is no indication that they will accept any of the negotiated agreements or be concerned with their provisions. The effect will be limited to the three large battleship powers, Japan, Great Britain, and the United States.

When the first conference was held in Washington world conditions were not encouraging. There was great uneasiness, many animosities, and considerable dread of the future. Rumor was prevalent everywhere in Europe that Japan was prepared for war with the United States and nearly everywhere in Europe there was hope that there would be such a war to permit a recovery of European industry at American expense and to punish the United States for its prosperous isolation.

It was plain that the United States was not going into the league of nations although delivered into it by Mr. Wilson. It was plain that the debts were regarded as something due and to be collected. America was the rich creditor and much disliked as such. Europe thought it had not been punished enough in the war, had come out of it too easily, did not have enough scars, and was about to be stubborn in refusing to be of general use to the governments or nations which had helped in various ways to defeat the central powers. Immigration and the tariff were sore spots and it may have been true that Europe did not care who licked the Americans if only it was a good, expensive, and injurious licking.

Furthermore and most important, the United States had approved, planned, and was building what would be the greatest navy in the world. Its building program had been started when it was far from certain that it might not be needed to beat off the German navy, but a great fleet was being built and the British were restless. The threatened appearance of a greater navy has meant war to the British all their history. If America continued to build it meant breaking the back of the British taxpayer to meet competition. It meant maintaining the alliance with Japan and it meant the seeking of further alliances to check this American sea power. This was the background of the Washington conference and it was intended to relieve the tension, to remove fears, and to get at an equilibrium. If the American sacrifices of ships are to have a justification it must be found in the relief of a trying situation, but it must be remembered that the sacrifice was monumental.

Now for this conference there is no such background. The United States, as might have been expected, has not kept itself up to the terms of the naval agreement. It is not as powerful on the sea as the treaty allows it to be. It has no sacrifices to offer the second conference. It is not the disturbing element in the world. Consequently it can have no other logical purpose at Geneva except to gain something for itself. It cannot sensibly be at Geneva except in self-interest. This time it wants something for its own good from other nations which are in a position to make some sacrifices if the better adjustment of world affairs requires it.

ELECTRIFICATION MAKES BUSINESS.

Increased patronage on its suburban lines has led the Illinois Central to announce more trains and a faster schedule. Electrification may not be solely responsible for the growth in the company's business which has made the additional service necessary but it is chiefly responsible. The clean and swift ride on the electrified trains has attracted business which formerly went to other lines; and the improved service has resulted in the rapid growth of suburban communities which are dependent on the Illinois Central for transportation.

The growth in the Illinois Central's business has not stopped. The improvements just announced can hardly fail, in turn, to attract more commuters.

For their own good as well as for the city's welfare, we hope the officials and resident directors of other railroads entering Chicago are keeping a close watch on the progress made by the pioneer in electrification here. The Burlington, North Western, and Rock Island managements have maintained that electrification was too costly an experiment to undertake. The record of the Illinois Central suggests that failure to electrify may be even more costly.

ABOUT US AND THE ENGLISH HUNDRED PERCENTERS.

An editorial of the day on this page is printed ope from the Manchester Guardian, the great English liberal newspaper. It relates to certain recent historical controversies in the United States, amusingly highlighted in Chicago politics, and it finds the apparent passion in renewing the old fight a mystery to the normal Englishman.

We would be mystifying if Mayor Thompson's spirited battle with George V. were considered fairly illustrative of the average day's proceedings in the American home and in public life. Mr. Thompson has proved himself a good showman and this was one of his best shows. Great Britain lost that war, but it didn't increase the pension lists, and if the loser does not know what it was all about he'll never find out from us.

There may be, however, a mystery to the normal Englishman in the more serious part of it which possibly can be explained. It may be a mystery because he may not be able to conceive of an England constantly subjected to many English influences against English interests.

The United States is the world's great battleground for what has got itself classified and described as propaganda. Even the word is a nuisance. The war proved American susceptibility to such promotion, and we doubt that it proved any one any better at it than some very gifted Britishers. A great stretch of our Atlantic seaboard is doped even now. If a description of the inglorious position of the United States in everything from the war debts to intervention in Haiti is wanted, many of our eastern notables in universities, in law, and in business would go without their sleep to provide it.

For some of the population of the United States this is a new land, and they are readjusting themselves from old loyalties to new. It is a process admirably conducted for the most part, but it gives a meaning to a phrase in liberal disrepute—"One hundred per cent Americanism." Many who think that is nonsense had something to do with giving it a vogue.

We have organizations which regard national consciousness as injurious, and they try to destroy it. No doubt there are their counterparts abroad, but we feel that they can do more mischief in a new country than in an old one, in one which time has not solidified than in one which it has. For these and other reasons we have looked to school texts to give the early inspiration for nationalism and in this we are not peculiar.

Particularly we do not believe that school texts should be used for an anti-nationalist purpose. There were virtues in the notable figures of the American revolution and, although we do not want them treated irrationally, we do not want them obscured.

Prof. Van Tyne of the University of Michigan, lecturing under the Sir George Watson foundation, explained some of the excesses of our hundred percenters, but said that under all the pressure of passion "history will not budge." It is our observation that it budges a great deal. It develops its own passions for special theories, in which the historical perspective becomes quite as distorted as it could be distorted by the most vainglorious.

In all nationalism there is a tincture of "praise be that we are not as other men." It produces some nonsense. It produces some unpleasant people. We have seen little in the English character to indicate in it a conscious regret that in the descent from the garden of Eden the Englishman had not been graced with some of the more generous qualities of the Spaniard, more of the endurance of the Russian, or of the stability of the German. The normal Englishman seems quite well satisfied with himself as he is, as one would expect him to be, and if he thinks the course of the British empire has been regrettable he bears up under it very well. We doubt that his children are being taught to have any more doubts of British sufficiency in morals and valor at all times than he himself has. He is endowed with a moral purpose and is conscious of it whether in contact with fur bearing animals, rubber bearing land, or diamond digging natives.

He has been so competently moral that he is forever finding himself with more territory in which to be a broader exemplar of morals, and if he found that his children were being taught that for the most part he was the world's most successful humbug, we have an idea he'd start a hundred per cent drive which would make any of ours seem juvenile and lacking in punch. We'd not blame him, but he'll not have to. His children will not be so taught, and for about as many generations as need be considered the normal Englishman will regard the rest of creation as a possibly explicable eccentricity.

Our hundred percenters will never be able to do so thorough a job.

Editorial of the Day

HISTORY AND PROPAGANDA.

[Manchester Guardian.]

In the first of the lectures delivered this year under the Sir George Watson foundation, Prof. Van Tyne of Michigan university dealt in a most courageous and illuminating way with a subject which is something of a mystery to the normal Englishman. Why is it that events which are more than a hundred and fifty years old can be made a subject for passion and prejudice in America, and can even be whipped into service as a political issue today, as was recently shown in the mayoral election at Chicago? The answer lies in an extraordinary campaign which was carried on in America and intensified after the recent war. The object was to keep the historical textbooks rather more than 100 per cent American and to present the war of independence as a struggle in which a united nation of liberty loving heroes rose nobly against an aggressor in whom no vice of cowardice or tyranny was lacking. It was considered the vilest heresy to notice that the colonists who were to become the American nation were not united, and were frequently scolded by their leaders for slackness in the fight. Nor could it be allowed that the ideas of self-government which justly animated the revolt were English ideas forgotten by an English government and restated by English emigrants. The vilification of any American who tried to study and state the facts in a just historical perspective was drastic, and it was all the more preposterous because Englishmen as a whole have long ago admitted that Lord North's administration was wrong in principle and practice. The English people have no particular reason to be proud of all their own textbooks, and in relation to old wars the poison of a nations' self-righteousness has been allowed to do its work by silences and overstatements. But the great newspaper "drive" which was made in America a few years ago with the object of turning history into propaganda was an offense against intellectual decency which we find it hard to understand, and we are consequently grateful for an authoritative record of what actually happened, and for Prof. Van Tyne's spirited rejoinder that under all the pressure of passion "history will not budge."

THE MEANING AND SIGNIFICANCE OF THE WORLD CONFERENCE ON FAITH AND ORDER

BY THE REV. GEORGE CRAIG STEWART, D. D., L. H. D.

[Rector of St. Luke's parish, Evanston, Ill., a delegate from the Episcopal church to Lausanne.]

A world conference on faith and order will be held in Lausanne, Switzerland, Aug. 2-22. It will be the most impressive, significant and representative assemblage of world-wide Christianity in almost 1,000 years.

Five hundred official delegates will be there from practically every Christian communion in the world. They will come from more than forty different nations. They will represent more than eighty nation-wide self-governing Christian churches, including all the Protestant bodies of major importance in the world. Several hundred millions of Christians will be represented in the conference — Copts, Abyssinians, Jacobites from Malabar, Georgians from the Caucasus, Czechs, Roumanians, Serbs and Bulgarians, Syrians from Palestine, Assyrians from Nineveh and Babylon, Russians, Greeks, Hungarians, Esthonians, Latvians, Anglicans, Old Catholics, Lutherans, Waldensians, Moravians, Baptists, Methodists, Congregationalists, Presbyterians, Disciples of Christ, Friends; dwellers in Egypt, Australia, New Zealand, in South Africa, West Indies, Tasmania—another Pentecost. It reminds one of the description in Acts: "Parthians and Medes and Elamites, and the dwellers in Mesopotamia, and in Judea, and Cappadocia, in Pontus and Asia, Phrygia and Pamphylia, in Egypt, and in the parts of Libya about Cyrene, and strangers of Rome, Jews and proselytes, Cretes and Arabians." We hope in this modern Pentecost, as in the old, to hear men speak in the one tongue of a common Christian experience the wonderful works of God.

Now, why will they assemble and what do they expect to do? They meet in conference as an approach to the manifestation of the unity of the church, the oneness of the mystical Body of Christ. Federation is at best a makeshift, union is mechanical, external; but unity is vital, biological, spiritual, dynamic.

Chosen with the greatest care by the commissions of the various groups, the delegates to the conference will be there, not as clever diplomats, nor as dreamers who look for a sudden millennium, but as humble, earnest, intelligent disciples of the one Christ, men who are already one in their faith that the prayer of their Master must be realized, "That they all may be one that the world may believe that Thou hast sent me"; men who seek in conference the way to reconcile those differences of faith and order which now divide the Body of Christ.

It is a gigantic task, the unity of the church, but clearly conference is the first step toward it. Controversy darkens counsel and divides; conference clears issues, cancels misunderstandings and creates an atmosphere in which unity is discovered. And the will to agree must always come before agreement. These delegates will come together to contribute the point of view of their groups, they will be candid and clear in declaring the faith that is in them; but they will bring to the conference the humility which acknowledges pride, rashness, stubbornness and intolerance; and, above all, they will bring that love which banishes contentiousness, bitterness and strife and invites mutual confidence and understanding of divergent points of view.

Three great subjects will form the center of the conference:

The faith of the Body of Christ, the church;

The orders or ministry of the church;

The sacraments of the church and their administration.

What are the essentials of the Christian faith? What do all Christians everywhere agree upon as primary, vital, creative, redemptive? What form of ministry is at once Scriptural, historical, and necessary for perpetuating the church, for preserving the unity of Christendom and for maintaining spiritual discipline and order? What are sacraments, and how do they make real the spiritual in a world of phy cal appearances, and how are they to be adminis.ered and by whom?

Why not send out a questionnaire to each church body, gain the information and avoid the trouble and expense of a conference? The reply is obvious. Questionnaires are informative but they are not creative, they are poor, stiff, frozen substitutes for spoken words; they convey neither laughter nor tears, neither the twinkle of an eye nor the gesture of a hand, nor the tone of a voice. "Walk a hundred miles to see a man," said Joe Cannon, "but don't write a letter." "Truth," said Cardinal Newman, "is the outcome of many minds working together freely." Christians cannot pray, make their communion and confer together without sharing in a tingling awareness of the presence of the Master in their midst, without recognizing the presence and power of that Holy Spirit who has promised to guide into all truth.

The conference will not be determined by mere emotional longing for unity, nor by cowardly compromises. Differences there will be, else there would be no need of conference, but these differences will be seen from a new angle, the angle of a new world order wherein the spirit of internationalism will take the place of a nationalistic, provincial, or sectarian Christianity.

If Jesus Christ is to be savior of the world His disciples must first of all realize unity in their own ranks. "I am of Cephas, I am of Paul, and I am of Apollos" was regarded as a sign of unholy division in the early church. I am of Wesley, I am of Calvin, and I am of Luther is no less a sign of division in the twentieth century.

Seventeen years ago at its general convention in Cincinnati the Episcopal church appointed a commission on faith and order. The late J. Pierpont Morgan gave the initial $100,000 for the expenses of the commission. Similar commissions in other Christian bodies were appointed. An official delegation of Episcopalians visited the patriarchates of Rome, Constantinople, Alexandria, Jerusalem, Antioch, the leading state churches of Europe and the various nonconformist groups.

By 1920 everything was ready for the preliminary conference held in Geneva, Switzerland. The conference appointed a continuation committee headed by Bishop Charles H. Brent of the diocese of western New York. In August, 1925, the committee met in Stockholm and adopted a tentative agenda for the Lausanne conference. This agenda has furnished the basis for preliminary discussions in local groups throughout the world, discussions which are bound to be fruitful in the conference itself.

What will be the outcome of this conference? Will its issues be clear and practical and effective? Will it pay? Will it be worth while?

In Acts we read: "When they therefore were come together, they asked of Him saying, Lord, wilt thou at this time restore again the Kingdom. . . .? And he said unto them: It is not for you to know the times or the seasons, but ye shall receive power after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you: and ye shall be witnesses unto me unto the uttermost parts of the earth." And you will remember that the promised power came upon them when "they were all with one accord in one place."

It is ours not to ask the outcome but to share in the great enterprise. And one can share in it by his prayers if not by his presence.

LINDBERGH'S HEALTH HAZARDS.

LINDBERGH succeeded in flying from New York to Paris because there was no dangerously weak link in a chain.

The most important link in his chain, in the sense that it was most likely to break, was his machine. The newspaper accounts tell us that this machine was so perfect in its parts and in the way they worked that only a few bolts needed tightening when it was overhauled after the trip.

It was only yesterday that the total flying life of a machine was estimated to be a few hours more than this one stood up under during an uninterrupted flight. A few turns of a wrench and this machine was said to be ready to fly back across the ocean. The average span of life of flying machines is increasing just as is that of man, its creator.

The next most important link in this chain, from the standpoint of hazard, was the weather. Had either of these two links been wrong not even the skill and prowess of Lindbergh would have sufficed.

Third in the list comes the man himself. The man machine was endangered most by the long stretch of deprivation of sleep. He went from early one morning until late night of the next day without sleep. Probably he did not get a good full night's sleep the night before he started, and that added somewhat to the danger of his task.

Man can go somewhere about four to five days—96 to 120 hours—without sleep and does not die as a result. Lindbergh went e sleepless less than forty-eight hours. It is not an unusual experience for men to go sleepless for forty-eight hours. Therefore, Lindbergh's danger did not arise from the length of the privation period pure and simple. It was principally because he had to have his faculties with him every minute. Most men who go through long periods of sleep deprivation nod at times—lose consciousness for a moment. Some of them walk, talk and drive automobiles while partly unconscious during moments of snatched sleep. But if Lindbergh had lost consciousness for a moment he might have pulled the stick wrong and landed in the sea.

When men are under test to see how long they can go without sleep other men busily employ all sorts of devices to keep them awake. Lindbergh was so placed that the hum of his engine and the monotony of the view tended strongly to force sleep on him.

For certain good reasons he rode in a closed car. The closer, warmer air of a closed car wooes sleep. Fatigue as a hazard belonged near sleep.

Many think Lindbergh suffered from hunger. During the 33½ hours he was in the air he is said to have eaten one sandwich. He could have gone two days without eating anything without the slightest impairment of his faculties. Had the effects of starvation been his only hazard he could have turned round and flown back to New York without danger.

He drank one bottle of water. Water is much more necessary than food. One bottle was a small allowance. But Arabs in the desert habitually drink about what Lindbergh did.

Ranking well up in the lists of hazards is failure of spirit—call it courage, persistence, determination, whatever you will. Lindbergh says the will to win once ran a little low but his youth and his inborn stamina heated that up to the driving point, and on he went to fame.

HOW TO CLEAN OLD DUG WELL.

D. N. L. writes: 1. What is the best way to cleanse an old dug well?

2. Is lime of any use as a purifier of water from such a well?

3. What is the best way to fumigate and disinfect a house before moving in?

REPLY.

1. Dirty wells should be pumped dry, after which the dirt and slime should be removed with buckets. Well cleaners find many surprising things in wells. If possible, the well should be cemented. Sometimes it is enough to repair the cement over places where seepage shows.

2. It is. Houston advises it in his little book on "Rural Water Supplies and Their Purification." His advice is that a competent laboratory examine the water and advise the amount of lime to be added "to leave 3 grains of lime per gallon in it in excess."

3. Nothing is needed except thorough cleaning, sunning and airing. If necessary wash the woodwork with soap and water as a part of the cleaning. Some people use crude carbolic in the wash water in addition to soap.

DIVORCE RECORDS.

Chicago, June 2.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—How can I find out if a person has ever been divorced? Where would I make inquiry about this matter? J. D.

If you have no clews it would be necessary to inquire of the clerks of the courts of divorce jurisdiction in all counties where either of the parties have resided. We could advise to better advantage if you had stated the facts on which your question arises. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

A FINE POINT.

Chicago, June 2.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Can one be held to a lease if the landlord puts up a "to rent" sign in the window, without the lessee's consent? This is a case where the lessee never occupied the premises after signing the lease because he did not like the neighborhood. C. H. R.

In our opinion this fact would not amount to an acceptance of the lessee's surrender, such as to release the lessee. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

UPKEEP OF CEMETERY LOT.

Muskegon, Mich., June 2.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Will you please tell me whether there is a law in all the counties of Illinois that if one did not pay for the keep of a cemetery lot it would be confiscated? Mrs. T. S.

We know of no such law, but deeds to cemetery lots commonly provide that the grantee is to hold subject to the bylaws of the association in which the wording of the bylaws would control. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

LEGAL PROCEEDINGS NECESSARY.

Chicago, June 2.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—My aunt does not know what to do. Her husband was recently taken to the insane asylum and there seems to be no hope of his ever recovering his sanity. They own their home, but now she and her daughter feel that they should sell it as they cannot afford to keep it up. Is it possible to sell the house inasmuch as both husband and wife signed notes at the time of buying it, or will such sale have to have his signature? E. F.

Yes, it is possible, through legal proceedings. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

LEGAL DRIVING AGE.

Winnetka, Ill., June 3.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—What is the legal age for driving motor cars in Illinois? Can towns and cities pass laws conflicting with the state law? F. R.

Section 31 of the motor vehicle law is as follows: "No person shall operate or drive a motor vehicle who is under fifteen years of age, unless such person is accompanied by a duly licensed chauffeur or the owner of the motor vehicle being operated." This state law supersedes city ordinances on the same subject matter. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

65 YEARS AGO TODAY

JUNE 12, 1862.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Gen. Fremont reported to Secretary Stanton that he had engaged Gen. Jackson's large rebel force at Union Church, seven miles from federal headquarters at Harrisonburg, Va. The battle began at 11 o'clock and was furiously waged by artillery and infantry until 5 p. m. The loss is heavy on both sides. Ours is very heavy among the officers. We are encamped on the field of battle, which may be resumed at any minute.

BATTLE GROUND, SIX MILES FROM HARRISONBURG, Va.—Gen. Jackson made his stand here and we attacked him. Gen. Hall was on the left, supported by Gen. Bohn. Gen. Milroy was in the center, supported by the right of Gen. Schenck. Gen. Steinwood had command of the reserves. Gen. Stahl advanced almost to the river, driving the enemy before him, but they precipitated their main column on him and he was forced to retreat to avoid being flanked. Then Gens. Milroy and Schenck found the enemy and the battle became general. The rebel loss was heavy, one regiment losing two-thirds its number. Our loss is estimated at 600 to 800 killed and wounded.

CAIRO, Ill.—A gentleman from Corinth informs me that among the prisoners captured by Gen. Pope and now at Pittsburg Landing is Col. Morgan of guerrilla notoriety.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Three fugitive slaves were shot at Bladensburg while attempting to escape from a party of slave catchers.

25 YEARS AGO TODAY

JUNE 12, 1902.

CHICAGO. — Eleven persons are known to have perished, scores were injured, hundreds of head of live stock killed, and, roughly estimated, $2,000,000 damage was done to property by a tornado that swept a path eighty miles wide and nearly 200 miles long through central Illinois. Bloomington was the center of the ruin. Other cities hit by the storm were Peoria, Lincoln, Champaign, and Urbana.

LONDON. — King Edward, Queen Alexandra, and the Princess Victoria were guests of Joseph Choate, United States ambassador. The king has never before dined with the ambassador of a foreign power. The most distinguished men of the kingdom were among the guests.

WEST POINT.—The one hundredth anniversary of the United States Military academy was celebrated with speeches by President Roosevelt and Gens. Miles and Porter. Every speaker vehemently denounced critics of the army.

CHICAGO. — Miss Helen Althea Parker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph J. Parker, 4737 Lake avenue, and Ralph Prescott Harlan were married at the home of the bride's parents by the Rev. Charles H. Bixby of St. Paul's church, Kenwood.

CHICAGO.—After a year's struggle, resulting in a loss of $300,000 to the company and in over 140 assaults, two of which were fatal, the strike of the machinists of the Allis-Chalmers company was settled. The company will recognize the union and give an 11 per cent wage increase, but a ten hour day is to be the rule, with a forty-five hour week.

JUNE 12, 1917.

WASHINGTON. — The period of grace for slackers ended at 9 o'clock tonight, and Provost Marshal General Crowder began rounding them up immediately. All men over 21 and not yet 31 who failed to register for the draft will be taken into custody. They will be compelled to register and will be subject to prosecution for evading the law.

CHICAGO.—Miss Gail Walton, once prominent in Edgewater social affairs, was found dead in her apartment, 4862 North Ashland avenue, under circumstances that suggest suicide or murder. She was divorced last winter from John S. Miller, head of the John S. Miller Printing company, and resumed her maiden name.

WAR NEWS.—London reports the capture of another mile of German trenches southeast of Messines and much loot. Berlin claims the British attacks along the whole front were repulsed.

CHICAGO. — Among the Liberty Loan subscriptions were: First National bank, $10,000,000; City of Chicago, $2,000,000; Levy Mayer (additional), $500,000; Armour Grain company (additional), $250,000; Ira N. Morris, $500,000. The subscriptions took a big jump as the result of THE TRIBUNE'S story that Chicago was in danger of landing in the "slacker contingent" in the matter of subscriptions.

CHICAGO.—William A. Birk, president of Birk Bros.' Brewing company, died at the home of his father, Jacob Birk, 457 Wellington avenue.

LINCOLN IN THE BLACK HAWK WAR.

Paris, Ill., May 31.—Sunday's issue of your paper carried, on its editorial page, an article from the Register-Gazette of Rockford, Ill., headed "A Lincoln Story" and dealing with Lincoln's services in the Black Hawk war. This article said "he was first a private and, reenlisting, was given a company."

Lincoln had command of a company in the 4th regiment in the first army and when this disbanded all but three hundred returned home. These three hundred reenlisted and were formed into a regiment under the command of Col. Jacob Fry. Former Capt. Lincoln and Gen. Whiteside became high privates in the rear ranks, and, as far as I know, so served to the end of the war, and, according to Historian John Moses, showed themselves as willing to obey as they had been to command.

With the first army of volunteers was a small detachment of regulars under the command of Col. Zachary Taylor. A lieutenant of one of his companies was Jefferson Davis. Just before an expected attack Col. Taylor made an address before all the troops. Part of it, according to Moses, was as follows: "Soldiers, the orders you have just heard must be promptly obeyed. The safety of all depends upon the obedience of all. You are citizen soldiers; some of you may fill high offices, or even be President some day, but not if you refuse to do your duty. Forward, march!"

Gen. Taylor, Abraham Lincoln and Jefferson Davis had good reason to remember that speech in after years.

A CLEAN CITY.

Chicago, June 2.—While riding through the city of Milwaukee, in the poor and rich districts, one cannot help being impressed by the cleanliness of the streets and sidewalks; no litter of paper, which one becomes accustomed to in Chicago, even in some of our better neighborhoods. Should not the alderman organize the residents of his ward to keep their districts clean by a concise and earnest effort? Thus we shall all help beautify Chicago.

A CHICAGO RESIDENT.

DECORATION DAY.

Chicago, June 3.—A correspondent in today's "Voice of the People" criticizes the use of the words "Decoration day" by President Coolidge in his speech on May 30. If the writer of the criticism were of the same age as Mr. Coolidge I believe he would remember that instead of being a recent "commercialized version" the original designation was Decoration day, and very appropriately so, the day on which we decorated and honored the graves of our soldier dead.

"Memorial day" was a term adopted many years later, and has never come quite easily and gratefully to the tongue of a generation which learned to love the older form with its beautiful and tender significance. M. M. B. B.

DETROIT'S WETNESS.

Detroit, Mich., June 2.—Will you kindly tell me whether Detroit is in the U. S. A. or Ontario? Except for the fact that here they charge 50 cents a drink, I should really believe that this town is not under the United States government. Chicago is bad enough, but this beats them all beat. There is no pretense of secrecy. R. E. DEAN.

OF INTEREST TO CANADIAN VETERANS.

WESTMONT, P. Q., May 24.—The Montreal regiment, 14th battalion, Canadian Expeditionary Force, has compiled for private distribution a history of the regiment's part in the great war, edited and compiled by Mr. R. C. Fetherstonhaugh, who also wrote the history of the 13th battalion, Royal Highlanders of Canada.

As a number of the 6,200 men who passed through the ranks of the 14th battalion, C. E. F., are now living in the United States, the history committee of the Royal Montreal regiment is asked me to write to you to seek your assistance in spreading knowledge of the forthcoming volume in your country. We have lost touch with a great number of our demobilised men, and we feel that either they or their families and relations would be interested in obtaining this history of the activities of the old unit in the great war.

The book will consist of approximately 300 pages of text, 24 pages of illustrations, appendices giving the battle honor roll, itinerary and special activities. A foreword to the book has been written by Lieut. Gen. Sir R. H. K. Turner, V. C., K. C. B., K. C. M. G., D. S. O., who commanded the third brigade of the first Canadian division in France. L. W. TATON,
Secretary R. M. R. History Committee.

THE WISCONSIN EDITION.

Green Bay, Wis., June 1.—On behalf of many Wisconsin people I wish to express appreciation for the excellent Wisconsin news you publish in your Wisconsin edition. We all look for it to enjoy it. DAVID W. GRAVEN.

NATURAL HISTORY OF A TERRIBLE MOOD.

Chicago, June 1.—Today I was in a mood I am seldom in, a terrible one.

I was peacefully boarding a Milwaukee-Gale car downtown when I was pushed in my back, then in my side, and it was very forceful. Up jumped my mood and made me push back. You should have seen this man! He was an indignant because I pushed him back. I delayed me a short while on the platform and I asked him what he meant by that. He said he would teach me not to push. Imagine that! I am going to school now [I did not think of it then] that before he teaches me to be peaceful he had better take lessons on the same subject.

Now this is not my regular mood, but when I am in it people had better watch out. MISS WARNER.

WHERE IS THE IMPERIAL CROWN?

Chicago, June 2.—Where is the crown of the British empire kept, and why is it kept there? As far as I ever knew, it is kept in Edinburgh, Scotland, and the reason it was kept there is that England owes Scotland a large amount of money and the crown was given as security. LAURAN BOYLE.

ASKS THOMPSON FOR GUIDANCE ON TRANSIT BILLS

Representative Igoe Also Writes to Ettelson.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

Michael L. Igoe, minority leader in the house at Springfield, which will consider the five transit bills this week, yesterday wrote a letter to Mayor Thompson for "such suggestions as you may deem proper, which necessarily ought to be incorporated into the proposed legislative program."

Mr. Igoe sent a copy of the letter to Samuel A. Ettleson, chief legal adviser of the city and to Ald. Joseph B. McDonough, chairman of the local transportation committee. To each of them he said:

"I think it only fair that either the mayor, or someone for him, ought to advise the members of the house of representatives, at Springfield, of the exact manner in which the transportation bills ought to be amended so that the rights of all the citizens of Chicago may be safeguarded."

Wants Mayor's Suggestions.

To the mayor, Mr. Igoe said in part: "In view of the public statements which you have heretofore made concerning the transportation situation as it exists in this city, and in view of the different pledges which you have made from time to time concerning same, I now respectfully ask you to forward me, or to the members of the house of representatives at Springfield, such suggestions as you may have in mind that will properly protect not only the rights of the transportation companies and the employes thereof, but also the rights of the citizens of Chicago in whom I believe you have as much interest as I have myself. I will thank you to forward such information to me, or to the members of the house of representatives, so that the same may be available."

In asking for the mayor's suggestions, Mr. Igoe says he believes in the principle of consolidation of the transit companies if it can be brought about fairly, and also in the principle of terminable permits "if surrounded by such safeguards as will properly conserve the interests of the city and the residents thereof."

Regards Bills as Defective.

"But these bills in their present form do not," Mr. Igoe added, in commenting upon his letters.

"If Mayor Thompson or Mr. Ettelson do not send in specific amendments or a definite statement of what should be changed or appear in person before the committee, it is said that an effort will be made formally to invite them to show up before the lower house before the end of the week. Certain house members are not satisfied with the mayor's statement before the senate last Tuesday.

On that occasion the mayor said: "So long as they contain my (transportation) fundamentals, I'm for them (the bills). I know of no particularly dangerous spots in them."

City Club Plans Protest.

The City club announced yesterday an "indignation massmeeting Monday noon to protest against railroading traction bills through the legislature without home rule and other features vital to Chicago."

The speakers announced are Senator James J. Barbour, Howard P. Castle, Graham Taylor, and Charles E. Merriam. The announcement says the state senate passed the bills last week, "shamelessly violating the fundamentals of Chicago's home rule and control."

Members of the Cook County Real Estate board have sent a protest to Springfield against the five bills, which they say "will completely sell out Chicago to the traction interests." Another sentence in their telegram reads: "It is impossible to escape the conviction that these measures are tainted with fraud and corruption and are wholly in the interests of the traction group."

The message adds that this board represents 75,000 property owners and strongly urges a vote against the bills.

Others Demand Amendments.

Ald. McDonough, chairman of the council local transportation committee said he will go to Springfield to urge the amendments which his committee recommended. Ald. Wiley Mills also announced that he will be in Springfield to speak against the bills, if given an opportunity. Ald. Donald S. McKinlay, who is now out of town, also is expected to protest.

The Association of Commerce is not satisfied with the bills in their present form. The association recommends that the city be given power to issue obligations other than bonds for subway construction; and that the city be given the added right to acquire the transportation system by condemnation as well as by purchase.

The five bills are pending in the house committee on municipalities of which Sidney Lyon of Chicago is chairman. He said yesterday that committee will meet Tuesday in Springfield. The hour of the committee session was not announced. It probably will be during the recess period of the house which probably will not be determined until the house meets Monday.

Judge a Funeral by the Automobiles

Only one of the many features which distinguish a "Hursen" funeral is the amazing beauty and elegance of Hursen's automobile equipment.

There is no more beautiful car in America today than a "Hursen" funeral-limousine. Each one of these cars was specially designed by Hursen himself, in order to supply that uttermost refinement of quality and service found nowhere else except in "Hursen" funerals.

Each "Hursen" funeral-limousine cost a fortune to build. The purpose was to surpass anything of its kind yet seen in America. That Hursen has succeeded is proved by the demand for "Hursen" cars. Hursen "limousine-hearses" are a revolution in hearses, doing away with the old-style, gloomy-looking vehicle.

In many funerals not conducted by Hursen, one often sees automobiles, pressed into funeral service, which are unworthy of such a use; old, unkempt, dilapidated, of ancient design, and driven by men untrained to the exacting requirements of "Hursen" service.

It is a remarkable fact that for the use of these palatial cars there is no extra charge over the usual auto hire, no matter what the size of the funeral may be. This is only one of the many features which have made "Hursen's" the most distinguished institution of its kind in America. Call Hursen, of course!

Still our "CROWDED HOUR"

Notwithstanding a Tremendous Response

YES, since surrendering to Carson Pirie Scott & Co. the south half of our store, combining two stocks in one, it has indeed been "our crowded hour." In fact, it is difficult under present cramped conditions to display these silken treasures to advantage, yet the public has shown a vast understanding of our temporary predicament, and has good-naturedly made the best of things . . . Our unique plan to still further lower stocks received the immediate endorsement of innumerable Oriental Rug buyers, who came, asked for the number, and saved one-half by doing so. Naturally, a substantial portion of the previous list of 100 Rugs has been disposed of, yet we have filled in the "gaps" with other fine Rugs, which have been reduced one-half in price. Therefore, the revised list printed below, is complete in every detail, and offers you another week of unequalled opportunity . . . And, please, do not forget to ask for the number, as by choosing in this way you will save exactly ONE-HALF on your purchases.

CITY WARNED OF PERIL IN DEFEAT OF FINANCE BILLS

Would Stop Improvement Program, Ettelson Says.

Unless Mayor Thompson's finance bills pass the legisature next week, Chicago's public improvement program will come to a dead stop while its current activities will have to be cut to the barest necessities.

This warning was broadcast yesterday by Corporation Counsel Samuel A. Ettelson, the mayor's spokesman in finance affairs, as he made ready for a final concentrated effort to drive the bills through to the governor's desk. He will return to Springfield Monday, remaining there until the fight is finished.

"We are not bluffing when we predict a 20 per cent cut in teachers' salaries and payment of city employes in script," Ettleson declared. "The situation is just as acute as it is painted."

See Danger to City.

The mayor's friends charge that opposition to the bills, led by the Civic federation and Margaret Haley of the Teachers' federation, will endanger the city's welfare.

"Mr. Sutherland of the Civic federation says the bills will raise taxes," said Mr. Ettelson. "I deny that. On the contrary, for the present they will lower taxes, I believe, and will put the cost of school buildings where it belongs—upon future generations."

In effect, Mr. Sutherland contends, the proposed construction of schools by bond issue and 2—2—1 spit of the $1 building tax fund between the city and school board operating funds and a sinking fund would require the equivalent of an additional 70 cent tax rate.

"We have an $8,000,000 deficit in the corporate fun.; our bonding limit is reached," argued the corporation counsel. "What is to be done about it?"

Due for Showdown This Week.

The major group of the finance bills, involving the increase of tax assessments from one-half to full actual values, and the doubling of the city's bonding power, are now on their second reading in the house, while the school tax bill goes to its third reading in the senate Monday. All of the measures are likely to come to a showdown before the end of the week.

Reiterating the stand they took a week ago against the bill to split the school building fund, members of the Chicago Teachers federation yesterday again unanimously voted their opposition to the bill. They also unanimously opposed the transit bills.

CONVICT'S MOTHER GETS HIM TO REVEAL PLOT TO BLOW UP PEN

Jefferson City, Mo., June 11.—(AP)—Officials of the Missouri penitentiary tonight announced they had discovered an audacious plot to blow up the east wall of the prison while more than 3,000 prisoners were on the playground this afternoon.

Officials said the first intimation of the plan came this morning when Riley Davis, a crippled convict, voluntarily told Warden Leslie Rudolph of the plot and turned over to him a quantity of nitroglycerine estimated to be enough to blast out a 150 to 200 foot section of the east wall between two guard towers.

Four guards were to have been slain by the alleged ringleaders, Davis said. Davis unfolded a plot by which the convicts, once outside, were to raid and plague homes and business establishments in the Missouri capital city, steal automobiles and flee.

Officials said much credit for the revealing of the alleged plot should go to Mrs. Arch March of Lawton, Okla., mother of Davis. She visited her son in the prison two days ago and, learning of the plan, begged him to abandon it and inform officials.

RESPECTED DRY FORCE IS AIM OF COMMISSIONER

"Creation of an organization that is respectable and respected is one of the first steps of my plans for the prohibition department," Dr. J. M. Doran, new commissioner of prohibition, said yesterday during a brief visit in Chicago.

Civil service examinations will cause an increase in the caliber of the men, he said, and only seasoned men will be assigned to basic work in the department. In addition only such persons as prove themselves properly fitted for the work will be retained.

"The prohibition department will not inaugurate any new policies as I believe our policies are well set forth in the law," he said.

Accompanying Commissioner Doran was Alfred Oftedal, deputy commissioner of prohibition. While in Chicago the two visited with E. C. Yellowley, local prohibition administrator, his aids, United States District Attorney George E. Q. Johnson and Federal Judges Adam C. Cliffe, George A. Carpenter, and James H. Wilkerson.

"Chicago, under Mr. Yellowley, has had a wonderful administration of prohibition enforcement," said Dr. Doran. "I have known Mr. Yellowley for a long time and desire that he remain in charge of the Chicago district just as long as I am in Washington.

"The Chicago district is one of the largest and most difficult to handle and I want to know that the good work being done by this office will be continued.

"Our greatest question still is the stopping of illegal liquor at the source. With the aid of the public we hope to prevent all leaks."

I am the Little Jordan Tomboy

Dashing—Daring—Debonair—that describes it—the Little Jordan Tomboy.

I LOVE youth—have ideas and everything.

Of course I am really just a fascinating motor car—but with the spirit and swank of a charming somebody.

I am the Little Jordan Tomboy.

Loving action I am going somewhere.

Being somebody I am always doing things.

A flare of life—a willing pal for the next adventure.

That's where I get my name—the Little Jordan Tomboy.

A thousands miles of open road before my saucy nose.

Seventy miles on the straightaway—if you like it.

A flying phantom among the sluggish old fashioned cars in the traffic press.

Clean cut lines—healthy freedom and an outdoor atmosphere.

Dashing—daring—debonair—those are the words.

A flash of color and a touch of something in the little chapeau of Burbank.

A little nickel to brighten me up, but not too much.

A dicky seat for the mixed foursome and a rakish extra tire to nod at those we pass.

I can turn with the flash of a polo pony and run like a disturbed rabbit.

That's all—that's what I am.

Somebody loves a Tomboy.

EXPLOSION SINKS YACHT; SAILOR SOLE SURVIVOR

Miami, Fla., June 11.—[Special.]—Philip Pomeroy, wealthy Miami yachtsman, his bride of a few months and two members of the crew of the Pomeroy yacht Cinnabar, were reported today to have been lost at sea Monday when the yacht sank following an explosion.

The report was brought to Jacksonville by officers of the Southern Shipping company's tug Peerless, who picked up a delirious sailor, the sole survivor of the wreck, 50 miles off Savannah, Ga., light.

Tells Three Stories.

Nick Harabaglia, the sailor, has given three different versions of the shipwreck. From his mumblings Jacksonville hospital attendants have learned that the gasoline tanks on the ship exploded throwing all on board into the sea.

In his first story the sailor told of his unsuccessful attempts to save Mrs. Pomeroy, who was floating on a bit of wreckage with him. At another time he said he, Pomeroy and another member of the crew reached the same piece of debris, following the blast and that his two companions perished attempting to swim to land which they could not see.

Phil Bertschi, cook, and Morris Johnson, seaman, were the other members of the crew.

Bound for Brooklyn.

The yacht was bound for Brooklyn, where Mr. Pomeroy was to visit friends. It left Miami last Saturday. Mrs. Pomeroy was to leave the boat in North Carolina, her former home, where she planned to spend a vacation. Pomeroy is president of an automobile company of Miami. He was well known in both Miami and New York yachting and social circles.

Piloting the Cinnibar, Pomeroy was the first man to reach Nassau, Bahama islands, following the disastrous hurricane of last September. He took supplies to the suffering islanders.

BRITAIN BUILDS MACHINE ARMY FOR QUICK WAR

Begins Secret Tests of Battle Units.

BY DAVID DARRAH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

[Copyright, 1927, By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, June 11.—War methods are expected to be revolutionized by experiments with mechanized military units being made secretly by the British authorities on the military plain at Salisbury.

Training is going on rapidly under new war rules for tactical maneuvers this autumn. If the experiment proves successful, a division will be organized on the new plan.

The object is to create expeditionary forces of fewer men, greater killing power, quicker land movement and easier transport.

Lesson Learned at Shanghai.

Great Britain's experience in sending a defense force to Shanghai led to the energetic study of mechanization of the brigade. With the ever increasing calls for sending troops to England's scattered possessions and "spheres of interest," the British war college is determined to solve the problem of getting hard hitting units to the spot needed quickly.

The new mechanized battalions and brigades are expected to be packed into a couple of large transports and shipped at a moment's notice to any part of the world, where destructive fire and mechanical superiority can crush any resistance in a short time.

In the new reorganization horses are practically eliminated. Horses are only used by brigade and battalion commanders, and are to be transported in special armored motor horse boxes.

Infantry travels in special, six wheeled trucks with armor plate protection. A whole brigade can be moved on the roads at twenty miles an hour, kitchens keeping pace, and at twelve miles an hour across country for fighting units, when tractor wheels replace the ordinary wheels.

Men Reduced to Half.

The battalion strength is reduced by half to 200 men. Rifles are replaced by a new type of automatic so that one man with a gun with a cartridge drum like a machine gun can fire a spray of bullets. It is calculated the fire power of the new battalion is ten times that of the old.

Wireless telephones and telephotography connects the units and permits advance parties to remit pictures to brigade headquarters.

A tank detachment later will be added to each bridgade.

A rule also will be enforced that all officers under the rank of captain must possess flying certificates.

$40,000,000 U. C. FUND PAYS ONLY 43% OF EXPENSE

Alumni End Celebration of School's 36th Year.

With endowments of $40,000,000 and total resources of $75,000,000, the University of Chicago still must get 57 per cent of its income from student's fees and miscellaneous sources, Lloyd R. Steele, vice president, yesterday told [illegible] per cent of its income from students' and alumni ended a three days session in celebration of the university's 36th anniversary.

The official said that the buildings and grounds of the university are valued at $20,000,000, and that the 1927 budget was $4,450,000.

Fund Gives but 43 Per Cent.

"The endowment fund," he said, "furnishes 43 per cent of our income; 50 per cent comes from students' fees and 7 per cent from other sources. Of our expenditures, 39 per cent goes for instruction, 30 more for library and laboratory expenses, 10 per cent for the care of the buildings and grounds, 4 per cent for administration and 3 per cent goes into a fund for retired professors."

In the evening the class of 1907, including Harold H. Swift, one of the university's trustees, was initiated into the Order of the Shanty. They marched in a body to Stagg field, where once the shanty for which the order is named stood—a hot dog and refreshment stand. Each class when it has been graduated for a score of years is initiated into this order.

Hold Annual "Sing."

Still later in the evening all gathered in Hutchinson court on the campus where 2,134 students and alumni, members of various fraternities, gave the annual "sing." Sigma Chi, with 144 members present, won first prize, a loving cup. Phi Kappa Psi was second with 143 members present, and Beta Theta Psi had 139 on hand.

Coach A. Alonzo Stagg presented "C" blankets to all the graduates who had majored in athletics, and "Babe" Meigs, former University of Chicago athlete, in turn presented the university with a bronze bust of Coach Stagg to be placed in a niche in Bartlett gymnasium.

TRIAL IN ITALY OF MURDERERS OF MASONS IS FARCE

Fascisti Keep All Details Veiled in Mystery.

BY DIPLOMATICUS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1927: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, June 11.—Three trials during the last fifteen months in Italy have given the nation cause to wonder what justice in Italy has become. The first occurred at Chieti more than a year ago, when the murderers of Deputy Matteotti were convicted, their sentences reduced by the extenuating circumstances of their victim's politics and attitude toward Facism, and eventually made meaningless through the application of the royal amnesty.

For Dumini even such clemency was not enough. He sought acquital, and when he did not receive it, was overheard to remark, "If I received seven years for my part in the affair, the Duce should have had thirty years." [Maximum sentence for such crimes.] For this Dumini was sent back to jail on a longer stretch than the first punishment called for.

Try Grand Orient Masonry.

The second trial was the process against Gen. Capello, Tito Zaniboni and others, accused of a plot against the duce. After Zaniboni's confession, the trial became one of Grand Orient masonry and through "revelations" made by a certain Quaglia, a renegade and turncoat whose testimony bore every stamp of being manufactured, Sig. Torigianni, the grand master of the Italian Grand Orient lodge, without a hearing, was hustled away to the island penal colonies for five years.

The details of these two trials are fairly well known, but the third has remained shrouded in mystery. It, too, occurred at Chieti, and the men before the bar of justice were a group of young Fascists accused of the murder of two Scottish Rite Masons, and of the looting of shops and premises of other Masons in Florence early in October, 1925.

Two Scottish Rite Masons Slain.

About fifty persons were badly beaten in the Florence riots, and shops owned by Free Masons or men suspected of being connected with the Masons were sacked. Gaetano Pilati and Gaetano Consolo, prominent Scottish Rite Masons, were murdered.

On the night of the riots a member of the local Fascist directory and a senior officer in the militia, Cavaliere Lupporini, accompanied by another Fascist, Sig. Gambacciani, called at the house of Cavaliere Bandinelli, a 60 year old Florentine accountant, and demanded a full list of local Free Masons, which he believed to be in the house.

Sig. Bandinelli refused, whereupon Lupporini struck him in the face. Sig. Benciolini, who was in the house, drew a revolver, killed Lupporini, and wounded Gambacciani.

16 Fascists Put on Trial.

A group of Fascists waiting outside burned the house and killed Benciolini. From there the mob visited the houses of several other prominent Masons, burned the homes, killed Signors Pilati and Consolo, and beat other victims.

Four Fascists were forced to answer to the Court of Assizes for the death of Sig. Pilati, and twelve others faced trial for the death of Sig. Consolo, for the attempted murder of Ademaro Cozzi, Scottish rite Mason, and for the burning of the shop of Sig. Busoni and the law offices of Sig. Corrazzini.

This trial was a farce from start to finish. In the first place, it was widely known in Italy that the men on trial for this particularly brutal crime of mob violence were not the men actually guilty of the murder. Although the authors of the crime were known to several hundred persons, among them high officials of the Fascist régime, they were permitted to escape.

Use Massachusetts Man's Comment.

The comment of the Grand Master of the Massachusetsts lodge, Scottish Rite, on the arrest of Sig. Torigianni, grand master of Grand Orient Masons of Italy and his sentence to five years in the penal colonies, was widely printed in Italy, to indicate that American masonry approved of the action of the duce.

True it is that American and English masonry does not recognize Grand Orient masonry, but few Americans understand that Scottish Rite masonry, previous to the war, had become an important organization in Italy, and it has been as ruthlessly hunted down by Fascism as has the Grand Orient.

In fact, the only occasions of mob violence against Masons in Italy, those at Florence, were condoned by the Fascist régime.

Mussolini Assailant Gets 30 Years.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, June 11.—Gino Lucetti must serve thirty years in prison for his attempt on the life of Premier Benito Mussolini last September. This was the sentence of the special tribunal which concluded its deliberations shortly after 7 o'clock this evening. The accomplices, Leanardo Sorio and Stefano Vatteroni, were condemned to twenty years, and eighteen years and nine months, respectively.

HERO AWARD WON BY COP WOUNDED IN HOLDUP FIGHT

Tribune Gives $100 Prize to Sergt. Wm. Shultz.

Two bandits, attempting a holdup the night of May 14, encountered Sergt. William R. Shultz of the Shakespeare police station. They shot him three times, one bullet breaking his leg, another gashing his head, and a third his arm. But he kept on fighting.

When Shultz's gun was empty he fought with his bare hands. One of his assailants struck him several times with the butt of a revolver. Half blinded by the blows, he still was fighting when they finally beat him into unconsciousness. Both men were captured later.

"The heroism and devotion to duty shown by Sergt. Shultz can hardly be paralleled," reported Capt. W. J. Harding.

Given Tribune Award.

THE TRIBUNE agrees with him and hence gives Sergt. Shultz its $100 hero award for the month of May. The check will be delivered to him at the Lutheran Memorial hospital where he is convalescing.

Sergt. Shultz is 38 years old, unmarried and lives at 2223 North Kedvale avenue. He has been on the force eleven years.

The policeman was listening to derby results on a radio in the soft drink parlor owned by Samuel Rudy, at 3859 Altgeld street. He was off duty, although in full uniform.

Rudy, his wife, and a customer, standing in the front of the room, suddenly lifted their hands at the command of two gunmen who entered the front door. Then the bandits saw Shultz and opened fire. Shultz's leg was shattered at the first shot. The policeman drew his own gun and started firing, two of his bullets striking Ignatius Strazdas, one of the pair, in the shoulder. Then the two wounded men grappled, while Thomas Croker, the second banit, held the Rudys and the customer at bay.

Beaten By Second Bandit.

For several minutes the struggle continued, Shultz getting the better of it despite his broken leg and weakness from the loss of blood. Then the second robber battered the officer's head with his revolver until he sank to the floor unconscious.

Both men then ran to a car parked outside and escaped.

Strazdas was arrested a half hour later when he tried to have his wounds dressed at the Bridewell hospital. Croker also was apprehended along with four other men and two women, who, according to Capt. Harding's report to Chief Hughes, confessed to two murders and more than a hundred robberies.

"The apprenhension of this gang is the best work performed by the department in a good many years," the captain wrote. "Too much cannot be said for the courage shown by Sergt. Shultz."

Two Others Praised.

Exceptional bravery by two other policemen, Patrolmen Harry Bossen and James Mulhern, reported by Capt. William Killeen, also receives commendation in connection with the hero award this month.

The patrolmen, after a running fight, captured two alleged cracksmen who attempted to rob the Ambassador theater, 5825 West Division street, May 31. Each policeman pursued, caught, and disarmed his man, ignoring the risk of being shot in the darkness.

One instance of unusual bravery was recorded in the fire department. Fireman George Jaques of Engine company 79 on May 11 killed a mad dog attacking a group of small children on the street.

Ernest Krause, 45, of 2422 North Ashland avenue committed suicide yesterday by inhaling gas in his home. He formerly was a building contractor and according to relatives had been despondent over financial reverses.

WOMAN DIES OF INJURIES.

Mrs. Henrietta Dietz, 76, of 6215 South Hoyne avenue, died at the German Deaconess hospital yesterday as the result of injuries in a fall from a street car on June 5.

SPECIAL COURT FIGHTS TO AVERT BOND SCANDALS

One of the causes of professional crime—the laxity of the courts in accepting bonds to free criminals on bail—is in a fair way of being remedied, it is revealed in a study of the recently created bond court, presided over by Judge Edgar A. Jonas of the Municipal court.

Rings of professional bondsmen have been broken up and their leaders imprisoned. Crooked policemen who led innocent prospects to the bondsmen have been punished.

Detects Many Frauds.

Many kinds of fraud which rendered futile the course of the law against habitual criminals—the thieves and burglars and gangsters who are specialists in organized crime—have been discovered by Judge Jonas. He has related the most unusual cases, causes and remedies in interviews with THE TRIBUNE.

One rule proved sound in the bond court has become the text under which the entire machinery of the court is run. It is this:

"High bonds do not hold the criminal, but good ones do."

Judge Jonas' aim has been to make the bonds, high and low, as good as Uncle Sam's Liberty bonds.

Work of Bond Court.

Four major functions of the bond court are cited by its presiding judge:

1. The establishment of the court by Chief Justice Harry Olson, has provided a central bureau where all the courts may prove the validity of bonds.

2. A card index is kept of every person giving a bond in the court—how many bonds he has signed, whether any ever have been forfeited, how many liens are on the property scheduled, etc. One slip in a bondsman's record and he goes on a blacklist.

3. When a criminal fails to appear for trial and the bond is forfeited, action is begun the same day to realize on the property scheduled, instead of delaying action for months during which the bondsmen transferred the property to accomplices.

4. Every bond is investigated in the records of the county recorder to make certain that the bondsman is the rightful, registered owner, and that the property scheduled is properly described.

Bail must be reasonable, under the constitution of the United States, Judge Jonas points out, and with the supreme court of Illinois holding high bonds illegal, the decision was made to make all bonds valid, as far as was humanly possible.

Millions in Forfeitures.

The great scope of this task may be seen in this statement of Judge Jonas:

"If the forfeited bonds of the last twenty years were converted into judgments they would amount to between five and six million dollars."

"And not a cent of that has been collected," the judge added.

"Bands of these human parasites who prey upon the courts have existed and thrived in apparent security within the very corridors of justice," Judge Jonas said. "They were all over and everywhere. In some criminal branches they virtually took possession and control, dictated policies and established rules and regulations.

"From a check up made of the few statistics available it is reasonable to assume that this organization has plundered innocent victims out of hundreds of thousand of dollars that has been paid to them for signing false and fraudulent bonds. It was blackmail and extortion."

Says Some Cops Helped.

That a clique of policemen rounded up dozens of prisoners several nights a week just to drum up a good trade for bondsmen, was charged by Judge Jonas.

"When I arrived to preside over the Town Hall branch of the Municipal court," he said, "that institution was boasting two well established bond brokers and one bond solicitor. The bond broker left his bonds, signed in blank, with the desk sergeant.

"Then the policemen made the raids and arrests that usually took place on Saturday or Sunday night. The majority of the arrests were of working men and artisans who were making substantial salaries. The charge against them was disorderly conduct, which under our ordinance can cover every conceivable misunderstanding and evil. Men were seized on their way home, just a bit groggy from a stop at a moonshine shop. They were shoved into cells, eight or ten being wedged into a single cell.

"When all the prisoners with money had been freed the division of the spoils was in order.

"Some nights the collection would run from $400 to $500. And it took place right under the ears, eyes and noses of the policemen in charge. May it be said to the credit of the commanding officer that when the knowledge of what was going on was brought to his attention he immediately took every precaution to stamp it out."

HERE ARE THINGS TO RECALL WHEN DISPLAYING FLAG

June 14 Day to Honor the Federal Emblem.

"The national flag represents the living country and is considered as a living thing, the union being the honor point," declares the war department flag circular, issued so that Flag day, June 14, may be properly observed and the citizenry schooled in flag etiquette.

This coming Flag day, next Tuesday, is the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the adoption by congress of the Stars and Stripes as the emblem of the nation, and is to be fittingly celebrated. Col. Harry D. Orr, to insure proper respect for Old Glory, therefore, cites the following:

"Do not permit disrespect to be shown to the flag of the United States of America; do not let it touch the ground or trail in the water; do not permit it to be soiled or damaged or fastened so that it will be easily torn.

U. S. Flag Does Not Bow.

"Do not dip the flag of the United States to any person or thing. The regimental color, state flag, organization or institutional flag will render this honor.

"Do not display the flag with the union down except as a signal of distress.

"Do not place any other flag or pennant above, or, if on the same level, to the right of the flag of the United States of America.

"Do not use the flag as a drapery in any form whatsoever. It should never be used to cover the speakers' desk or to drape over the front of a platform. Use bunting of red, white, and blue.

"Do not drape the flag over the hood, top, sides, or back of a vehicle or railroad train or boat. When the flag is displayed on a motor car the staff should be affixed firmly to the chassis or clamped to the radiator cap.

Flag Should Be on Staff.

"Do not display the flag on a float in a parade except from a staff.

"Do not use the flag as a covering for a ceiling.

"Do not carry the flag flat or horizontally, but always aloft and free.

"Do not use the flag as a portion of a costume or an athletic costume, nor put lettering or advertising upon it.

"Learn how to display the flag on all occasions."

Col. Orr told of two incidents of recent date. A hotel flag was at half staff because the manager's dog had died. The flag in a city park was at half staff because a relative of one of the commissioners had died. These happenings showed disrespect and ignorance, Col. Orr said.

Some of the events of next Tuesday are ceremonies at the Chicago Historical society, annual drill at Glenwood manual training school, exercises by the Hanson Park school, and Forges post, 196, American Legion, honoring the flag in the courtroom of Judge Matthew D. Hartigan.

Recommendation that a national flag code, providing strict regulations for respect to the colors, be adopted was made yesterday at the annual convention of the Eleventh district of the American Legion, held at Elgin.

Prepare for Flag Day Tuesday

The one at the rear was made of a large garrison flag taken from the Confederates by Sherman's cavalry. The banner in front was carried by the 28th Mississippi cavalry. U. S. WILLING TO DISCUSS WAR BAN WITH FRANCE

Washington, D. C., June 11.—[Special.]—The state department today announced this government's willingness to open diplomatic conversations with the French government on the subject of a treaty forever outlawing war between the two governments.

The statement is in reply to Foreign Minister Briand's suggestion of April 6 that France would be willing to negotiate a treaty with the United States providing that neither country would ever go to war with the other. This development was followed last week by a message from Ambassador Herrick at Paris, stating that Minister Briand had informally discussed such a peace treaty with him and had inquired if this government was ready to open conversations on the subject.

Result of Lindbergh Reception.

The American communication, which is interpreted as capitalizing the "spirit cordiale" that has developed between the two countries as the result of Lindbergh's sensational hop to Paris and his enthusiastic reception there, reads as follows:

"In response to an informal inquiry made on June 2 by M. Briand, foreign minister of France, through Mr. Herrick, the American ambassador, the latter has been authorized to inform M. Briand that the United States will be pleased to engage in diplomatic conversations on the subject of a possible agreement along the lines indicated by M. Briand's statement to the press on April 6 last."

In a message sent April 6 to the American people on the occasion of the tenth anniversary of America's entrance into the world war, Minister Briand asserted that "America and France, while following different roads towards peace, are both working toward the same goal.

Parley to Set Treaty Terms.

"If there were need of it between the two great democracies in order to give high testimony to their desire for peace and to furnish a solemn example to other peoples, France would be willing to enter into an engagement with America mutually outlawing war," the French foreign minister said.

The state department is of the opinion that the aims sought by M. Briand are largely if not completely met by the Briand "cooling off" treaty of 1914, providing for a commission to consider any accute issue between the two countries, but is ready to discuss with France any proposals she may care to make supplementing or amplifying the general objects set forth in the treaty.

DIES OF FRACTURED SKULL.

Victor Hren, 50, of 2516 Blue Island avenue, died in the county hospital yesterday of a fractured skull. Hren was found Friday evening on the sidewalk at Leavitt street and Blue Island avenue.

1,000 DOCTORS TO SEEK PERFECTION IN SCIENCE HERE

Physicians from all parts of the United States will take post-graduate work in Chicago for the next two weeks at the second annual summer clinic, conducted by them under the auspices of the Chicago Medical society.

Through coöperation of the major hospitals of Chicago and the presence of distinguished clinicians, who will put all their experience and research at the disposal of the students, the opportunity offered the visiting physicians will be as great as they could find in any of the other medical centers of the world, London, Paris or Vienna.

The bulletin of the Medical society announcing the clinics says:

"Men known to the four corners of the medical world and whose names are synonymous with marvelous skill, tremendous learning and broad experience will be found listed among the clinicians to conduct classes in every phase of medicine and surgery.

"The public is constantly demanding better training among physicians, and rightly so. Medicine is a science, although unfortunately not an exact one, and rests upon the foundation stones of research and experiment. Unless we are prepared to avail ourselves of the advances in science constantly being brought forward we cannot hope to maintain medicine on the exalted plane on which it has rested for centuries."

More than a thousand physicians are expected to attend the clinics. Three hundred already have registered from eighteen states.

CHRYSLER
Accomplishes Unprecedented Feat

From San Francisco to New York and Return to Los Angeles—6720 miles in 167 hours—6 days and 23 hours—the world's most astounding proof of Chrysler supreme speed and stamina.

Mr. L. B. Miller, Director of Sales Promotion of the Stover Signal Engineering Company, of Racine, Wis., performed this amazing transcontinental driving feat in his personally owned Chrysler Imperial "80" Phaeton, to demonstrate the safety and ease of night driving behind a pair of Ilco Ryan-Lites, with which his car was equipped.

Twice across the continent—a complete round trip from San Francisco to New York and back to Los Angeles—in this stupendous accomplishment Chrysler Imperial "80" establishes itself beyond all dispute as the world's leader in motoring performance and stamina.

Not content with breaking all one-way transcontinental records by driving his personal stock Imperial "80" from San Francisco to New York in 79 hours, 55 minutes—absolutely without mechanical adjustment—Mr. L. B. Miller, of Racine, Wis., accompanied by Mr. John Wieber, of Portland, Ore., turned right around without losing a moment's time and sped back to the Pacific Coast, over the National Old Trail to Los Angeles—

A transcontinental round trip of 6720 miles in 167 hours, 59 minutes.

Never before had such a trip been attempted, much less completed.

The Chrysler Imperial "80's" achievement is so staggering as to be almost beyond comprehension.

From coast to coast and back again—6720 miles in less than 7 days, averaging nearly 1000 miles a day and maintaining this terrific pace for a week—not over a prepared speedway, but through cities' traffic tangles, over mountain trails, rutted dirt roads, through mud and gumbo, as well as over concrete, brick and gravel.

"Never did I dream there was such a car as the Imperial '80'," said Mr. Miller en route. "I have never seen its equal. My maximum speed was 85 miles an hour. Across Nebraska and Iowa—in hail, sleet and rain—we averaged 56 miles an hour. From San Francisco to New York we averaged over 42 miles an hour to set our world's record. This double transcontinental test proves the Chrysler "80" beyond question to be the highest quality and most dependable car ever built."

Nor is the announced time the elapsed running time, but is the total elapsed time beyond start ing and finishing points, meticulously checked by Highway and Western Union Officials.

Miller and his car left San Francisco on Tuesday, May 31st at 10 a. m. Pacific Coast Time, reached New York on Friday, June 3rd, 9:55 p. m., Eastern Daylight Saving Time, and arrived in Los Angeles on Tuesday, June 7th, 9:59 a. m.

No greater proof can be given of the remarkable ruggedness and endurance of the Chrysler Imperial "80". No higher proof can be given of its smoothness of performance, its handling facility and the riding comfort of its unique spring suspension and rubber shock insulation—all factors in the accomplishment of this astounding record.

In short, no more convincing proof than this supreme test can be offered of the quality, engineering design and precision manufacturing which make every Chrysler Imperial "80" as fine as money can build.

FARM BOY AND TOWN GIRL ARE HEALTH WINNERS

Edna Baird, Willis Clark Get High Scores.

Edna Baird, 12, of Glenview and Willis Clark, 12, of Northfield were chosen yesterday by three physicians as the healthiest girl and boy among the 50,000 pupils of schools in Cook county outside the city limits.

Seven boys and seven girls were final entrants after elimination contests were held. So thorough were the final examinations that the two winners won by but a point or two, their poise and posture rating them slightly above the others.

Schools Share in Honors.

Willis, a sturdy farmer boy who attends the one room schoolhouse at Northfield, was given a gold medal and a banner, which will be hung in the school, giving it the health championship for boys for 1927. Edna, a pretty blonde, who is a small town girl, also received a gold medal and a banner.

The judges were Health Commissioner Herman N. Bundesen, Dr. William A. Evans, health editor of THE TRIBUNE, and Dr. Frank L. Rector.

The conditions on which the girls and boys were graded and the scores made by the two winners were as follows:

	Willis Clark.	Edna Baird.
Nutrition	15	15
Vision	5	5
Hearing	5	5
Nose	5	5
Tonsils	5	5
Teeth	10	9
Glands	4½	5
Skin and scalp	5	5
Posture	10	9
No chronic disease	10	10
Vaccination	5	5
Totals	79½	78

Other Prize Winners.

Milton Stapleton, 14, Melrose Park, and Carl Waterman, 12, of South Holland, rated second and third respectively among the boys. Elizabeth Rucus, 11, of Chicago Ridge, and Verna Jungles, 13, of Lemont, were second and third among the girls. The contest will be held annually hereafter, according to County Superintendent of Schools Edward J. Tobin.

They're Cook County's Healthiest Kids

Edna Baird, 12 years old, of Glenview school, and Willis Clark, also 12, of West Northfield school, were yesterday adjudged the girl and boy champions in the finals of the county's first health contest.

BOY'S BODY FLOATS MILE.

The body of Peter Giery, 10, of 1822 Blair street, drowned in the river at Twenty-second and Lumber streets May 24, was recovered yesterday by John Conway, a bridge tender at the Loomis street bridge, a mile from the scene of the drowning.

STEPS OFF CAR, ROBBED.

Walter Kuchenbacher, 4144 North Cicero avenue, was accosted and robbed of $10 cash and a $1,000 diamond ring yesterday by two men in an automobile as he left a street car at North Cicero avenue and Irving Park boulevard.

BEAT AL SMITH IN 1928, BATTLE CRY OF WOMEN

Revolt Is Threatened in Democratic Party.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 11.—[Special.]—Probably nothing on the political horizon is causing national Democratic leaders so much apprehension as the active part women are planning to play in the 1928 presidential campaign.

GOV. AL SMITH.

Since the adoption of the suffrage amendment, no issue so particularly appealing to women as the prohibition question has been presented in a national campaign and never in the same period have women and women's organizations generally become so thoroughly aroused.

Prohibition is not likely to be a problem to be dealt with by the Republican party in its 1928 convention, but to the Democrats it threatens a major crisis over the question of whether Gov. Al Smith of New York or some other "liberal" or wet candidate shall be given the presidential nomination, and the party, inferentially at least, pledged to fight for modification of the Volstead act.

Law Enforcement League.

Anticipating the contest which is almost sure to come, Democratic women leaders in session here a few weeks ago organized the National Women's Democratic Law Enforcement league as the nucleus for a nation wide organization of Democratic women's enforcement clubs in every city, town and village. Two days were spent in attacking the candidacy of Gov. Smith, warning the Democratic national committee that Democratic women voters will not stand for a wet candidate and threatening to bolt the party if a wet is nominated.

A few days later, the Woman's National Committee for Law Enforcement, a nonpartisan group, composed of the representatives of women's organizations claiming an aggregate membership of more than 8,000,000, met in its third annual convention at Providence, R. I., and resolved "to require for our votes presidential candidates whose public pledges and private performance uphold the eighteenth amendment."

"If this means making the eighteenth amendment an issue in the 1928 elections then we are prepared to make it the issue," the resolution concluded.

Schooled in Politics.

Affiliated with the Woman's National Committee for Law Enforcement are the General Federation of Women's Clubs; Young Women's Christian association; Congress of Parents and Teachers; Council of Women for Home Missions; Federation of Women's Boards of Foreign Missions; International Order of Kings' Daughters; National Council of Women; American Legion auxiliary, and the Woman's Christian Temperance union.

The W. C. T. U., schooled in politics by close association with the Anti-Saloon league for years, claims a membership of 600,000, and its president, Mrs. Ella A. Boole, is already engaged in a campaign being pressed "particularly in the south, where the women are mainly dry and all Democrats," to "educate that Al Smith is a wet and always will be."

Mrs. Boole has declared that failing to prevent Smith's nomination in the Democratic national convention, women will defeat him at the polls.

A little study of statistics and of the history of the woman suffrage movement explains the panicky feeling that Democratic national leaders admit when discussing the threat of united political action by women who heretofore have not followed a line of sex cleavage in casting their votes in national and seldom in state or local elections.

49 Per Cent Are Women Voters.

Present estimates are that 58,000,000 American citizens will be eligible to qualify under the election laws of the states to vote in the 1928 presidential election. Of this number of potential voters, 28,500,000, or about 49 per cent are women. Heretofore, since the adoption of the suffrage amendment, not more than 35 or 40 per cent of the women eligibles have gone to the polls in presidential elections.

However, it is generally admitted that, notwithstanding the poor record made by women voters, in any presidential election which presented issues by which they were thoroughly aroused—and were aligned on one side in predominant number, while the men were fairly divided—the result would be determined by the woman's vote.

Prohibition, according to those Democratic leaders who see the nomination of Smith or some other wet as an almost foregone conclusion, is the logical issue to solidify the woman voters in 1928.

Oil Heat Saves Work and Money

Somebody has to shovel the coal—that costs money.

Somebody has to tend the fire—that costs money.

Somebody has to lug out the ashes—that costs money.

Somebody has to sweep, mop and dust—that costs money.

And the most expensive part of your house, your basement, is a total loss.

You can't dry out your washing there—too dirty.

You can't store anything there—too dirty.

You can't let the children play there—too dirty.

You can't use it for a den, an office, a billiard room, workshop or dance floor—too dirty.

Oil heat will save you money because it insures the health of you and your family—that's money. It relieves you or your wife or the janitor of a lot of dirty, disagreeable work—that's money.

Oil heat is more reliable and more efficient than any janitor can be.

By all means, before you throw your money away on coal and dirt, come and investigate. You owe it to yourself and your family.

Don't put it off. Now is the time to clean up your basement for good. Put in your tank, fill it up with oil at the summer price.

One trip to Revell's basement showroom may save you hundreds of trips to your own basement and many dollars besides.

SEEKS BUSINESS VOTE ON YEAR WITH 13 MONTHS

George Eastman Favors Cotsworth Calendar.

BY HARPER LEECH.

Leaders in American industry, finance, trade, labor and education are being polled by George Eastman, founder of the Eastman Kodak company, in an effort to ascertain and crystalize sentiment for calender reform.

American industrialism has developed a new science of measurement both in internal accounting and in general statistical measuremsnt of the volume of business which is having a marked effect in promoting business stability, but, it is pointed out, the measurement of time underlying all accounting and statistics is substantially today what it was in Egypt, when the economics of the first great civilization were determined by the annual overflows of the Nile.

Favors Cotsworth's Calendar.

Mr. Eastman is an advocate of the proposed international fixed calendar devised by Moses B. Cotsworth. This calendar proposes one important change from the Egyptian system, which was only slightly corrected when Julius Ceasar was pontifex maximus, the calendar was part of his job, and Pope Gregory VII. still later was enabled to employ the prestige of the church to secure a further revision to conform to better astronomical data.

The Cotsworth year would consist of 13 months of 28 days each, every day of the month falling on the same day of the week and year forever after its adoption. The odd day would come between Dec. 28 and Jan. 1 and would have no week day name, being called year day. The leap year day would fall between June 28 and July 1 on leap year and would have no week day name. The new month would be inserted between June and July.

The Cotsworth calendar has been under consideration since 1923 by the league of nations transit committee, and it also has met with the approval of astronomers, industrialists, and churchmen.

Affects Industrial Efforts.

Mr. Eastman points out that there is a difference of 11 per cent between February and March. There is an even greater difference in the number of working days, a most important factor in industry. With a difference of as much as 19 per cent in the working time of various months, our whole system of monthly statistical reports is thrown sadly out of gear and must be made comparable by expensive adjustments. Mr. Eastman declares that the equality of months would exactly quarter every month, thus harmonizing weekly wages and expenses with monthly rents, accounts, etc.

Pay days would recur on four fixed monthly dates. All periods of earning and spending would be either equal to or exact multiples of each other. Holidays always would occur on the same weekday. Every month-end would also be a week-end, an important conjunction in this age of leisure and recreation. All holidays could be placed on Mondays. Easter could be fixed.

Faster Money Turn-Over.

With thirteen monthly settlements during the year instead of twelve, there would be a faster turn-over of money; the same volume of business could be transacted with less money, which would effect a considerable national saving.

Mr. Eastman is sending out a sample of such a 13 period 1926 calendar used by a Worcester, Mass., manufacturing concern. Although that corporation has been forced to do a certain amount of duplicate work, such as rendering its customers' statements by the Gregorian calendar, it has used its 13 month system since 1918 and is much pleased with it. Mr. Eastman cites a number of other important business houses which have adopted the 13 period system.

SEES EVANGELICAL CHURCHES MERGED IN ONE DENOMINATION

New York, June 11.—(AP)—Robert E. Speer, moderator of the general assembly of the Presbyterian church in the United States of America, today expressed a hope that some day all evangelical Christian churches would combine to make one.

Speaking at the thirtieth annual conference of his church's board of foreign missions on the subject of "coöperation with other missions," Mr. Speer said his ideal was "one organically universal Christian church."

"I think we are coming to it," he said, "although some of the evangelical churches are not so quick to accept the idea as others, but I believe we will reach this ideal some day. This will not come in our time, however."

The speaker added that the Presbyterian church in missionary fields had gone a long way toward the realization of this ideal. He called attention to a unified Christian church with the reformed church in Korea, Japan, China, India, Mexico and Brazil and with congregational and reform churches in south China.

ITALIANS HERE TO SEND EMBLEMS TO DUCE AND KING

Italians of Chicago through Leopold Zunini, the Italian consul general here, will present next month to Premier Mussolini a finely wrought platinum and gold laurel wreath and to King Victor Emmanuel of Italy a bejeweled short sword, it was made known yesterday.

The laurel wreath, set with ten rubies, bears in Italian the inscription, "From the Italian People of Chicago to Il Duce." It will be accompanied by a message lauding the premier for "the Italian victory over bolshevism."

The sword that goes to the king is modeled after the favorite weapon of the ancient Roman soldier. Its hilt is a solid gold eagle, on either side of which are representations of the fabled wolf mother that suckled Romulus and Remus.

JUNE, IT SEEMS, IS A BUSY MONTH FOR STAR GAZERS

Report New Comet; Sun, Moon to Be Eclipsed.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Heralding an interesting month for astronomers, the discovery of a new comet was announced yesterday from New South Wales, in a message received by Prof. Philip Fox at Northwestern university observatory.

The name of the discoverer of this comet, which is in the southern part of the constellation of Capricorn, is Gale. He has discovered several other comets. This one is described as having a rapid motion and a magnitude of eight.

A search for this new celestial body was made yesterday at the Yerkes observatory of the University of Chicago at Williams Bay, Wis., but without success. Prof. E. B. Frost said last night that so far his station was without accurate data on the comet.

The Pons-Winnecke comet, which was discovered by Prof. George Van Biesbroeck of the Yerkes observatory, was seen there without the aid of a telescope just before dawn yesterday.

Easier to See Later.

"At present it is unlikely that Pon-Winnecke will be seen, because it is in line with the moon and dawn comes soon after the moon sets," said Prof. Frost. "But in about two weeks it will be three times as bright and I believe it can be seen then better with the unaided eye than with telescopes, as it is highly diffused. We believe it will appear as a nearly round body about three times the size of the full moon. It will not be spectacular, however, as Pons-Winnecke has no tail, like many comets."

At its nearest point the comet will be only 4,000,000 miles from the earth. On June 26 it will reach its maximum and may be located in the southeastern sky about midnight. Prof. Fox believes it may drop a few meteors on the earth.

Encke's comet, it is believed by astronomers, will be visible with telescopes during the month.

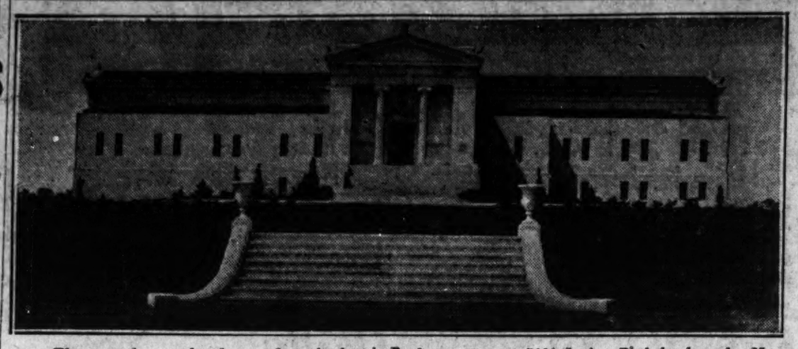
Moon Eclipse June 15.

In addition to the comets, there will be an eclipse of the moon on June 15, visible on the North American continent, except in the northeastern portion, at 1:45 a. m., daylight saving time. This will be pretty, according to the astronomers, but not unusual. The moon still will be visible, but it will be redder than usual.

The event of astronomical significance, however, for which preparations are being made in America and Europe, is the total eplise of the sun which will take place June 29. This will not be seen here, but must be observed in the north of England, Norway or northern Asia. The moon will pass between us and the sun, its shadow touching the earth at sunrise west of the British Isles.

The University of Virginia, Swarthmore, the Naval observatory and possibly other institutions are sending expeditions to Norway. The eclipse will be of short duration.

MASONS TO DEDICATE NEW MAUSOLEUM JUNE 26



The recently completed mausoleum in Acacia Park cemetery at 7800 Irving Park boulevard. Mayor William Hale Thompson will be among the speakers at the ceremonies.

Built of Marble

Thousands of Masons with their families are expected to attend the dedication of the Acacia Park cemetery mausoleum at 7800 Irving Park boulevard on Sunday, June 26. Mayor William Hale Thompson, the Rev. R. Keene Ryan, and Dr. Preston Bradley, pastor of the People's church, will be among the speakers.

The cemetery is restricted to Masons and their families. The mausoleum is built of marble and is 176 feet long and 111 feet wide. The interior is decorated with bronze and marble. There will be a large chapel.

The cemetery consists of 82 acres of sloping land. A 60 foot granite obelisk is the only large monument in the cemetery. Headstones are required to be of an equal size.

SUMMER BRINGS NEED OF ICE FUND TO SAVE BABIES

$4,045 Contributions Sent to Tribune.

In Chicago's tenement districts the doorways swarm with listless children on hot summer days. On the window sills above the street are glasses of butter melted to oil and bottles of milk turning sour in the hot sun.

Back o' the yards, down on Halsted street and in the Maxwell street market district babies have to drink that sour milk or none. It's a problem of buying the food itself, let alone the ice to keep it cool and sweet. Health Commissioner Herman Bundesen tells how the hot weather collects its toll of baby lives each year.

The Waiting Children.

In hot weather the little children are too miserable to play and the older girls hold feverish complaining babies. No lake breezes slip through the maze of buildings to them. They just sit and wait for the lumbering wagon which brings them ice in exchange for the free ice tickets made possible by the contributions of the people who live comfortably.

This year, as usual, the free ice tickets will be distributed to the charities applying for them by the United Charities at 203 North Wabash avenue.

List of Contributions.

The following contributions have been received:

$55—Delta Kappa Delta sorority bridge party.

$10—Temple Sholem Sisterhood, Ella M. Davis, treasurer.

$5—Mispah Aid society, Clara Hill, president; Jennie T. Sulles.

$1—A Subscriber; Mr. B. W. Hunter.

Previously acknowledged—$4,019.

Grand total—$4,095.

Your contribution, which may save a baby's life, will be gratefully received by THE TRIBUNE.

MAKE GIRL OPEN VAULT.

Two robbers looted the safe in the offices of the Northwestern Supply company, 1908 West North avenue, of $500 yesterday after standing three employés against a wall and compelling Miss Ida Gontocik, 1442 North Avers avenue, a bookkeeper, to open the vault.

MISS HAVEMEYER IS MARRIED TO LIEUT. GIDDENS

Miss Rosaline Havemeyer's military wedding to Lieut. Mitchell Giddens, which took place last night, and the marriage of Miss Mary Lee MacComas to Sidney Frederick Moody yesterday afternoon at the Will H. Lyford place in Wheaton were two of the important June weddings.

The full dress military ceremony at which the Herbert Havemeyer's daughter and descendant of Chicago's first citizen, John Kinzie, and Lieut. Giddens were united was picturesque, with the crossed swords of the ushers arching in an aisle formation as a grand finale. The service was read at the Riverside Episcopal church at 8:30 o'clock, and a reception at the Havemeyer residence followed. The bride wore a bouffant gown of white taffeta, faced with shell pink chiffon, and bridal veil that belonged to her grandmother. The maid of honor, Miss Mary Anna Beckwith, was in rose taffeta, and the bridesmaids wore shell pink chiffon.

The marriage of Miss MacComas, who is a daughter of Mrs. Eugene MacComas of the Edgewater Beach hotel, and niece of Mrs. Lyford, to Mr. Moody took place at 4:30 in the "House of the Seven Gables" drawing room, which was decked in white lilacs and peonies.

Mr. Moody and his bride are to be at home after Sept. 1 at Evanston.

75,000 TO MARCH IN CELEBRATION AT MUNDELEIN

The Rt. Rev. E. F. Hoban, D. D., spiritual director of the Holy Name society, and John J. Phelan, president of the Archdiocesan union, announce their plans for 75,000 men to participate in the Corpus Christi procession at St. Mary of the Lake seminary grounds, Mundelein, Ill., on next Sunday. This great procession will be held to commemorate the first anniversary of the Chicago Eucharistic congress of 1926. The services will be for women as well as for men.

Catholics of Chicago and surrounding towns are expected to be present. The program will be featured by benediction of the Blessed Sacrament, which will be given in connection with the Corpus Christi procession. Benediction will be given three times at three different shrines by his eminence, Cardinal Mundelein, archbishop of Chicago.

Every parish will be represented in the procession to the greatest possible extent in point of numbers.

UNION THEATER OFFICE TO STOP SCALPING URGED

Legislators Finish Probe of Ticket Monopoly Here

Finishing its investigation of theater ticket scalping in Chicago, the legislative committee, of which State Representative Thomas J. O'Grady is chairman, yesterday issued a report recommending legislation which would allow theater owners and managers to establish a consolidated ticket office with branches throughout the city, at which tickets would be sold at not more than 50 cents over the regular box office prices.

Ticket scalping can never be stopped, the committee members declared, so long as patrons of the theater find it more convenient to buy tickets at agencies even if they are forced to pay much more. The present law does not allow theater owners to sell tickets anywhere but in their box offices. The 50 cents premium, they assert, would be to cover the cost of maintaining a consolidated ticket office and its branches.

Two Brokers Out of Town.

The committee held several meetings and subpoenaed all the theater owners and well known ticket scalepers in the city. They failed to serve a summons upon Miss Florence Couthoui or Harry Waterfall who run the two largest ticket agencies. A sergeant at arms reported that these two persons were always "out of town" when he called.

"All the brokers who appeared before this committee testified that they can make a reasonable profit by charging 50 cents premium on each ticket," the report stated. "But testimony has been presented to the effect that patrons of some theaters in Chicago have been charged as much as $2.20 or $3.30 premium over the box office price.

"It has been shown that brokers have arrangements whereby they secure choice seats through theater employes without any knowledge on the part of the owner or manager. There are private telephones in the box offices of nearly all the theaters in Chicago, connected with some broker's offices, installed and maintained at his expense. It is apparent that some brokers have certain privileges with certain theaters."

Privileges of Return.

The investigation also showed, according to the report, that scalpers might return tickets to the box office at 7 p. m. but that in most cases, the scalper was not given credit for these tickets unless they were sold by the box office. In one or two instances, it was shown that some brokers had the privilege of returning a percentage of the tickets bought by them and that this percentage ranged from 10 to 25 per cent.

Other members of the committee in addition to Mr. O'Grady, were Elmer Holmgren, John Garriott, Lawrence C. O'Brien, and Harry McCaskrin.

L. B. Miller, veteran race driver, the man who broke his own world's transcontinental record in his Ilco-Ryan-Lite demonstration run. Mr. Miller has crossed the continent 21 times by automobile, but has never before been able to establish such an unusual record as this.

Miller establishes amazing round trip transcontinental record with ILCO-RYAN-LITES

Travels from San Francisco to New York City in 79 hours, 55 minutes, New York City to Los Angeles in 88 hours and 4 minutes, in a continuous 6,726 mile day and night run —less than one week's total elapsed time!

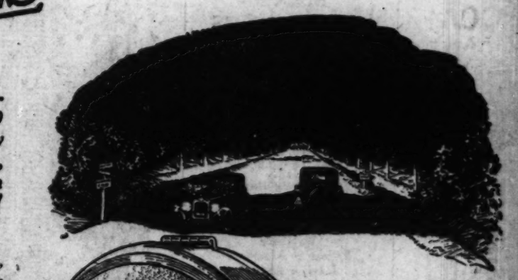
TOTAL 167 HOURS 59 MINUTES

BATTLING against time, against cold and heat, against adverse road conditions, across mountains and desert, L. B. Miller has just safely ended his record-breaking round-trip Ilco-Ryan-Lite Demonstration Run, leaving San Francisco at 10:00 A. M. May 31st, arriving in Los Angeles June 7th at 9:59 A. M., VIA NEW YORK CITY! Ilco-Ryan-Lites, the headlights that floodlight the road, made possible this impressive world's record!

With the throttle wide open, Miller hurled his Chrysler Imperial "80" across the continent and back again. "At 80 miles per hour," said Miller, "Ilco-Ryan-Lites made all of the road and roadside visible for a great distance. Due to their long range and wide arc of illumination, I was able to maintain daylight speed at night over all roads, thru mountain passes and around treacherous hairpin turns. In setting previous one way transcontinental records, two headlights, two spotlights and a ditchlight were used to give me clear vision. On this trip no lights other than one pair of standard Ilco-Ryan-Lites were used and these alone were sufficient."

Never before have any headlights been given such an unusual test. Never before have any headlights so convincingly demonstrated their long-range, non-glare floodlighting ability.

These self-same record-breaking Ilco-Ryan-Lites are now available for your car. Have your dealer give you an Ilco-Ryan-Lite demonstration. That's the only way to judge their wonderful capabilities. See him today for full particulars. Send the coupon for booklet, "How the Ilco-Ryan-Lite Floodlights the Road."



Note how completely Ilco-Ryan-Lites floodlight the road. The 200 degrees arc of illumination reaches far to each side and toward the rear of the car. When properly adjusted, Ilco-Ryan-Lites give remarkably long range without glare! This is an important safety factor which every driver appreciates.

Available in two sizes — 9¾ in. and 11⅝ in. in diameter.

PRICES: $22.50 to $40 per pair

OLD FRIENDS TO GATHER HERE IN LINCOLN'S HONOR

Invited to Ceremony Over New Portrait.

Abraham Lincoln's old friends and neighbors in the days when the Lincoln's were just "plain folks"—the man who sold him groceries and the children who used to play with Will and Tad in Springfield—will be guests of the Lincoln park commissioners and the Chicago Historical society when the new portrait of the emancipator is hung in the park administration building sometime during the next few weeks.

"Only those who knew Lincoln intimately will be invited," David H. Jackson, president of the park board, said. "There are hundreds of people living who saw Lincoln and heard him speak, but we are asking only those who came into close contact with him."

Only a Few Left.

There are only a score or so of the "old timers" left in Springfield. James M. Garland, who was a bookkeeper in the store where Lincoln traded and who marked "paid" on the Lincoln grocery bill each Saturday night, is one of them. Another is Mrs. Martha Gourley Gehlman, a next door neighbor of the Lincoln family for 15 years. Letters from 14 old Springfield residents have been received by President Jackson during the last week.

"I saw Mr. Lincoln very often on the streets of Springfield," said John F. Bretz. "On one occasion I ran an errand for him for which he gave me a quarter."

Member of Boys' Club.

William B. Baker recalled being a member of a boys' club organized by Mr. Lincoln. Edward D. Keys said he played games with Lincoln's two sons, Will and Tad.

"For a few years I was employed in my uncle's store in Athens, Ill.," wrote C. S. Salzenstein. "Once Mr. Lincoln and a party of friends were driving through town and came to our store to borrow an ax. Later, returning with the ax broken, Mr. Lincoln insisted on paying for the damage, which my uncle refused to let him do."

As Illinois Knew Him.

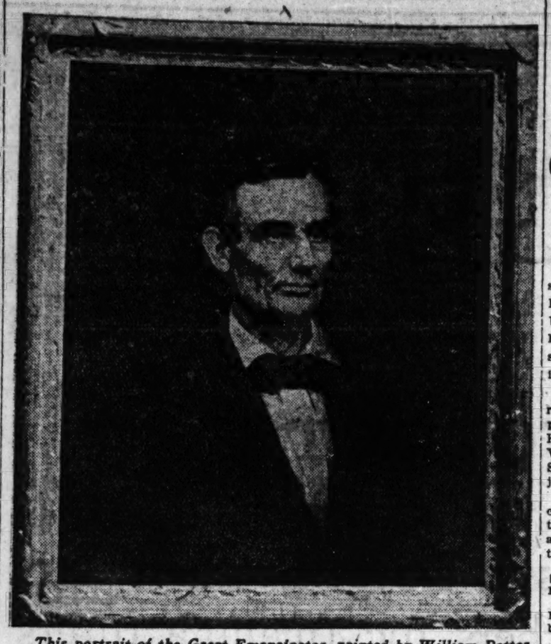
In the portrait to be hung at the park Lincoln appears "as Illinois knew him," without a beard. Great pains were taken by the painter, William Patterson, to create an authentic likeness. Plaster models were made from a life mask of Lincoln, and these were photographed from different angles to get the effect of different shadings. All existing photographs and tintypes of Lincoln were studied, and the result, according to those who were familiar with Lincoln, is an extraordinarily lifelike portrait.

The letters from old Springfield residents who have endorsed the painting will be bound and locked in the park vaults as an authoritative record that the picture hung in Lincoln Park is a true likeness of Mr. Lincoln. On the night of the dedication banquet photographic copies of the letters and the painting will be given as souvenirs to each guest. Gov. Len Small has been asked to preside at the ceremony.

BANK MESSENGER ROBBED.

Two armed men stopped their car near 2200 Lincoln Park West yesterday afternoon and robbed Louis J. Moore, 60, a messenger for the Belden hotel, of $600. The license number of the automobile was traced to W. H. Cottrell of 2164 West 112th street from whom it had been stolen.

AS ILLINOIS KNEW LINCOLN



This portrait of the Great Emancipator, painted by William Patterson, was ordered by the Lincoln park commissioners and will be hung in the board room of the new park administration building in the presence of old friends and neighbors of the civil war President.

First Services Today in Eugene Field Memorial

The first service in the Eugene Field Memorial cloister near the Church of the Holy Comforter in Kenilworth, Ill., will be held this morning at 11 o'clock with the Rev. Leland H. Danforth officiating. Communion will be celebrated at the memorial stone altar and the sermon will be preached by the Rev. David E. Gibson, pastor of the Cathedral Shelter.

New Midland Club to Have Opening June 16

Announcement of the informal opening of the new Midland club in one of Chicago's largest private club buildings, 25 East Jackson boulevard, on June 16 was made yesterday. A program of boxing and vaudeville acts has been arranged. Peter J. Angsten is president; Charles E. Schlytten, treasurer, and Richard P. Garrett, secretary.

A MESSAGE from the three Graham brothers

More than a year ago we sold our entire holdings in Dodge Brothers, Inc. (manufacturers of motor cars) and Graham Brothers, Inc. (manufacturers of motor trucks) and severed our active and financial connections with both organizations.

On June 10th we acquired control of the Paige-Detroit Motor Car Company, assumed full responsibility for management and invested over four million dollars in the company, thus providing substantial additional working capital.

Plant The Paige-Detroit Plant is modern, well located, well equipped and with the addition of the Wayne Body Plant which we have just purchased provides manufacturing facilities of a high order.

Product Twelve months investigation among users of Paige cars gave us satisfactory reports as to the worthiness of this product. Our policy will be to continue the production of Paige six and eight cylinder models in their several price fields. The public expects motor car executives to keep abreast of the times and make their product constantly better. We shall earnestly strive to do so.

Sales We shall endeavor to protect the merchandising organization now existing and progressively advance its interest, keeping in mind that the owner of Paige cars is best served through dealers who have the fundamental three C's—Character, Capability and Capital. By our business conduct we shall strive to make the Paige dealership a profitable enterprise for a substantial business man in every community.

Service During twenty-five years of industrial accomplishment we found that to Sell well was to Serve well. We shall continue upon the simple belief that the foundation under a greater Paige-Detroit Motor Car Company should not consist of brick and mortar but of the confidence of the American public in our integrity and ability as manufacturers.

We pledge ourselves to build that solid foundation for the future, step by step—stone by stone.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Four records for the games were shattered in the sixth annual outdoor individual track and field championships of the National Collegiate A. A. held yesterday on Soldiers' field. Fred Alderman of Michigan State carried off high point honors by winning the 100 and 220 yard dashes.

RAY CONGER.

The event, which attracted athletes who are sure to be members of next year's American Olympic team, drew only 4,000 spectators. The small turnout was a disappointment to the games committee which tried hard to interest amateur sports fans.

Athletes from 45 of the 70 universities and colleges represented figured in the scoring. Although a team champion was not determined, Illinois would have won yesterday's event if points had been awarded on a basis of five for first, four for second, three for third, two for fourth, one for fifth and one-half for sixth. The Illini, western conference champions would have scored 17 7-10 points. The remaining nine of the first ten high point scorers would have been Texas, 14¾; Washington, 14½; Iowa, 13¾; Pittsburgh, 13; Michigan State, 11; Michigan, 11; Northwestern, 10 6-10; Kansas, 8 and Chicago, 8. In future meets a team championship will be awarded.

Conger Breaks Mile Record.

Alderman, who won the 440 yard run in the eastern intercollegiate in :48, was the individual star of the games. The Michigan State flyer won the 100 and 220 yard dashes, but did not compete in the quarter mile. He won the century in :09 9-10 and the furlong in :21 1-10.

The record breaking was started by Ray Conger of Iowa State, one of the best middle distance runners in the country. He covered the mile in 4:17 6-10, shattering the old record of 4:18 8-10, made by J. Reese of Texas in 1925.

Conger ran a heady race. He allowed other runners to set the pace but never permitted himself to get in position to be boxed. He generally ran free and to the outside of the field. On the final lap he moved up toward the front and took the lead on the back stretch. At the head of the home stretch Conger was challenged by Elliott of North Carolina, but the Iowa State runner had too much in reserve and crossed the line four yards in advance of the southerner.

Phillips Clips 440 Mark.

Herman Phillips of Butler university of Indianapolis was the next athlete to break into the record smashing columns. He won the quarter mile in a close finish with Haynes of Denver and Butler of Geneva college. Phillips stepped the distance in :48 5-10, two-tenths of a second faster than his own record for the meet established last year.

Phillips drew the pole position and as the first half of the race his position was challenged by Haynes and Butler. This trio sprinted at top speed for the first half of the distance. The Butler runner, however, had too much speed and stamina for his challengers and as they turned into the home stretch, Haynes and Butler dropped back a yard. Herman kept on going and breasted the tape about two yards in advance of Haynes who was a yard in front of Butler.

Johnny Sittig of Illinois, winner of the half mile in the Western conference championship at Madison, Wis.

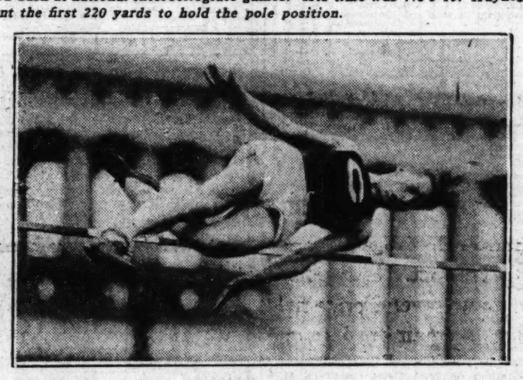
DASHING—VAULTING—JUMPING TO VICTORY

Herman Phillips of Butler breaks meet record in winning 440 yard dash at national intercollegiate games. His time was :48 5-10. Haynes of Denver was second and Butler of Geneva third. Phillips had to sprint the first 220 yards to hold the pole position.

William Droegemuller of Northwestern soaring 13 feet to win pole vault at Soldiers' field.



Anton Burg, University of Chicago, clears bar at 6 feet 5½ inches to tie Shepherd of Texas in the high jump.

THOSE WHO KNOW SAY JACK MEETS SHARKEY AUG. 11

New York, June 11.—[Special]—Unless something unforeseen develops, Jack Dempsey, the former Manassa mauler will trade stocks with Jack Sharkey, the loquacious Lithuanian, in a ten round bout at the Yankee stadium on or about August 11. The winner of this bout will battle Gene Tunney for the crown late in September.

Although Rickard hasn't made any formal announcement of the Dempsey-Sharkey hook-up he will get around to that little formality next week. It is said that Dempsey will receive a guarantee of $250,000 or the equivalent of 33 1-3 per cent of the net receipts. Sharkey would work on the short end of the purse, so anxious is he to prove he is entitled to the shot at Tunney.

Rickard has been negotiating with Dempsey for the last few months or ever since the day Jack set out for the tall timbers in Ojai, Cal., to work himself into comeback shape. According to reliable advices for the west coast Dempsey will head east within the next fortnight to establish training quarters at Uncle Tom Luther's just outside Saratoga Springs.

Chance Shot Wins $60,910 Belmont Stake

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, June 11.—The rich got richer and the poor got no better than a standoff this afternoon as Earl Sande, the noted nag skipper, gave a slight push on the lines and urged home Mr. Joe Widener's colt, Chance Shot, in the Belmont stakes, which is one of those thick money horse races known as a classic. Another colt named Bois De Rose, owned by Mr. Will Ziegler, the baking powder potentate, put on a belated hustle and nosed out a flapper horse by the name of Flambino, for second place, proving that there is no chivalry on the race track. Flambino ran third, which was something for a filly to do, in as much as no other has done as much in the last 14 years.

No Show or Place Bets Accepted.

Mr. Widener won $60,910, and he has about as much need of $60,910 as the Lindbergh boy has for an apologist, but those members of the laiety who wagered on his horse had to gamble $7 right on the proboscis to win a two spot. Moreover you had to place your funds on Chance Shot's nose or nowhere at all, as investment brokers realized that he couldn't lose unless somebody roped him.

Buddy Bauer, the Bradley horse who outran Whiskery in one of those innumerable mid-western derbies a week ago, was fifth in a six horse parade.

The six of them, Chance Shot, Bois De Rose, Flambino, Rip Rap, Buddy Bauer, and Gold Coin, almost got away to a walking start, for they had just bounced up to the barrier when the big garter snapped back and away they went with Flambino, who drew the outside position, scampering in the lead.

The girl horse seemed to be in motion as the barrier gave way. She had two lengths the better of it for the first few strides, but Sande brought his horse up in the second furlong and was leading at the quarter, with Flambino second, and they ran that way until 20 yards from the finish of a one and one-half mile route.

Just Another Sande Victory.

Sande had lengths to spare in the last quarter and you could see the black visor of his cap bending in the wind as he turned his head for a look back at Flambino and Bois De Rose. Winning the Belmont is a custom rather than an achievement for Sande by this time, for he won it in 1921 on Gray Lag, in 1923 on Zev, and again in 1924 on Mad Play.

In the division of the loot, the

GIANTS, BRAVES, REDS TALK TRADE BUT GET NOWHERE

Cincinnati, O., June 11.—(AP)—There will be no trading of players among the Cincinnati, Boston, and New York National league teams, at least not at present, Dave Bancroft, John J. McGraw, Jack Hendricks, and August Herrmann announced in unison today.

The statement was the same, although issued in various forms, when a meeting of the team magnates behind closed doors broke up with many gesticulations today.

The unofficial minutes of the meeting, as pieced together by baseball writers, infer that Mr. McGraw wanted to dispose of Hugh McQuillan, Giant pitcher, through almost any suggested agency.

All that Bancroft, the Boston representative, wanted was George Kelly. It is reported that another outfielder with a weak throwing arm was offered to the Reds.

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 11.—Tommy Thomas, arriving here from a visit with home folks in Baltimore just in time to see Lindy roll down Pennsylvania avenue, was overcome by the wild enthusiasm over aviation and came right out to Griffith stadium and staged a series of ascensions all his own. And the Senators flew off with a 9-4 victory.

During Tommy's unprecedented flights the Griffs made ten hits, all but two of which counted vitally in the production of the six runs which Washington had when Tommy retired for a pinch hitter in the eighth. The Senators grabbed three more runs and hits off Charley Barnabe in the eighth to make their total for the day.

Sox Start in Front.

The White Sox lost little time in getting at their former teammate for their only scores until two were down in the ninth. Metzler flied out to Harris, but Hunnefield followed with a single and Clancy laid a safety in front of Goslin, Hunnefield stopping at second. Barrett became the victim of a trick strikeout called by Umpire Rowland while Bill was outside the batter's box trying to conduct an argument. Falk walked and Kamm singled to left, putting Hunnefield and Clancy across. Capt. Will went to second and Bib reached third when Goslin juggled the ball. Ward walked and filled the basis for the second time in the inning, but McCurdy ended it with a fly to right.

In the second inning the Sox produced two runs after two were out when Hunnefield doubled and came in on Clancy's second single.

Senators Get Noisy.

The Senators became exceedingly boisterous in the second inning. Ruel started things by walking, and the bases were full when Bluege and Reeves singled in succession. Thurston flied to Metzler, then Rice singled to center, scoring Ruel and Bluege. Metzler had difficulty in getting a grip on the ball and was given an error when Reeves went to third and Rice reached second. Reeves tallied on Harris' sacrifice fly, and on the next play Rice trotted to third on Thomas' balk. The inning ended when Goslin flied to Metzler.

The score remained tied at 3 to 3 until the fourth, when the Harris outfit broke lose again. Reeves singled and Thurston sacrificed. Rice singled, sending in Reeves, and reached home himself when Goslin doubled after Harris had flied out. The side was out, however, when the Goose tried to stretch his hit to a triple.

Barnabe Relieves Thomas.

The Sox were extremely docile until the seventh, when Clancy led off with his fourth successive single and Falk, after Barrett had popped out, bounced one off the right field fence. For some reason not announced, Manager Schalk, coaching at third, held Bud at third, and through necessity Bib's blow was recorded as a double instead of a triple. Kamm watched the third strike go by, and Ward was thrown out by Reeves.

In the eighth Thomas retired for a pinch hitter and Barnabe took up the pitching chore. After striking out Reeves Charley revealed he possessed little save his glove and genial disposition. A combination of a walk, a single, a triple, and a single produced three runs before the thing was stopped by a double play.

Barrett and Kamm linked up a couple of doubles for one score in the ninth as the final Sox squirm of the day.

Yeddo, 14-1 Shot, Wins Illinois Oaks

BY FRENCH LANE.

Yeddo, a chestnut flash of speed from Texas and a daughter of Man o'War, ridden by Jockey Mark Fator, came from behind and won the second running of the $5,000 Illinois Oaks at Washington Park yesterday.

MARK FATOR.

The cheers of more than 15,000 were ringing in her ears as she scored her victory. She won like a daughter of Man o'War should by two lengths from Mary Jane, the Kentucky Oaks winner and favorite, and she won for Charlie ["Boots"] Durnell, the famous long shot specialist, who trained her and saddled her for the race. She was at $30.30 in the $2 mutuels, thus adding to the reputation of Long Shot Durnell. A tired Patriacia Marion staggered home at the end of a mile and furlong trip in third place. Handy Mandy from Kentucky was a nose back and fourth.

It was only ten days ago when Durnell sent Girl Scout from the same stable to win the $5,000 Inaugural handicap at odds of more than 30 to 1. Only three days ago he won a stake with Smiling Gus at 15 to 1, and now comes Yeddo at 14 to 1.

N. Y. Woman Buys Mary Jane.

Mary Jane the beaten favorite and the queen of 3-year-old fillies in Kentucky because of her victories in the Ashland Oaks at Lexington and the Kentucky Oaks at Churchill Downs, was sold for a reported price of $30,000 to Mrs. W. Averill Harriman, of New York, shortly before the race was run.

She sported the orange and blue silks of Mrs. Harriman in the race and although beaten was not disgraced.

Yeddo, sold as a yearling for $17,000 to J. D. Waggoner, of Texas, was never far back. Fator kept her about a length off the terrific early pace for nearly a mile. Then Yeddo moved up. So did Patricia Marian. They got up on even terms with Mary Jane. Yeddo, a picture horse like most of Man o'War's descendants, moved on but Patricia Marian found the pace too stiff and dropped back. That was the way they came on past the cheering thousands in the stands and on the lawns.

It was a fine setting for the running of an Oaks. You could see so many owners and breeders from Kentucky around the paddock, on the lawns and in the clubhouse that it would remind you of a Futurity day at Lexington.

Damosel Leaps into Lead.

Yeddo was so fractious at the post that it took a boy of Fator's riding ability to remain in the saddle. Once she broke away from the assistant starter and ran a furlong bucking at every jump.

When the webbing lifted, Damosel, from the Keenland stud in Kentucky, leaped into the lead. She clung to it rounding the first turn. Then Connelly sailed Mary Jane into the lead, but Yeddo was never more than a length or a length and a half back. Damosel was third, Krick fourth, and Patricia Marian fifth.

In that order they ran until they straightened out for home. Fator didn't have to punish Yeddo to move her alongside of Mary Jane. He only had to shake her up to shoot her into the lead. She was going away all of the last furlong and galloping easiest of all when the official numbers were hung out. Time was 1:54 1-5.

A great race card backed up the Oaks. The Nip and Tuck handicap, which was third on the program, brought a thrilling contest when H. Guy Bedwell's Cudgeller got up in time to head Rival and Sixty by a length after six dizzy furlongs.

The Lake Shore handicap at a mile could have served as a feature on any race card. It brought victory to Flagstaff, which runs in the silks of N. W. Church, millionaire sportsman of Elgin. He beat Val Crane's George Demar a nose and Banton was close up in third place.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

Something still lingers of that old Cubs-Giants enmity that grew up in the days of wooden grand stands and two bit bleachers. It lingers in the hearts of the fans who have had stories of those hectic diamond struggles handed down to them. It even lingers in the hearts of the players who were even too young for fairy tales when baseballs' biggest romance was being put together by actors now departed. It lingers to prove that there's still some "fight" remaining in our so-called national pastime.

CHARLEY GRIMM.

The time-honored feud surged forth yesterday in a wave of bitterness and a wave of desperation—the bitterness from 30,000 who razzed and cheered in turn and the desperation from the performers who struggled brilliantly through nine sizzling rounds that brought victory to the Cubs in the first of a four game series with the New Yorkers. The score was 2 to 1 and Chicago's winning streak now reaches to seven games.

Roush vs. Wilson.

Aside from a battle of pitching in which Charley Root threw himself to a decision over the slightly ancient Burleigh Grimes, it was a battle of center fielders—Hack Wilson versus Eddie Roush. It was a homer by Wilson that started the scoring. It was a sensational diving, sliding catch by Wilson that helped to bring the struggle up out of the mess of ordinary things. It was a homer by Roush that gave the Giants their lone tally after he had been turned back on a triple opening an inning. And it was Roush who stoned for the Wilson catch by picking a drive by Clyde Beck off the end of the bleachers when a Cub was waiting to score.

Further, Roush was the man who stirred up the attending populace. He exploded his triple with none dead in the fifth. DeVormer then walked but Grimm's great play on Grimes' bunt forced the backstop at second. Mueller followed with a bounder that Grimm scoped up and shot to the plate. Roush was nailed by a yard but he came in with spikes high and Hartnett, after tagging him, charged against the desposed runner as though determined to battle. He was shoved away, but the crowd took its cue from "Gabby" and Roush became the most unpopular gentleman in the county.

Hack Clouts No. 12.

It was the start of the fourth when Wilson staged his sensational slide to get Hornsby's low liner. They were still applauding the large and jovial Hack when he came up to the plate with two out in the home half of the inning. Grimes had no desire to participate in the celebration, but he inadvertently laid up a slow one letter high and on the outside. Hack likes those. He took a decidedly nonchalant slice at the ball, and away it sailed over the high brick wall in left field. Hack jogged around the lines for his twelfth homer of the season.

In the fifth, the crowd had its chance to say something in behalf of Eddie Pick, who made his debut as third sacker for McCarthy. Beck opened the inning with a single. Root forced him and Adams flied out. Then Pick, a rangy fellow, slashed the ball down the first base line for a double, Root stopping at third. Webb drew a pass, filling the sacks, and the stage was set for an heroic deed by Wilson. Hack's intentions were good, but his aim was bad. He fanned.

The Cubs picked up their second run, and the one that proved decisive, in the sixth. Grimm, whose fielding deeds had been life savers when Roush tripled in the fifth, cracked a three bagger to the foot of the left field line. Grimes didn't want to pitch to Hartnett so walked him. Then Pick lined a single to right and Grimm hiked home. Chicago's only real chance after this was when Hartnett doubled in the eighth and Beck rammed the ball to the end of the left center bleacher only to have Roush dash across the grass and grab it.

The fifth, when Roush was cut down after his triple, was the first round in which Root encountered real trouble. He might have had more of it in the sixth, but after opening the inning with a single Harper tried to race to third on Hornsby's hit to center. Wilson's bullet like peg to Pick stopped the mad dash. The next uprising was Roush's homer inside the park in the seventh. From this point the Giant attack gradually wilted and Root capped the climax by whiffing three men in a row in the ninth, one of them Roush and the others pinch batters.

4 Record Fall in Games on Soldiers' Field

recently, then came along and ran the best race of his career. He won his specialty in the record time of 1:54 2-10. This mark bettered the former meet record of 1:55 4-0 made by J. Charteris of Washington in 1925.

The Illinois athlete showed good judgment of pace throughout the event. He ran free of the field on the first lap but on the final circuit started to move up until he was on even terms with the leaders at the head of the home stretch. From this point it was a sprint to the finish with Charteris of Washington, the former record holder, making a strong bid for the honors. Gist of Chicago also flashed speed which threatened to take him into first place. As the trio raced down the stretch for the last hundred yards, Sittig drew away and won by three yards.

Spence Betters Hurdle Time.

The final record to fall was in the 200 yard low hurdle. Edwin Spence of the City College of Detroit won the event and lowered his own record of :23 5-10 by one tenth of a second. Frank Cuhel of Iowa gave the Detroit stick stepper a race all the way but in the final stages, Spence pulled away and won by two yards. Cuhel of Iowa was second and Reay of Carleton college third.

Baskin of Auburn Poly took the 120 yard high hurdles in :14 9-10 and Melvin Shimek of Marquette was victor in the two mile in 9:34 4-10. With the exception of the running broad jump which was won by Hamm of Georgia Tech with a leap of 24 feet, 1 inch and the running high jump in which Burg of Chicago and Shepherd of Texas tied for first place at 6 feet, 5¼ inches, other marks in the field events did not approach the meet records.

Droegemueller of Northwestern took the pole vault with an effort of 13 feet and Brix of Washington won the shot put with a mark of 46 feet 7⅜ inches. Pilling of Utah threw the javelin 199 feet 8 inches and Gwinn of Pittsburgh took the hammer with a throw of 155 feet 8 inches. Summaries:

HELP EXTEND CUBS' WINNING STREAK

Hack Wilson's bat paved the way for the Cubs' victory over the Giants yesterday. He is touching the plate after driving out his twelfth homer. The Cubs' bat boy is in the foreground.

Eddie Pick celebrated his debut with the Cubs at third base yesterday with a double. He made two putouts and two assists.

2 Upsets Mark Prep Baseball Semi-Finals

Two upsets marked the second round of the City High school baseball league's northwest section semi-finals yesterday at Logan Square park. Lane, the undefeated north division champion, fell before Schurz, 10 to 9, in a drawn out game, and McKinley upset Harrison, the west section title holder, 12 to 7.

While the Harrison-McKinley game was expected to be somewhat of a tossup because they divided in previous games, Lane was figured to drub Schurz since it already had won two games from Coach Smith's northwest side nine. But the Schurz batters were in a slugging mood and beat the Techs at their own game of piling up a flock of runs.

Brezizinski Gives 5 Hits.

The Lane-Schurz contest was a raggedly played affair with errors playing an important part in the scoring of both teams. Schurz helped Lane with seven costly bobbles, while Lane made four errors. Brezizinski twirled for Schurz and allowed only five hits, but gave eight bases on balls. The game lasted practically four hours and gave McKinley and Harrison a late start.

McKinley piled up seventeen hits in turning back Harrison. The winners took the lead in the second inning, and by adding to it in dabs of three, one or two, managed to keep out in front all the way.

All Four Teams Tied.

Yesterday's results complicate the standings, as all four teams in the northwest section semi-finals are tied, with one victory and one defeat. There is bound to be a tie at the end of the series, which is certain to defer the playing of the championship game set for June 18. Scores:

The Dougle $10

a Spalding Golf Shoe for the player who wants a Rajah Cushion Rubber Sole

THE upper is of tan calf with a brown saddle re-enforcement across the instep. The sole is the famous Rajah cushion rubber. It will not glaze nor wear smooth. Held in place by the two-unit process it cannot part company with the rest of the shoe. A special leather tip protects it from scuffing. And the shoe is leather-lined.

A true athletic shoe—one that only Spalding, with a background of 37 years as shoemakers to American athletes, could create. And only Spalding could offer for $10.

Spacek Took Five Minute Dip; Didn't Swim Channel

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, June 11.—The Czecho-Slovakian legation was made the goat tonight when witnesses at Calais definitely established that M. Spacek's English channel swim consisted of a five minute dip, in which he found the water too cold. He returned to his hotel and then went to Paris, where he coolly walked into the legation, and said he swam the channel in the record time of 10 hours 45 minutes and 7 seconds.

ROBINS FLY AWAY WITH PIRATES IN 9TH INNING, 11-10

Pittsburgh, Pa., June 11.—[Special.]—Brooklyn staged a four run rally in the final inning today to defeat Pittsburgh, 11 to 10. The Pirates rallied in their half, but Vance was rushed to the mound and fanned two batters after two runs had scored and the winning runs were on the bases. His first victim was Earl Smith, a pinch hitter, and the other was Barnhart, who had clouted two triples and a double on previous trips to the plate.

RIVER FOREST TENNIS TOURNEY HAS STAR FIELD

Headed by George Lott, ninth ranking player in the country, a record field of middle western tennis stars will open play tomorrow in the second annual River Forest tennis tournament at the River Forest Tennis club. Lott will return early in the week from Hartford, Conn., where he competed in the finals of the New England championships yesterday, to defend the title he annexed at River Forest last year.

Indiana is sending three of its greatest players in an effort to check the impressive string of victories hung up this year by Chicago's youthful city champion. Johnny Hennessey of Indianapolis, who won ranking in the first ten several years ago, when he was in active tournament competition, has entered, as have Julius Sagalowsky and Fritz Bastian, former Hoosier college stars.

Junior Coen, national boys' champion, who displayed a markedly improved brand of tennis during his southern tour with Big Bill Tilden this winter, will represent Kansas City, while Harris Coggeshall, runnerup for the junior title in 1925, will represent Des Moines.

Other out of town entrants include Ted Drewes, national public parks champion, and Bill Bascom, both of St. Louis, and Eddie Wilson and George Reindel of Detroit. Among the Chicagoans with title ambitions are Luke Williams, Art Shaw, Art Kaiser, Al Green, Jimmy Anderson, Jack Harris, and Le Roy Weir.

130 BIKE RIDERS RACE IN 22 MILE HANDICAP TODAY

A field of 130 riders will face the starter today in the 22 mile handicap race which features the annual bicycle derby of the Franklin Skating and Athletic club at Humboldt park.

The South Chicago Wheelmen top the list in number or entries and are favored to win the team championship. The Belgian-American club and Henry playground also have entered strong teams. In addition to the handicap, races will be held in classes A, B, and C. Twelve girls will compete in a special race.

AMERICAN DERBY MAY DECIDE 3 YEAR OLD TITLE

Bluebloods of Turf Will Come Together.

BY FRENCH LANE.

If Chance Shot, Buddy Bauer, Whiskery, and Valorous should come together in the American Derby to be run at the Washington Park track in Chicago on June 18 the race, once the most famous fixture on the American turf, will serve its purpose this year.

Add the name of Laddie to this quartet and you just about have the Who's Who among this year's 3 year olds. The championship should go to one of them unless there is an unexpected development among some of the other thoroughbreds of that age during the late summer or fall racing.

Buddy Bauer Proves His Worth.

Whiskery made his bid for the title by winning the Kentucky Derby. A couple of weeks later Buddy Bauer came along and beat Whiskery in the Fairmount Derby at the same distance. Chance Shot and Valorous, on victories scored in unimportant stakes in New York, must be kept in race. Laddie has come to the front with a rush in New York during the last few days and shows promise of developing into a great horse.

Osmand, Rolled Stocking, Rip Rap, Black Panther and others so highly regarded a few weeks ago have been given their chance and have failed so often that there doesn't appear to be a champion or near champion among them. Before the season ends several of them may be rated as very ordinary animals.

All of these leaders are eligible to the American Derby. Seventy others are also eligible to the race, and there may be an upset as great as the one which marked the running of the Fairmount Derby, when Buddy Bauer was the winner. But that one race in which he beat most of the really great 3 year olds of the country entitles Buddy Bauer to a place among the leaders. He was running so fast at the finish that smart horsemen believe the mile and a half of the American Derby will be more to his liking than the mile and a quarter of the Fairmount.

East Versus West.

While the Belmont stakes run yesterday will elliminate some of the leading American Derby candidates, the Chicago race is certain to bring an another east-west clash. Harry Payne Whitney and Joseph E. Widener have both indicated they will go after it. As Whitney owns Valorous and Whiskery and Widener is the proprietor of Chance Shot, Osmand and Laddie it is easy to see that the east even with only these two owners represented will have its greatest 3 year olds running for the American Derby prize.

Except for Buddy Bauer the west's prospects do not appear bright. Fred Jr. was injured in training and kept out of the Fairmount Derby and his owner says he will be ready for the American Derby. Bewithus will likely run coupled with Buddy Bauer and Boo may also start. J. W. Parish who owns Rolled Stocking is going to give that colt one more chance. The other westerners unless there is a 1,000 to 1 shot in hiding some place do not seem capable of offering strenuous opposition.

owner of the second horse received $7,500 and the owner of the third one, $3,000. They even gave $1,000 to Sage stable, owners of Rip Rap, which ran fourth.

All this money is accumulated in various ways. In the first place, they nominate horses for the Belmont a couple of years in advance, paying $10 for every one named. Then, on Nov. 1, two years before the race, it costs another $90 to keep each horse on the list and on July 15 of the year before the running there is another assessment of $100 on each head. Again on the last Tuesday in March of the year of the race, each steed needs $100 to keep eligible and finally there is a starting fee of $250, to all of which the racing association adds $25,000.

Ends Belmont Park Meeting.

This was the last day of the spring outing at Belmont Park and there was a very gay show of chiffon and such airy materials in the gatherings on the green sward where they saddle the animals and weighs the boys and their tackle. Summer seemed to be on hand and the girls were done up in considerable splendor, as they strolled about or took their ease in the stands.

No doubt this is why Belmont Park is famous for the pleasure it gives the eye although the geraniums are said to be quite lovely, too.

Johnson's Ruling Gives Yankees Protested Game

President Ban B. Johnson of the American league yesterday ruled that a ball in the dugout was out of play and refused the Philadelphia protest of the afternoon game on Memorial day which the Yankees won.

Catcher Grabowski of the Yanks in making a foul fly catch fell into the dugout while two Philadelphia runners scored. Connie Mack contended that the runners were entitled to as many bases as they could get, but the umpires ruled they could advance only two bases. Mack runners were on first and second at the time.

SWEET, ROLFE PLAY 9 EXTRA HOLES TO WIN

Beat Wallace, Quigley in Best Ball Match.

Something akin to a world's golf record was set in the final of the amateur best ball team match at Mid-City yesterday when Art Sweet and Ral Rolfe, both of Ridgemoor, battled William Wallace of Jackson Park, Lincolnshire, and Mid-City and Al Quigley of Columbus Park 27 holes in a scheduled 18 hole match before they reached a decision. Eight extra holes halved is something of a mark to shoot at. Sweet and Rolfe won, 1 up, on the 27th hole.

The golfers took turns in showing flashes of brilliant golf, Quigley starting the fireworks by sinking three twenty foot putts on the first nine and putting his team three up. Then it was Sweet's turn, and twice on the second nine, on the tenth and thirteenth holes, he sank chip shots from off the green for wins.

Starting the extra holes Wallace and Rolfe took up the burden, shooting par for par and birdie for birdie for eight holes. On the twenty-seventh when it seemed as if this eternal halving couldn't go on, Sweet put his second into a trap alongside the green, 455 yards from the tee, exploded to fifteen feet from the pin and sank the putt. Quigley had a 12 foot putt for a half but missed it. Wallace had a 33, three under par, on the extra nine holes.

Ralph Morgan, fifteen year old high school student, and R. A. Hoegh of Columbus park, won the second flight, defeating George Premme and William Gerterich, 2 and 1. Hoegh couldn't play in the semi-finals yesterday and Morgan carried his team into the finals by playing a lone hand against the best ball of Louis Shapiro of Mid City and George Humphreys of Jackson park and beating them 3 and 2.

ALPERT LEADS PREPS

Sam Alpert, southpaw from Austin High school, put a two stroke lead between himself and 125 other prep school golfers at Evergreen yesterday in the first half of a 36 hole of medal play for the city championship. Alpert's jockey cap bobbed along ahead of the record field in 41—38—79.

After Alpert the field stretched along, Harold Narrow and Ralph Ong of Hyde Park shooting 81s to tie for second. R. Ruh of Lake View coming in with 82, Bob Crowe Jr., of Austin with 83, and Lawrence Hill of Bowen, defending champion, Frank Jordan of Lindblom, H. Calhoun of Englewood and James Dare of Morgan Park, with 85s.

Hyde Park in Team Lead.

Hyde Park, by virtue of having two boys play good prep golf and two others who shot a fair game, took the lead for the team championship. Hyde Park's score, made up of Ong's and Narrow's 81s, M. Klein's 90 and C. Crosscurth's 94, was 346, ten strokes ahead of the field. Englewood and Lindblom tied for second with 356, Englewood's team being made up of Calhoun, J. Erb, 88, N. Olson, 91, and C. Walker, 92, and Lindblom's Frank Jordan, 85, K. Fraider, 87, W. Bell, 89, and E. Hoglund, 95.

Other schools finished in this order: Schurz, 357; Bowen, 359; Senn, 361; Lake View, 365; Austin, 366; Lane, 370; Tilden, 371; Roosevelt, 373; Parker, 374; Morgan Park, 390; Marshall, 406 and Crane, 435. Bowen, in fifth place, 23 strokes back of Hyde Park, is the defending champion. Austin, the favorite before the start, is in eighth place, 29 strokes back, because its two stars, Alpert and Crowe, had no support.

The 6s cost Alpert a better score on his first nine, a shanked mashie shot on the first being responsible for one and three putts on the fifth. He made up a shot by putting his mashie third on the pin for a birdie 4 on the 520 yard sixth. Four three putt greens, including the 18th, added four more strokes he shouldn't have taken.

Narrow was wild off the tee and spoiled otherwise perfectly played holes by taking too many putts. He was in trouble, tall grass or traps, on four of the first nine holes, but then came back to play fine golf for six. Bad putting hurt him again on the last three. His teammate, Ong, who played the same number of strokes, reversed Narrow's score, taking 39 going out and slumping to 42 coming in. He dubbed one drive, was in the rough and traps a couple of times, missed a few putts and was out of bounds once.

Putts bothered Crowe also, who was expected to battle to the finish with Alpert, on the first and second holes his green shots hanging on the lip of the cup. He had a 43 for the first eight holes and then began to play good golf, scoring a 3 on the ninth and coming in with 37.

The final 18 holes for both the individual and team championships will be played at Big Oaks Saturday.

GOLFERS CROWD CHICAGO COURSES FOR TOURNAMENTS

Lenzen, Metzer Shoot Par Golf in North Shore Play

The diabolical little figure known as par took a nasty licking at North Shore yesterday in the match play against par when two high handicap men shot the game they've been waiting to shoot for a long time. S. F. Lenzen went around the 18 holes in 87 strokes and with the help of 22 handicap shots finished exactly seven up on perfect golf. R. G. Metzler, who had one stroke less handicap, didn't do quite so well but he did have a gross of 92, which left him three up. First round of the Class A June tournament was played yesterday, the winners being Frank Snow, R. C. Booger, H. H. Harrison and E. R. Green.

BEVERLY HILLS.

The fall handicap play over nine holes was a partner event, with a blind draw for teammates. L. W. Bick and W. N. Achenbach were drawn together and their low net of 78 won. F. Berlind and E. Vaughn tied with W. McKing and C. Lincoln with nets of 80 each. H. Sherman and F. Decardy had 82, as did H. Mayfield and H. K. Dickerson.

RUTH LAKE.

Low gross play wound up in a triple tie with H. Van, N. Schuett, and W. T. Dawson each claiming a share of the honors with 83s. Low net went to F. Nelson for his 84—22—72. W. T. Dawson was the victor in class A ball sweepstakes. His score was 83—74, one stroke ahead of N. Schuett's 83—8—75. Class B leaders were J. E. Creed, 90—13—77, and W. Carleton, 92—13—79. In class C, L. A. Rawson, 84—15—79; I. C. Creed, 93—14—79; J. B. Miles, 93—14—79, and F. Ruggles, 94—15—79, tied in class D, C. E. Iris led with 100—21—79, while R. Wentrand, 101—21—80, was a stroke behind. D. McIntosh, 111—27—84, was third.

WESTWARD HO.

The four man team match was won by the quartet composed of R. F. Clark, F. M. Clinnin, W. A. Waskow, and L. Ballas, whose total was 409—124—285. The special event for the day was to see which member could come closest to the flag 150 yards from the tee on No. 7 hole. J. Crisante took that honor when his ball stopped one foot from the pin. Sweepstakes winners in class A were M. Ferguson, 81—8—73; F. Sullivan, 84—11—73, and R. J. Orr, 84—10—74. In class B, C. R. Godding, 87—16—69; D. Thomas, 86—16—70, and L. Lantz, 95—15—70, were the leaders.

There was no competitive play, but many golfers were out putting on the finishing touches to their game for the ball sweepstakes event today.

GOLFERS NEARING MID-SEASON FORM—JUST LOOK AT THESE!

Some of the handicap committees of Chicago golf clubs who haven't had much to do this year, because weather has kept golf scores high and higher, are having their work cut out for them if the scores of yesterday are any indication of what's coming in scoring along with fine weather. Just take a few of the lower handicap men and look over their scores yesterday.

At Beverly, John MacKinlay Jr. scored 71—0—65; Harvey Cory, 78—9—69, and Ben Stevenson, 75—5—70. At Glen View C. F. Yeggs Jr. shot 72—3—69, and at Westmoreland, A. C. Perry, 74—4—70, and Z. F. Harshton, 75—11—64. At Ravisloe, Herbert Fried scored 94—7—87.

The higher handicap men were even more under par on their net scores and indicating the class B and C golfers are shooting for class A. At North Shore, S. F. Lenzen turned in 87—22—65. Fred Adams at Midlothian scored 79—13—66, and J. B. Creedy, J. J. Rutherford, Charles H. Scholle, F. W. Means, J. C. Moore, R. A. Borne, J. C. Dean, and Burton Mudge all had net scores of 67, 68, and 69 on a par 71 course. At Illinois, Tom Keelis had 91—26—65; John Carey, 83—15—68, and Frank Ellis, 99—30—69. Edgewood Valley had four men under 70: Sunset Ridge, four; Riverside, three, and Knollwood, Elmhurst, Calumet and Bunker Hill were among those who had golfers shooting far better than their handicaps indicated.

So there may be no misunderstanding this is not written in criticism of handicap committees and really should be taken as congratulations to the men shooting a better game and a credit to them for cutting down their handicaps. It is merely an indication how the golfers in this district are "coming."

RIVERSIDE.

The eighteen hole medal play handicap for the G. G. Gilpin trophy was won by E. Weidemann, 86—18—68. K. G. Richards won the low putting event, taking 29 on the eighteen holes. BY HARLAND ROHM.

It shouldn't be called the United States open championship this year, but the world's golf championship, this tournament that will be played at Oakmont, near Pittsburgh, on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday of this week. A killing course of nearly 7,000 yards, longest over which a championship ever has been decided; Britain's ten greatest pro golfers, including Aubrey Boomer, French open champion; 140 of America's best, who among them hold or have held practically every major golf crown in the world; and Bobby Jones—these will combine to make this year's championship a super-open.

BOBBY JONES. [P. & A. Photo.]

One or two of those who usually sit in the seats of the mighty will be missing, but that is all. Abe Mitchell, stricken with appendicitis on the eve of his sailing for America with the Ryder cup team, will be missed, particularly as Oakmont's great length and narrow fairways would handicap the hard hitting Briton less than it won't start but all the other present day stars and many of those whose brilliance has dimed wil be there.

Star Amateurs to Compete.

True, no British amateurs will compete, but no British amateur has won the British open since Harold Hilton at Hoylake in 1897, though R. H. Wethered did tie for it in 1921 and lost to Jock Hutchison in the playoff. Half a dozen American amateur champions, George von Elm, present champion; Jones, Bob Gardner, Sweetser, Jesse Guilford, Francis Ouimet, Chick Evans, perhaps others, will add to the class of the field.

Probably ten former open champions will be in the field and, if memory isn't at fault, this also will set a record—along with the record entry of 894. Starting way back with Freddie McLeod, who won at Myopia in 1908, coming down the line the list reads: Ouimet, Walter Hagen, Evans, Ted Ray, Jim Barnes, Gene Sarazen, Jones, Cyril Walker, and Willie Macfarlane. Oakmont's long course will be cluttered with major champions, to say nothing of all the sectional and state winners.

Nor is the British threat to be overlooked, despite the Americans' 9½ to 2½ defeat of the British team in the Ryder cup matches at Worcester. The Britons, Ted Ray, Archie Compston, Aubrey Boomer, George Gadd, C. A. Whitcombe, Herbert Jolly, Fred Robeson, Arthur Havers, and George Duncan, offer no small threat.

Jones Against the Field.

Of course, this open, as it has been, is Bobby Jones against the field. For five years Jones has finished first or second in the U. S. open and last year climaxed his record by winning both British and American open championships. In 1922, at Skokie, Bobby was second to Gene Sarazen's 288 by a stroke; in 1923, at Inwood, he tied with Bobby Cruickshank at 296 and won the playoff; in 1924, at Oakland Hills, he was second to Cyril Walker; in 1925, at Worcester, he tied with Willie Macfarlane with 291 and lost the 36 hole playoff by a stroke; in 1926, at Scioto, he won with 293. He has won the last three open championships he participated in—the British at Lytham and St. Anne's with 291, the U. S. open at Scioto last year and the Southern open at East Lake, Atlanta, a few months ago with 281, eight strokes better than the leading pros in second place.

Whether any of the pros—Bobby Cruickshank, who won half a dozen tournaments this winter; Johnny Farrell, recent winner of the Metropolitan open; the always dangerous Hagen, any of British stars, or some of the recent meteors like Willie Burke or George Voigt—can challenge him is the doubt that makes golf more inconsistent than horse racing. One advantage Jones and Von Elm, in common with the pros, have over the northern amateurs is that they have been able to get in condition.

Course Demands Straight Drivers.

Not only his record but the course gives Jones an advantage, for Oakmont is a course to demand a terrific tee shot and then strike terror into the heart of the golfer by the penalties for an off line shot. Accuracy and distance don't often combine, but Jones has them more than any other golfer in the world, except perhaps Abe Mitchell. His pokes of 280 yards or thereabouts straight down the fairway—and Oakmont's fairways are narrow—will give him an edge which it is doubtful if any one else can overcome.

Look over the lengths of the holes in the card of the course printed above this story and consider the number of wood second shots at which Jones is unapproachable. It will take more than a good iron shot to get home on eight of the holes and there's no one better than Jones at laying a wood shot off the fairway to the pin.

At no time has a golf championship been played on as long or as hard a course as Oakmont has been made this year. The par is held at 37—35—72, but the distance has been increased to 6,915 yards. Four of the holes are longer than recognized distance for

Helen Defeats Mrs. Godfree in Kent Net Final

BY DAVID DARRAH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

(Copyright: 1927: By The Chicago Tribune.)

LONDON, June 11.—Miss Helen Wills today succeeded Col. Charles A. Lindbergh as the most popular young American visitor in England when she scored a brilliant victory over Mrs. Kitty McKane Godfree, England's champion, by a score of 6-2, 6-4 in the finals of the Kent women's tennis championship at Breckenham.

Before a capacity gallery of 5,000, Miss Wills displayed a brilliant brand of court technique. She was perfectly cool, sending slow balls from corner to corner of the court with dazzling control. These were varied with crashing, sharply angled shots of such terrific speed Mrs. Godfree was helpless to return them.

Mr. Hilliard and Miss Elizabeth Ryan beat Mr. and Mrs. Godfree in the mixed doubles for the Kent championship, 6-3, 7-5.

IRISH STAR BEATS HUNTER

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

DUBLIN, June 11.—An overflow crowd saw the Hon. C. Campbell beat Francis T. Hunter today in a nip and tuck match by 6—1, 7—5, 2—6, 6—4 at the Fitzwilliam club. Big Bill Tilden defeated Ed McCrea, 6—1, 6—2, 6—2.

LANG REPLACES CHANDLER ON U.S. DAVIS CUP LIST

New York, June 11.—(AP)—Jerome Lang of New York, former Columbia university star, has replaced Edward G. Chandler, intercollegiate champion and No. 5 in the national ranking, on the United States Davis cup tennis squad. The United States Lawn Tennis association, announcing the change today, said Chandler had reported he would be unable to devote his time to tennis this summer because of college work.

Lang's excellent play in early season tournaments guided the decision of the Davis cup selection committee. He is No. 11 on the national ranking list.

In addition to Lang the Davis cup squad will consist of William T. Tilden, William M. Johnston, Richard N. Williams, Lewis White, A. H. Chapin Jr., Dr. George King, Francis T. Hunter, John Doeg, and George Lott.

Additional names may be found on the list of prospective cup defenders prior to the selection of the actual combination that will defend the international team trophy Sept. 8, 9, and 10 at the Germantown Cricket club.

The present intention is to hold the tryouts at Forest Hills Aug. 15, 16, and 17. The east-west matches will be held on the same courts, Aug. 19 and 20 and may serve as final tests.

THE INQUIRING REPORTER

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question Frank G. Hotchco, Monticello, Ill., was awarded $5.

The Question.

What do you consider the country's outstanding sporting event?

Where Asked.

State at Randolph.

The Answers.

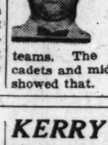
J. Pratt, 2114 Calumet avenue, telegraph operator—The Kentucky Derby. No other sporing event draws so many fans to see an event that lasts only a little more than two minutes. Turfmen point to this event as the outstanding race of the season and they have their horses in top form. I know of no other event with such an historic background.

Russell Barnes, 508 Rush street, clerk—The Army-Navy football game tops all American sporting events. Everybody loves a fighter, and in this battle we have 22 of the nation's greatest fighting men giving their last ounce for the glory of the service.

Samuel Leifer, 3733 West 13th street, clerk—I always look forward to the Notre Dame-Army football fame. Both teams always play their best ball in this contest and usually it means the best in the middle west is playing the best in the east. I wish we could land that game for Chicago in the near future.

Jack Brooks, 14 West Erie street, sailor—Give me the Kentucky Derby. They say that uncertainty is the backbone of sport. Where is there an event in which it is so difficult to foretell the winner? The Derby is the country's greatest horse race and it's also the greatest style show. It would draw more people than any other attraction if they could be accommodated.

J. Gordon, 518 Rush street, haberdasher—No other sporting event has the general appeal of the Army-Navy game. Whether you care for football or not you are bound to be interested in a struggle involving the nation's service teams. The reception accorded the cadets and middies in Chicago last fall showed that.



DE PAOLO WINS ALTOONA RACE; AVERAGES 116.5

Altoona, Pa., June 11.—(AP)—In a spectacular race, marred by two accidents, Peter De Paolo captured the 200 mile auto classic here today. Harry Hartz was second, two laps behind the leader, and far ahead of Tony Gulatto, who was third.

De Paolo's time was 1:42:56 8-10, an average speed of 116.57 miles an hour. By virtue of his victory De Paolo won $7,000 as first prize money. Hartz won $3,500 for second place and Gulatto $2,000.

Elliott, Hepburn Collide.

Others to finish were: Eddie Hearne, fourth; Babe Stapp, fifth; Cliff Woodbury, sixth; Al Melcher, seventh; Leon Duray, eighth, and Dave Evans, ninth. These were all that finished of a field of sixteen.

Frank Elliott figured in the most spectacular accident of the day when he lost control of his car while rounding a curve. Ralph Hepburn, who was close behind, could not avert a collision and the rear wheel of Heyburn's car was torn off. Earl Devore's machine was struck by Hepburn's and forced from the track. Hepburn crashed into a pit. He was uninjured, but a pit mechanic was slightly hurt.

Lewis' Car Overturns.

Dave Lewis had a narrow escape from death when his car overturned at almost the identical spot where Elliott came to grief. He was thrown free of his machine. Taken to the emergency hospital within the grounds, he was found to have suffered only cuts and bruises.

De Paolo took the lead on the 60th lap and never was headed thereafter. He drove without a single pit stop.

Logan Squares Defeat Madison Blues by 5 to 2

Madison, Wis., June 11.—[Special.]—The Logan Squares of Chicago beat the Madison Blues today, 5 to 2. The same teams play here tomorrow.

Veterans of 500 Mile Race on Roby Card

A field of twenty-six cars, including six of the baby meteors which weathered the 500-mile speed gale at Indianapolis, Memorial day, will face the crimson starting flag in the ten and fifty mile dirt track championship dashes at Robey this afternoon. The entry list for both events reveals the best collection of high speed talent so far assembled in the newly revived American Automobile association dirt track circuit.

Bergere Among Contestants.

Among the big time invaders who will attempt to grab the laurels from the old favorites of the Chicago earth trails are Cliff Bergere, the Frenchman who finished ninth at Indianapolis after coming through a serious crash and practically overhauling his car during eight pit stops; Jack Petticord and Fred Frame, relief driver for Frank Elliott in the five century; Wilbur Shaw, who finished fourth; Dutch Bauman, who led the big race for 25 miles after the flying Lockhart dropped out, and Louis Schneider, who will pilot his 90-inch Miller in both Roby events.

Added features of the race card include a game of motorcycle polo, and the appearance of Bruce Miller's front drive racer.

Qualifying trials for the big field are scheduled to start at 10 o'clock this morning. Following is the entry list:

Shallow Lakes Best for Early Bass Anglers

BY BOB BECKER.

The opening of the Illinois bass season, set for next Thursday, will be followed four days later by the tilting of the lid on the Wisconsin bass season, so middle west anglers have a busy time ahead of them if they are to keep up with these important events on the fishing calendar.

For the last few years the bass in northern lakes have not been ready for any scraps with fishing lures and fishermen by the opening of the season. This was especially true in deep lakes in which the water retains a low temperature until after July 1. Lakes of this type induce a late spawning period for the bass. The result is that June 20, the opening of the bass season, ills around and eager fishermen find the bass still on their spawning beds. Because of this situation, the opening day angler should pick the shallowest bass lakes for his first contacts with the northern bass.

Northern Wisconsin has a number of fine bass lakes which can produce some good strings of fish for either the bait rod angler or the fly caster. Two good small mouth bass lakes are Butternut and Kentuck, the former east and the latter northeast of the Eagle waters near the Vilas-Forest county line. We like the section along the Michigan-Wisconsin border between Land O' Lakes on the east and Winegar on the west and south to Bolder Junction. In the immediate vicinity of Boukler Junction one can work some excellent muskie waters. Farther north, to and beyond the divide, are the bass lakes, scores of 'em. McClough is one of the best and well worth a visit.

In the Lac du Flambeau Indian reservation are Stearns, Big Bass and Birch. These three lakes are neither deep nor large and should be ready early.

Two Shows Provide Week's Diet for Boxing Devotees

Two boxing shows, one at Normal park tomorrow night and the other at Logan Square park Friday, are carded for Chicago this week.

MIKE DUNDEE.

Sid Barbarian, Detroit lightweight, and Freddie Mueller of Buffalo will be principals in the windup of the show at Normal park. Both are comparative strangers to local fans. Mike Dundee of Rock Island and King Tut, originally of Minneapolis, will clash in the semi-windup. One of the preliminaries will bring together Joey Medill of the west side and Babe Ruth of Louisville. Three other bouts complete the card.

Hill to Box Goodman.

Promoter Neils Vierup has signed Johnny Hill, the aggressive Filipino, to meet Charley Goodman of New York in the banner event of his Logan Square club. Goodman is a hard hitter. He recently knocked out Bobby Garcia.

The local boxing fraternity, however, is looking forward to the bantamweight championship contest between Bud Taylor and Tony Canzoneri on June 23. The fans recall the great draw the pair fought at the Coliseum last winter and will not miss the chance to see them in action again. Both boxers will arrive in the city this week. Promoter Mullen has signed Fernandez, the Filipino, for the semi-windup.

On June 24, Johnny Coulon will conduct a show at White City with Willie Davis of Cleveland and Alex Burey of Canada in the windup. The promoter also has signed Bill Hall of Woodlawn to fight Billy Bortfield of Milwaukee in the semi-windup.

Then will come Joe Coffey's heavyweight show at the White Sox baseball park on June 30. Jim Maloney of Boston and Romero Rojas of South America will clash in the windup. The remainder of the card will be made up of heavyweight bouts.

Resume Ring Quiz Tomorrow.

Joey Sangor of Milwaukee and Eddie Shea of the west side have signed for the main event of the show at Michigan City on the afternoon of July 4, and Mushy Callahan of Los Angeles will defend his world's junior welterweight title against an opponent yet to be selected in the American Legion show at Wrigley field on July 12. Proceeds of this show will be used to send wounded sailors and soldiers to the American Legion convention in Paris in September.

The legislative inquiry of boxing and wrestling in Illinois will be resumed tomorrow morning at the county building. The investigation, which so far has dealt largely with wrestling, will center on boxing in tomorrow's session.

KERRY SOCCER TEAM PLAYS AT SOX PARK TODAY

MOTORDOM

Detour Signs Are Polished Up for Record Road Year

County Forms New Bureau to Help Bewildered Motorists.

BY J. L. JENKINS.

WITH approximately 50 miles of county roads closed for construction work now and an additional 70 miles of both existing main pavements and unpaved roads to be closed to traffic as soon as the state legislature validates Cook county's $15,000,000 bond issue and allows pavement widening work to start, Chicago motorists are facing one of the worst "detour years" since the early days of highway construction.

A tour of inspection over the various sections of the county completed yesterday showed more than a dozen contractor crews at work grading and laying pavement with blockades up to stop traffic and detour markings dotting the landscape.

It also brought about the establishment by Maj. George A. Quinlan, county superintendent of highways, of a permanent detour and construction maintenance bureau with George Fitzgerald in charge. The new department will be responsible for the marking and safe upkeep of detour roads throughout the county, and will inform the motoring public, through THE TRIBUNE each week, of construction progress, of new detours and of the condition of existing detours.

Few of the old main pavements, other than short stretches along Roosevelt road near Maywood, Ninety-fifth street, and Milwaukee avenue where the state highway department has started pavement repairs and widening, are now closed to traffic.

The Roosevelt road pavement from Des Plaines avenue west to the Du Page county line is still ragged and dangerous and crews are busy patching only the worst spots. According to state highway department promises, the long delayed widening and repaving of Roosevelt road will begin when adequate detour roads are prepared to carry the heavy Roosevelt road traffic. The St. Charles and Twenty-second street highways are now used by the majority of drivers who for years have pounded over the Roosevelt road shell holes.

The Roosevelt road detour at present is marked over Twenty-second street to First avenue and back to the main highway.

Paving improvements in Madison street, Maywood, were opened to traffic yesterday, according to the initial detour report. The new stretch is between Ninth and Twenty-second avenues in Maywood. The old Madison street traffic which has been detouring over Twenty-third avenue from the south will be blocked this week and must use either Seventeenth avenue or Bellwood avenue to cross railroad and electric tracks.

Cumberland avenue in Ridge Park is closed for new paving between St. James and Belleplaine avenues. The detour around this work follows St. James to Chester, Chester to Arthur and Arthur to Greenwood avenue. The detour north is via Greenwood to Touhy road.

McCarthy road out of Lemont is closed for new paving. The detour is south over Archer avenue to the Joliet road, or north over Walker road.

The Lake-Cook or county line road in the north is closed for new paving. Its detours are marked south over Green Bay road. Sheridan road may also be used as a detour.

For Better Lights.

Seeking for a remedy for headlight glare the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce last week voted a fund to support the research of the Society of Automotive Engineers and the U. S. bureau of standards in this field, at its annual meeting held in New York.

Roy D. Chapin was reelected president of the association.

A fund was also voted to the highway education board for continuance of the annual national safety essay and lesson contest, for which more than 500 prizes are given annually.

Spark Plug Lore.

Lack of efficiency of spark plugs may be traced to one or more causes. The terminal connection may be faulty, corroded or covered with oil. The plug points may be fouled. The porcelain may be cracked or porous. There may be improper spark gap. The plug may be coated with oil. It is important if one would have a smooth running motor hitting on all cylinder that the spark gap should be of the proper size, that the terminals are tight and clean, that oil and soot are cleaned away from the firing points.

TEACH CHILDREN.

Children should be taught never to play around automobiles or touch any of the levers.

With This Magic Device I Drove 1300 Miles Without Buying Gas!

NO wonder over two million car owners installed the Stransky Vaporizer! No wonder Stransky distributors clean up huge profits! Here's a typical instance. J. R. Wood jumped from 17 miles a gal. to 30 miles a gal. on a 3,000 mile trip—which amounts to running 1,300 miles without buying gas! The inventor will send you samples to test at his risk and pay a cash forfeit if it doesn't save gasoline. Get full details FREE of obligation, also big profit plan for full or spare time workers. BUMPING THE CITY BUMPS

Depreciation travels faster than the car on scores of Chicago's city streets where repairs have been lacking for many seasons. Estes avenue in Rogers Park, looking east from Glenwood avenue, is a typical example. Motorists say that the cost of springs wrecked on this stretch would just about pay for the needed repairs. THE INQUIRING REPORTER

He's Out to Learn the Truth About Motordom

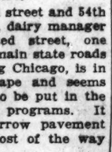
The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question, Mrs. H. Klick, 811 Eastwood avenue, Chicago, was awarded $5.

The Question.

What, in your opinion, is the worst highway leading into Chicago?

The Answers.

Charles Burger, 103d street and 54th avenue, dairy manager—Halsted street, one of the main state roads entering Chicago, is in bad shape and seems never to be put in the paving programs. It has narrow pavement over most of the way and needs attention.



William Haedtler, 9535 South Western avenue, milk dealer—Western avenue, with all the talk about making it a decent road, is still rough and narrow in places and is broken up by three dangerous railroad grade crossings. It is one of the most important roads anywhere in the state and should be in perfect condition. It looks like Western will never be made wide enough and safe enough.

H. H. Simon, 3731 Gidding street, cigar manufacturer—River road is the worst, especially on Sundays and holidays. It is narrow and so congested that the motorist can hardly get through it. This is one of the most important roads near Chicago and should be given immediate attention.

M. A. Chaiken, 1510 North Robey street, physician—Elston avenue is one of the roughest and most dangerous roads that motorists have to use in entering Chicago, and is one of the roads that needs new pavement and wider pavement at once.

Dr. Leon M. Bellin, 520 Rush street—Roosevelt road is probably the worst road of all the main roads leading into Chicago. It has been bad for years and is rapidly getting worse. We have heard a lot about how the state and county intend to repave it and make it wide enough to be safe, but little or nothing has been done.

Better Road Laws Benefit Vacation Driver of 1927

IF the motor tourist does not find completely uniform traffic regulations this summer when he goes forth on his annual vacation journey, he at least will be certain of finding more equitable and just codes prevailing, as a result of the progress of the movement toward uniformity in vital features of motor vehicle codes.

In connection with their fight for the adoption of the more vital features of a national code, the units of the A. A. A. have been making a vigorous onslaught upon reactionary and restrictive provisions of the local codes with which the motor tourist comes in contact.

Among the advantages which have come to the motorists as a result of this campaign by the motor clubs, are less rigid and restrictive speed regulations reflected in the disappearance of hundreds of signs specifying "Speed limit, 15 miles an hour"; more reasonable parking regulations; fewer confusing bans on driving practices that are generally approved; a broader tendency to warn instead of arrest the traveler and a general trend toward leniency where violation of the regulation palpably was caused by ignorance.

Probably the most welcome improvement wrought is that which has brought to many communities a more liberal speed limit law. Nothing has so aggravated and irritated the motorist on tour as the conspicuous 15 mile speed limit signs that have greeted him in hundreds of small towns, villages, and hamlets.

"Every one has recognized the dangers of excessive speed by the automobile," according to association heads, "but when a village establishes a maximum speed of 15 miles an hour while the metropolitan area will allow one to drive 30, it is absurd to look upon the regulation as designed merely for safety.

Highways Around Chicago Reported Good for Tourists

RAIN has been heavy over the north central states during the past two weeks, causing unimproved highways to be poor or impassable for motor travel, according to late reports received by the Chicago Motor club.

Flood water increased somewhat in the southern portion of this area, but no difficulty will be experienced at the present time. Improved highways remain in good condition throughout the north central states except in the vicinity of Peoria, where continual heavy rainfall closed some routes, and in the extreme northern sections of Minnesota and Wisconsin, where rough places will be found.

Conditions remain unchanged in the southern states along the Mississippi river valley and its tributary streams south of Helena, Ark. All routes east of the Mississippi river valley remain in excellent condition.

Eastern trails are in excellent condition. Construction work is in progress in places but this causes little trouble on main trails as well marked and maintained detours are provided.

Considerable precipitation was reported from the central western and northwestern portions of the United States during the week, making unimproved roads muddy for several days. Southwestern trails west of the Mississippi valley remain in excellent condition to the Pacific coast.

Illinois roads are as follows:

Cairo—Motorists traveling from Cairo to Little Rock should make inquiry at the Southern Illinois Automobile club, Cairo, for the best route.

Belleville—The ferry at Mount Carmel is not running. Motorists should cross the Wabash river at Lawrenceville.

Ill-3—Water is over the route at Beardstown and a ferry is necessary; ferry charges reported $3 a car. This route is also closed south of East St. Louis and traffic is being routed over a good detour.

Ill-4—Bridge south of Chenoa has been repaired and traffic is going through in good condition. Detour at Staunton is poor but passable.

Ill-6 [Roosevelt road]—Detour is marked and being used from the Hinsdale road south and over 22d street into Chicago. Motorists are still using Roosevelt road in places but the detour is much better. The detour is to be used while the road is being widened to 40 feet.

Ill-8—Impassable between Yates City and Knoxville on the earth detour. From Peoria east to the Indiana state line the road is in good condition.

Ill-9—Route remains closed at Banner. The detour between Peoria and Canton marked via Farmington is impassable on the earth stretch between Farmington and Norris. Route between East Peoria and Morton remains impassable. Bridge at Pekin over the Illinois river remains closed.

Ill-17 and 29—Bridge between Spar-land and Lacon remains open and in good condition.

Ill-20—There is a good short earth detour being used in McHenry.

Ill-24—Bridge north of Green Valley has been replaced and traffic has been resumed between Peoria and Springfield. This route is impassable between Springfield and Taylorville.

Ill-29—Reported in good condition from Peoria north to Ill-7.

Ill-36—The bad detour reported last week at the Illinois river has been eliminated and motorists may drive off the pavement onto the ferry.

Safer System.

Officials of New Jersey are planning a new set of motor vehicle and highway rules to make traffic regulation uniform throughout the state and more similar to the traffic regulations of adjoining states.

SAFETY ROLLERS.

A set of rollers has been invented to be placed in rows at grade crossings. By means of an automatic device, the rolls would be unlocked with the approach of a train, and despite anything the driver did the car would remain in the same place.

NEW INNER ROUTE

The last of the concrete was poured on the northern extension of Green Bay road last week to meet the completed and connected Wisconsin pavement on highway 57, which leads north from the state line into Layton boulevard, Milwaukee. Some six miles of the Illinois road south of the state line has been a practically impassable gap in this important inner route for years. It will be open to traffic when the pavement hardens, about July 4.

This new link will afford a fast through route from Chicago to Milwaukee via the Waukegan road, Green Bay road and Wisconsin 57, avoiding the lake front congestion in Sheridan road and providing fast travel for trucks as well as passenger cars.

SAFE SEX.

The accident record of 25 women bus drivers employed by a cab company in Philadelphia is much lower.

To Prove What the Wolverine Can Do for You

SIX thousand miles of the country's worst roads—six thousand miles of March mud, of February blizzards, of shifting desert sands baking under a torrid sun, of rocky mountain passes, six, seven, eight thousand feet into the clouds.

In those six thousand miles, the last of a long series of arduous tests, the Wolverine again demonstrated its ability to tackle anything, its tirelessness over any trail, its regard for the purses of American motorists.

In this run—from Lansing to Los Angeles and back in February and March—the Wolverine averaged only a cent and a half per mile for gasoline and oil, though it averaged 38.4 miles per hour for the entire trip. And not one penny was spent for repairs.

It is not claimed that the Wolverine set any world's records on this final test run. It was not a specially constructed car out for hollow records, but an ordinary stock car, driven just as you yourself might drive. Those six thousand grilling miles were run to prove again what the Wolverine can do for you, to demonstrate its worth as a smaller ally of the Reo Flying Cloud.

See for yourself the car that stood the tests so well. Drive it. Put it through its paces. It's the kind of car you'll like to own.

IT WILL OUT-DEMONSTRATE ANY AUTOMOBILE IN THE WORLD TODAY—YOU BE THE JUDGE PERFORMANCE RESULTS

(Which 15 Minutes Will Prove)

70 honest miles per hour, with ease and safety

Lightning acceleration, surpassing that of any car

Handling, beyond doubt the easiest you ever experienced

An entirely new type of smooth and bounceless riding, without great size or bulk

Quick and dependable stopping power, the result of the most advanced design of 4-wheel brakes.

PRICES

Six standard models, $1795 and upward, all under $2000, f. o. b. factory—completely and luxuriously equipped.

The thrill that only the MARMON 8 can give

FIFTEEN MINUTES IS ALL IT TAKES

to find out that this Marmon 8 is the greatest performer in the world today—bar none, and by far the most delightful car you ever drove.

An absolutely new type of performance and easy handling that by comparison makes most other cars seem sluggish and cumbersome. Won't you give us fifteen minutes of your time this week?

Completely manufactured in Marmon factories to Marmon precision standards

The Greatest Performer in the world today—bar none

MARMON solved the straight-eight problem with the new system of equidistant, down-draft manifolding, thereby producing the sweetest, smoothest-running eight-cylinder engine in the world today.

Marmon solved the problem of putting real riding comfort into a smaller wheelbase with the new rubberset hydraulic spring suspension (longest springs in proportion to wheelbase of any car in the world mounted in rubber and supplemented by in-built Lovejoy hydraulic shock absorbers)

—but perhaps the biggest thing that Marmon did in this new Marmon 8 was to produce a car that actually gets more hours and far more pleasure out of the day by cutting out waste seconds and waste minutes

—less time getting in and out of the garage, less time in slowing down for bumps and curves, less time in parking and less waste time between the semaphores.

(Usually you get at least one block more on a green light and all just as legal as a judge on the bench.)

And while we were about it we made a car that would go anywhere any big car can go and that would do anything any big car can do. There is just as much room for it out on the wide open road as there is in town, and just as much utility and pleasure.

Either in traffic or on the open road, no car on earth today can equal the Marmon 8 in get-away, quick-witted speed, maneuverability or luxurious riding quality.

There are three ways to prove this —first, to try to get away from the next Marmon 8 you encounter

—secondly, to talk with any Marmon 8 owner you meet

—thirdly, to come in and let us furnish you with a demonstrator, which we will gladly do without obligation.

When you come back from this first ride, you will say more for this automobile than we have ever claimed for it in our advertising

—you will say that here at last is a car which actually does on the road more than it does in type —and that it is the first actual thrill you have had out of any new automobile in years.

Won't you try it today?

Auto Buyers Send Industry Toward Production Record

Demand for Trucks and Busses Boosts Total.

BY WHITCOMB WILLIAMS.

DETROIT, Mich., June 11.—[Special.]—Developments during the past two weeks indicate that the automobile industry is destined to show increased activity throughout the second half of the year over the first six months. This is the conclusion reached by those most interested following the official announcement that new and radically different Ford models will soon be in production. Another item of current interest centers in the Dodge announcement of the introduction of its new six line. Speeding up of productions here and there in other leading plants and expansion programs at both the Packard and Chevrolet factories are topics of interest.

Labor in the various automobile plants and accessories shops in Detroit shows one of the largest decreases for any week this year, amounting to 19,004, which leaves the total of men now employed at 205,560. This is due to the curtailment of activities in the Ford plants with the virtual discontinuance of production of passenger cars until the new model is ready, and at the Hudson plants, where preparations are being hurried along for increased production facilities which at present necessitate a curtailment of output.

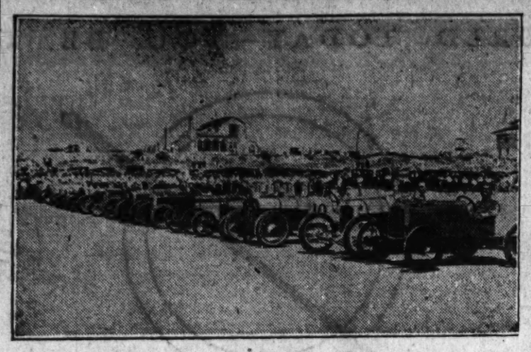
One year ago there were employed in the automobile plants a total of 243,577 workmen, an increase over the present week of 38,017.

While labor has decreased in Detroit, it has increased in other automobile building cities of the state, including Lansing, Flint and Pontiac. Stimulated demand for Oldsmobiles is evidenced as the result of price reductions on all models announced as effective June 1.

Three new records were established at the Willys-Overland Toledo plant on May 25, when shipments of cars for the month to that date totaled 23,296 and for the current year to the same date 103,329 cars left the factory. A new daily record was also established, it being 1,701 cars. Employment in this plant is at maximum.

Official figures just released show a production of 342,082 cars and trucks in May. This total is 18 per cent in excess of May, 1926. During the first five months of this year the factories, exclusive of Ford, produced 1,454,673 cars, compared with 1,295,765 in the same period a year ago. Truck production showed a healthy increase over the same period last year. No doubt exists in the minds of truck manufacturers, both individually and collectively, but what a new record will be established this year.

SCHOOL FOR SPEEDSTERS.



Early spring brings hundreds of budding speed champions to the super fast Ormond-Daytona beach speedway for their first lessons and contests in the roaring road game. Here are sixteen youngsters with their cars drawn up to the starting line awaiting the starter's flag in one of the many speed tilts arranged on the famous ocean straight-away.

PAVING FINISHED

The final stretch of paving on Cicero avenue, between 65th street and 79th street, was completed yesterday and will be open after 21 days. Seventy-ninth street from Western avenue to Cicero avenue will be completed in ten days. This will also be opened 21 days after the date of completion.

Vacation Armies Begin Auto March on West Michigan

Find Ideal Roads and $31,000,000 Highway Program.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich.—[Special Correspondence.]—The opening of fishing season for muskellunge and wall-eyed pike, plus the lure of lingering apple and cherry blossoms, brought a big advance guard of tourists and vacationists into the west Michigan resort centers during the three day Decoration day holiday. Bass season opens June 15.

This Riviera of the inland seas—Michigan's west shore—offers the visitor a fascinating variety of scenic and recreational attractions. It is a land of far flung orchards and forests, of 3,000 glistening lakes and streams, of beckoning beaches and majestic sand dunes. Here, too, the air, washed by three great lakes, provides one of the most exhilarating summer climates to be found in America.

St. Joseph, Benton Harbor, South Haven, and other resort towns along the south shore of west Michigan are noted for canoeing, golfing, yachting and bathing. They seem to combine the gay brilliance of a Newport season with the delightful surf bathing of Atlantic City. South Haven also boasts two of the largest dancing pavilions in the world. Just to the north at Saugatuck is a famous art colony which gathers each season to paint the scenic beauties of this summer fairyland. Near Holland is the unique Goetz farm with its interesting zoological garden.

A short distance north is Muskegon, reached daily by boat from Chicago and Milwaukee. Here is found the "Buried Forest" and Pigeon Hill settlement, the summer home of many famous actors. Here, too, the rapid waters of the Muskegon river furnish some lively bass fishing. Another seven miles up the shore on U. S. route 31 is White Lake, the harbor for Whitehall and Montague, and scene of many spirited yachting regattas.

Pentwater and Ludington both big lake ports, give the summer visitor the double pleasure of inland waters and the mighty Lake Michigan. Pentwater lake and Hamlin lake are both close at hand. Oceana beach at Pentwater is, as the name implies, a beach comparable to that of a mighty ocean and affords some of the most delightful surf bathing to be found in west Michigan. Epworth Heights, just outside of Ludington, has a colony of attractive summer cottages, some mountain-like dunes that command a view of the whole dune and lake country. Inland from Ludington along State Highway 37 and U. S. 10, as well as the Pere Marquette railroad, are Lake and Newaygo counties, they are dotted with pine forests and abound with partridge, rabbits, woodcock, and deer. The scenic Pere Marquette river here has yielded trout weighing up to 13 pounds.

Northward from Ludington lies Manistee at the mouth of the Big Manistee river. In this picturesque little city is Orchard Park beach, once a quaint old apple orchard, whose trees still dip down over the sandy beach of the great lake. Manistee offers many interesting sight seeing trips to the salt wells and other points. It is but a short jaunt to the snug harbor of Portage lake, also Herring lake, where pike, bass, and muskies rise to the proper bait. Crystal lake, near Frankfort, is one of the largest inland lakes in Michigan and combines fishing, boating, dancing and other summer diversions. Because of its gemlike setting, Glen Lake, a bit farther north, is claimed by some nature lovers to the third most beautiful lake in the world.

Inland far enough to have the full benefits of the abundant woods and waters of northern west Michigan, and yet near enough Lake Michigan to enjoy bracing breezes, are many other popular resort centers. Lakes Cadillac and Mitchell are right at Cadillac. Here, too, is the William Mitchell state park, an ideal lakeside camping or picnic ground. The historic Indian burying grounds between Cadillac and Lake City attract the attention of many students and visitors. Hundreds of thousands of acres of wild timber in this vicinity also lure the summer traveler to sequestered haunts untouched by civilization.

Northward from Frankfort along the lake shore is the fabled Grand Traverse country, with its many bays and lakes, rivers and trout streams, mountainous formations, dunes and wooded wilderness. Here is Leelanau peninsula, famous for its vast cherry orchards. Another worth while motor trip is from Traverse City along the "Hog's Back" trail up the picturesque arm of land which divides the Grand Traverse into two smaller bays.

Little Traverse bay, Harbor Springs, Walloon lake are among the many other spots in this north country that offer the beauty of pines and water. Along the shore road leading to Petoskaw City are Cross village and other settlements of native Indians.

Throughout the whole of west Michigan the automobile is supreme. More than 21,000 miles of improved highways are helping bring the scenic and recreational attractions of this summer wonderland within easy access of every one.

A total of $31,000,000 is available this year for additional highway improvements in Michigan, according to Frank Rogers, state highway commissioner. He declared today that when this money is spent and state improvements are continued and new roads built, the state will have invested $100,000,000 in its 7,000 mile system of trunk line roads and 12,000 miles of secondary trails.

Half of Michigan's highway revenue comes from automobile license fees, one third from a gasoline tax and the remainder from state, county and township taxes. The pavement program this year calls for 250 miles of new construction.

Insurance Bills Meet Defeat in Ten Legislatures

THAT the nation as a whole is determined to prevent compulsory automobile insurance is clearly indicated by the decisive action taken on this issue in the current sessions of more than a score of state legislatures, according to the American Automobile association.

"Thus far compulsory automobile insurance proposals have met with such sweeping defeat in many legislatures that it is doubtful if the issue will raise its head again," says the A. A. A. statement, "at least not in the radical form which has caused nation-wide concern."

The statement is based on an analysis of the action taken so far in twenty-eight of the state legislatures in session this year.

"Of the twenty-eight state legislatures where the issue was pending in the form of bills introduced, ten have already adjourned after defeating compulsory insurance measures in quick fashion. These states include Idaho, Indiana, Maryland, Missouri, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, North Dakota, Oregon and Pennsylvania," it continues.

"In the few instances where the bills got beyond the committee stage and came to an actual vote the roll call turned into an overwhelming condemnation of compulsory insurance.

"According to latest advices, two other states, Maine and Vermont, have adjourned after passing bills on the lines of the Connecticut law, which is aimed not at the motorists in the mass but at the reckless driver who is compelled under this law to establish his financial responsibility after he has been convicted of recklessness.

"A review of the situation in the fifteen states which were still in session when the preliminary survey was made leaves little or no hope for the advocates of compulsory insurance to crash the gate through an eleventh hour stampede, since most of these legislatures have already turned down bills or effectively directed them toward 'cold storage.'"

Punish "Gypper."

Activities of the American Fair Trade association in Queens county, N. Y., have resulted in the conviction of another service station operator for substitution in the sale of automobile oils. Investigators for the association purchased the oil which was found spurious by a chemist.

TRIBUNE TOURS

XIII.—RELIEF ROADS YOU SHOULD KNOW A BOUT.

Numbered 1 follows the newly graveled extension of Irving Park boulevard, branching from the River road or Mannheim pavements. Number 2 is an extension of Grand avenue from River Grove, combined with the Army Trail road. Nos. 3 and 4 show how to miss congestion to the southwest by using 111th street and the new Archer avenue connection. Nos. 5 and 6 show the easily accessible gravel options relieving crowded Western avenue and the south county pavements.

WHILE thousands of cars jam their way, bumper to bumper, over the narrow paved roads leading into the country from Chicago today, scores of lonely miles will stretch away from the crowded pavements with no more than a car or two to disturb their Sunday peace.

Practically all of the gravel and stone secondary highways in Cook, Du Page, Lake and Will counties are reported in fair to good condition now and may be used as traffic relief trails by Chicago's hoard of Sunday drivers. Many of these roads are narrow—10 and 12 foot gravel and stone surfaces with ditches at their sides—but they offer a new undiscovered haven for the country rambler. Head off on a few of them today and get away from the monoxide crowds.

On the map some of the best gravel and stone "escape" roads are numbered.

NEW RAIL CAR.

A railroad engineer in Sweden has designed a railway motorcar said to attain a speed of 50 miles an hour with no more noise than the clicking of the rails. The silent car has an underslung engine, entirely separate from the frame of the car. Power is supplied to the drive wheels from the engine by distinct sets of gears, all in simultaneous use.

CONGESTION.

Traffic congestion on the highways of the United States is responsible for an annual loss of $4,000,000,000 in time and wasted fuel.

Wide Circle Road to Break Jam in West Coast City

RELIEVING traffic congestion in the metropolitan area of Los Angeles through the construction of a wide distributor boulevard is the plan adopted recently at a conference of state, county and city road officials and engineers. The proposed distributor highway will encircle the metropolitan district roughly, and will provide a more adequate entrance into the business area in addition to permitting through traffic to avoid the more congested districts.

The circle highway will be between 85 and 90 miles in length and will cost approximately $5,000,000. For some 25 per cent of the route existing highways may be utilized.

A novel feature in connection with the plan will be to have deep setbacks on both sides of the road so that it will not be lined immediately upon completion with "hot dog" and fruit stands. The setback will allow for an additional road on each side to be used for local traffic and parking, and it is believed will obviate the automatic creation of a business district along the road.

A general idea of the new highway will be to follow the plan already in effect in England providing a through circuitous route around smaller towns so that all traffic will not be forced to traverse the main thoroughfares. It has been felt in southern California that towns once eager to have every possible automobile pass through their main street now find themselves so harassed by such traffic that they are unable to provide adequately for their resident motorists.

A need for such a distributor highway around Los Angeles was emphasized by showing that since 1914 the population to be served by the existing roads had increased 350 per cent and the motor vehicles have increased more than 1,500 per cent.

Another Gap.

A 6.1 mile earth detour will go into effect this week between Wapella and Clinton on Illinois route 2. This detour will be bad after rain, and motorists are advised to avoid it.

News and Views of the Auto Trade

BOYHOOD friends of Col. Charles Lindbergh, traveling from Little Falls, Minn., to Washington in a Nash sedan as the official "home town" delegation for the "Lindy" reception, stopped in Kenosha long enough last week to meet C. W. Nash and other officials of the big automobile concern. The group, including Mayor Austin Grimes, Dr. C. H. Longley, Kenneth Martin and Sherman Levis, all family friends of the Atlantic conqueror, were commissioned by the Minnesota administration as the state's official welcoming committee. Their route was cleared for them and the trip was made in record time, with state police and motor cavalcades escorting the car through the majority of larger cities and towns in the long drive.

President H. H. Franklin announced yesterday that Col. Lindbergh has accepted a special Franklin sports sedan offered him by the Syracuse manufacturer in appreciation of his trans-Atlantic flight and its value in demonstrating the engineering principles of the air cooled motor.

L. B. Miller, whose hobby is racing Father Time across country, has tacked up a remarkable new record of 79 hours and 55 minutes in the transcontinental run from San Francisco to New York over the Lincoln highway. His elapsed time in an "Imperial 80" model Chrysler phaeton, was 3 hours and 17 minutes faster than his previous record for the distance.

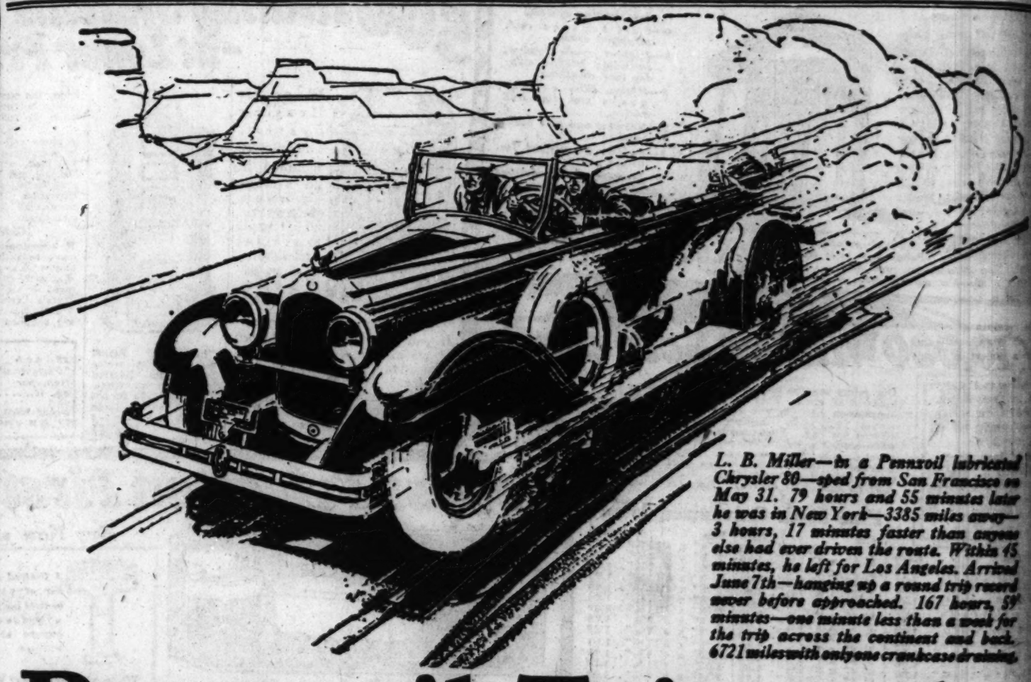
The Society of Automotive Engineers, in session at French Lick, again awarded the Rec "Flying Cloud" title of "engineers' conception of the ideal car." The model, entered in the New York Automobile show, was chosen as nearest all specifications decided on by the society as ideal American use.

J. P. Patterson, manager of the Chicago Firestone branch, 1200 Michigan avenue, used one of the Firestone balloon tires which carried them the entire 500 miles of the Indianapolis race on Souders' winning car as a feature of his show room display this week.

Six and one-half minutes was picked up as the record time in which eight members of the Washington section of the Society of Automotive Engineers required in assembling a stock Chevrolet chassis during the annual engineers' meeting at French Lick. Seven teams competed in the assembly contest.

The delivery of 350 Willys-Knight and Whippet automobiles, driven from Chicago as a climax of local Willys business, established a new high record for the month for the Overland Motor company organization in Chicago, according to Verne Orr, president. Willys deliveries to dealers totaled more than 1,500 new cars.

Stanley C. Cline, former sales manager of the Gabriel Snubber Manufacturing company, has newly associated himself with Edward A. Bloom, president of the Gabriel Snubber company of Chicago and district distributor of Pines Winterfronts. Cline will direct the sales organization of the Chicago office.



L. B. Miller—in a Pennzoil lubricated Chrysler 80—sped from San Francisco on May 31. 79 hours and 55 minutes later he was in New York—3385 miles away—3 hours, 17 minutes faster than anyone else had ever driven the route. Within 45 minutes, he left for Los Angeles. Arrived June 7th—hanging up a round trip record never before approached. 167 hours, 59 minutes—one minute less than a week for the trip across the continent and back. 6721 miles with only one crankcase draining.

Pennzoil Triumphs Again

FOR the third time in less than a year Pennzoil has helped smash the transcontinental automobile speed record.

And the Pennzoil used in Miller's spectacular dash is the same identical Pennzoil that independent service stations, garages and car dealers are selling to motorists every day.

Use Pennzoil—the finest oil it is possible to produce for your motor—100% supreme Pennsylvania quality.

Drain out the ordinary oil you are using. Fill your crankcase with Pennzoil. It wards off friction. Eliminates unnecessary wear and repairs. Increases power. Gives you a smoother, sweeter running motor. And carries you twice as far as ordinary oils without changing. Look for the Pennzoil sign.

Simultaneously with Miller's record-breaking run, Clarence D. Chamberlin was staking his life on Pennzoil as his plane hurtled across the Atlantic to Berlin.

A few weeks before, Pennzoil lubricated the same Bellanca plane when it broke all endurance flight records in its continuous flight of 51 hours, 11 minutes, 29 seconds.

Pennzoil was used by Lieuts. Kelly and MacReady in making the last previous American endurance flight record.

Pennzoil lubricated Ab. Jenkin's Studebaker that last year made the New York to San Francisco run in 86 hours, 20 minutes, beating all records up to that time.

Pennzoil again smashed a transcontinental record when L. B. Miller, driving a Willys-Sainte Claire, beat Jenkin's time by 3 hours and 8 minutes.

Hogs reacted slightly on the week-end session, losing 5@10c of the gain scored Thursday and Friday. Closing prices were 10@20c above midweek levels, but mostly 30@40c under the previous Saturday.

General average price yesterday receded 5c at $8.85, with the extreme top down 10c at $9.15, against a top of $9.55 and average of $9.20 a week earlier. A year ago top hogs sold at $14.80 with the average at $14.25. Most of the 4,000 left were held off of the market in hopes of lighter supplies earlier next week.

Hog Receipts Large.

The largest hog receipts since January were unloaded last week, arrivals totaling 190,000 against 141,619 the previous week, when Monday was a holiday. Prices averaged $8.80, lowest since 1924, standing $5.65 below a year ago and $3.30 lower than two years ago. Marketing of light and underweights bordered on liquidation, largely the result of high corn prices. The difference in weight was offset by the seasonal increase in offerings of sows, with general quality poorest in some time. The estimate average weight remained the same as a week ago at 244 lbs, but is 9 lbs lighter than a year ago.

Cattle receipts at all points combined last week were smallest in six weeks, causing a scramble for steers after a weak to lower opening. Prime weighty cattle soared to $13.35 in midweek, within 15c of the year's peak and 25c above last week's top. Yearlings averaging 1,083 lbs brought $13.00. Prices averaged $11.05, within 5c of the highest since middle of last April, despite the fact that general quality has shown a drop from several weeks ago. Over 650 steers sold at $13.00 and above. Heifers at $11.40, averaging 775 lbs, were within 10c of the highest during last year.

Sheep Receipts Small.

Surprisingly small sheep receipts last week sent prices skyward again, new crop lambs from Washington, the first of the season, reaching $18.75 Thursday, against a top of $16.75 for the new crop the previous week. Arrivals at 45,900 were smallest in over two years, barring holiday periods. Commencing the first Monday in June, last year's lambs were classified as yearlings and this year's crop as lambs, the prefix "spring" being dropped. Aged sheep advanced 50c and yearlings 50@75c for the week.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 23,000 cattle, 50,000 hogs and 15,000 sheep, against 25,712 cattle, 67,926 hogs and 4,637 sheep, a week ago, and 24,005 cattle, 43,214 hogs and 18,057 sheep the corresponding day a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 60,000 cattle, 150,000 hogs and 60,000 sheep, against 61,746 cattle, 118,717 hogs, and 74,827 sheep, a year ago.

WALL STREET NOTES

NEW YORK, June 11.—(AP)—May was the best month in the history of Willys-Overland company, President Willys declared when sailing to attend the international chamber of commerce meeting at Stockholm. Shipments totaled 26,946 cars. Mr. Willys estimated profits for the second quarter after all charges except federal taxes at $4,000,000 and estimated that earnings for the first half of the year will exceed $6,000,000.

Building permits in 500 cities in all parts of the country, gathered by S. W. Straus & Co., represent a total of $1,662,748,043 since Jan. 1, against $1,816,578,409 in the same period last year. In 1924 only 400 cities reported permits aggregating $890,032,124, or approximately $34,000,000 more than reported by 500 places this year.

Industrial plants in the United States operated in May at a rate of ¼ per cent under April, but 6.8 per cent higher than May, 1926; the Electrical World will say in its current issue. The moderate decline in May was largely seasonal in character.

Certainteed Products corporation has called a special meeting of stockholders for July 12 to vote on an increase in the no par common stock from 500,000 to 1,000,000 shares for the acquisition of new properties.

Bank clearings in 23 leading cities of the United States for the week ended June 9 totaled $10,102,247,000, against $8,608,293,000 in the same week a year ago, an increase of 17.4 per cent. There were 441 commercial failures this week, compared with 370 last week and 378 during the corresponding week last year.

Despite usual and to be expected seasonable reaction in a number of important articles, wholesale prices of the principal commodities, as a whole, continue to exhibit a rising tendency, 49 out of the 85 changes that appear this week in the list of quotations collected by Dun's Review being advances against 36 declines. In last week's statement 37 increases compared with 27 reductions; in a similar comparison for the corresponding week a year ago 45 advances contrasted with 23 recessions.

C. King Woodbridge has been elected president of Electric Refrigeration corporation, succeeding A. H. Goss, who becomes chairman of the board, vice H. A. Tremaine, resigned.

SALESMANAGER AND MEN WANTED AT ONCE

Salary or Commission or Both Paid

This is a real estate ad. We have no scheme, no free rides, no lunches for those who answer this ad. We do not want to get you in and then ask you to buy a lot. That you may better sell the other fellow. We do not have to resort to subterfuge to get men—there is a reason, and a good one. We can sell our prospects what we have to sell to them—and the location. We qualify our prospects as a matter of fact, by telling them all about our property. We have what the buyer wants—we have industry boosting for us—we have thousands of leads far more than we can take care of. We need help—we want to pay money to several managers and men who will work—work hard—night and day.

We can send each salesman to at least ten new prospects each week—our salesmanagers are sending their men (10 to 15 men or more to a manager) out on 10 to 15 prospects each week (from 100 to 175 new prospects each week to a manager).

Ask yourself what it should average in sales. Ask yourself why we talked to over 1,000 men last week to find the few we employed.

We have the proposition. Some of the best men in the country came over to us last week. If you will come in and hear E. M. Elliott tell you about our proposition you will do what others did—fight for the real positions we have open for the last of next week.

Come in and meet Mr. Elliott or Messrs. Kaplam and Francis—come in and identify yourself with success. Our proposition is designed to sell 700 lots in 100 days to some 7,000 prospects with new prospects being added daily. COTTON TRADE LIGHTER

Conditions in the cotton market were not the kind to encourage heavy trading on either side. Liverpool was closed and there was mostly clear weather over most of the belt, save showers in east of the Mississippi river. A spirit of buying was on early which lifted values, but week end evening up carried off from the top toward the last. The finish was with futures in Chicago 8 points lower to 12 points net lower. Spots were unchanged at 17.05c in New York and 16.65c in New Orleans. Prices in leading markets follow:

DRY GOODS MARKET.

NEW YORK, June 11.—(AP)—Carded 100x60s broadcloths were fairly well cleaned up in mill and second hands at 10¾c, the buyers being shirting factors. Better business is reported in shirting circles since men are discarding vests. The print cloth and sheeting sections are quiet and prices are being very firmly maintained. A holiday in Calcutta accounts for a lack of primary quotations arriving. Good inquiry arrived in local quarters and substantial quantities have been taken on the various afloat positions. Raw silk prices were unchanged with little trading reported, either here or at Yokohama.

METAL MARKETS.

NEW YORK, June 11.—(AP)—COPPER—Easier feeling during week; 15¼c asked price for electrolytic delivered at Connecticut valley points, but it was said that this price was being shaded without bringing in any buying interest of importance. TIN—Relatively quiet; prices reacted somewhat. LEAD—Easier, with consuming demand not so active as recently. ZINC—Firm, with producers not offering freely. ANTIMONY—Fractionally lower in a dull market.

MEXICAN COURT LEAVES OIL MEN OUT ON A LIMB

BY JOHN CORNYN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

[Copyright: 1927: By The Chicago Tribune.]

MEXICO CITY, June 11.—The Mexican Land Securities company, an American oil concern, has been faced with a peculiar situation in the oil law.

The company applied for a restraining order against the law which declares that all possessors of oil land acquired before the adoption of the present constitution in 1917 must apply for rehabilitation of the lands under the new constitution. The new constitution refuses to acknowledge proprietory rights to the subsoil.

The judge refused to grant the restraining order on the ground that no attempt had been made to enforce the provisions of the law. The judge ruled that the court had neither undertaken to protect the American company, nor refused protection, and that no legal proceedings could be taken against a law that was not enforced, as the law injured no one.

The decision of the judge affects all Mexican oil lands acquired previous to 1917. According to the decision to no legal means exists for settling the controversey over that part of the constitution converting freehold titles and rights to the subsoil into long leases from the Mexican government and no means will exist as long as there is no attempt to enforce this part of the constitution.

According to this afternoon's newspaper El Grafico, the judge's decision and the consideration upon which it is based, makes the law a dead letter while in no way deciding its constitutionality.

There are more than fifty similar demands for restraining orders before the courts, and the oil men are anxious to learn their rights.

REAPERS HUM IN GRAIN HARVEST IN SOUTHWEST

Kansas City, June 11.—(AP)—Humming binders and reapers and clattering combines are singing the songs of the harvest in the great southwest.

From the broad wheat fields of Texas, up through Oklahoma and into the wide expanse of Kansas, the golden grain is falling. Over all the land is the stir of harvest, and in the fields an army reaps that the country's bread basket may be full.

Kansas, premier wheat state of them all, must be content with a short crop, an estimated production of little more than one hundred million bushels standing ready for the sickle. Adverse weather and pests cut the crop to the smallest since World war days.

In all of Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas the yield has been estimated at about 162,000,000 bushels, but little more than Kansas fields alone yielded last year.

NEWS OF THE CROPS

Cromwell's report from Indianapolis, Ind., after trifling from Franklin, Edinburgh, Columbus, Flat Rock, Shelbyville and return, says corn planting will be completed in few days. Much is up, and partly cultivated for the first time. Soil worked up in poor shape, and the color of the plant is a little off, with a good many more or less weak points. A few days of good weather will bring considerable improvement, but will also make weak plants more apparent. Attention should be called to the lower yields possible with 50 days corn. Most farmers feel that a spell of dry weather would be quite damaging. Wheat looks good and harvest will begin in a normal time, or within ten days.

Reports covering the northwest with but few exceptions indicate a very optimistic feeling as to the northwestern grain prospects, says Van Dusen Harrington Co. The fields of small grains throughout the northwest show a heavy growth and fine color. South Dakota is especially favored which is backward. With sufficient moisture everywhere, the principal danger for the best development of the crop from now on, are black rust, or extremely hot winds.

Bryant's crop report from Phillipsburg, Kan., after a trip from Dodge City to Harry, wheat will average about 5 bu. per acre, but drought and electric storms have taken heavy toll in this district. Corn is doing well since the rain of 1.81 week, but is very late. Oats are heading on very short straw, and do not look good.

Benton, Ill., June 11.—[Special.]—Mrs. Emma Cole committed suicide at her home near here last night by jumping into a well.

GRAINS DECLINE AS BUYING LAGS; LARD ADVANCES

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Grain markets were firm at the start, but when buying let up there was a return of the liquidation by longs so much in evidence on Friday and wheat broke 3⅛@4c from the top with corn off 3⅛@3¼c, and the finish was well toward the bottom with net losses of 2⅝c on wheat. July closed at $1.44¼ to $1.44⅝, and September, $1.42⅛ to $1.42⅝. Corn lost ⅞@1c with July 93⅛c to 93⅝c, and September, 97⅞c to 98c. Oats were 1@1⅛c lower with July, 47⅛c to 47¼c, and September, 46⅜c to 46⅝c. Rye lost 1@2c with July, $1.15½ to $1.15⅝, and September, $1.03.

Grain prices fluctuated with extreme rapidity the last week, wheat having a range of 7⅞@8⅝, and which finishing well toward the inside figures showed net gains of ¼@½c. Corn broke badly, and at the bottom was 14⅝@15¼c under the recent high, closing 7⅝@9¼c lower, while oats were 2¾@3⅛c lower, and rye 4½c higher to ½c lower for the week. Lard gained 5@7½c; ribs lost 10@22½c, and bellies were up 10c for the week.

Local Cause Wheat Decline.

Wheat was firm in the early trading with buying by strong commission houses on the bullish Canadian government crop report issued late Friday and on better cables than due from Liverpool. Hot and dry weather was reported in southern Russia where crops are deteriorating. Murray estimated the Canadian crop at 320,000,000 bu, or 60,000,000 bu less than last year on the basis of his acreage. However, the bull news fell flat, and free selling headed by several local professionals after the buying ceased disclosed a lack of support and with stop loss orders caught the decline was easily attained.

Aggregate trade in wheat was not large, and the market easily influenced. The uncertainty over the Kessinger board of trade control bill continues to restrict operations on the bull side to a great extent. Weather conditions in the spring wheat territory were spotted with temperatures as low as 28 in the Canadian northwest. Export demand was reported as slow.

Corn in Sharp Decline.

Corn made a fair showing early, but there was a lack of enthusastic buying, and when wheat started downward the market declined readily. Longs reinstated long lines early, while cash houses bought July and sold September. A detailed government report showed that only 50 per cent of the acreage had been planted by June 5 in a territory that normally produces around 20 per cent of the total crop of the country. Boats have been chartered to load out 500,000 bu cash corn for eastern ports. Weekly weather forecast was for showers with cooler early in the week.

The seaboard reported a good export business in oats, but futures were under pressure and the close was weak. Longs sold freely. Crop reports were spotted.

Persistent liquidation was on in rye and with the weakness in other grains a decline was easily attained. A little export business was said to have been done with Germany.

GRAHAM BROS. BUY CONTROL OF PAIGE COMPANY

Detroit, Mich., June 11.—(AP)—Directors of the Paige-Detroit Motor Car company today approved the plan indorsed by stockholders whereby the three Graham brothers, truck manufacturers, will acquire controlling ownership of the Paige company.

The Grahams, Joseph B., Robert C., and Ray A., have purchased all the Jewett stock and the three Jewetts, Harry M., Frederick L., and Edward H., will retire. Harry M. Jewett was a founder of Paige.

The action of the Paige directors approves a plan whereby the Grahams purchase approximately $4,000,000 of 7 per cent convertible second preferred stock.

COTTONSEED OIL.

NEW YORK, June 11.—(AP)—COTTONSEED OIL was easy with prices closing 5 to 10 points net lower on week-end liquidation and evening up in advance of the government consumption report due on Monday. Trading was light with sales aggregating 2,400 barrels. Prime crude, 8.00c; prime summer yellow spot, 9.15c; July closed, 9.37c; September, 9.80c; October, closed, 9.97c; December, 10.05c; January, 10.10c.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, June 11.—[Special.]—With a double holiday ahead today's transactions on the stock exchange represented nothing more or less than an evening up process in which many shorts covered their stocks and many others sold for profit taking purposes. In general, the trend was downward. The market was fairly broad and the activity, so evident all the week, was well maintained.

There were declines of two points or more in such stocks as South Porto Rico Sugar, Sloss-Sheffield, Pittsburgh and West Virginia, Commercial Solvents B, Abram & Strauss, National Surety, U. S. Cast Iron Pipe, Pittsburgh Coal, Norfolk and Western, Lambert company, Colorado and Southern, Chicago Pneumatic Tool, Buffalo and Rochester, Brooklyn Edison, American Type Founders, and Air Reduction.

Several Issues Rise Sharply.

On the other hand, there were sharp gains of more than two points each in Continental Insurance, Federal Mining and Smelting, Hudson Motors, Park & Tilford, New York Dock, Foundation, Wilson preferred, and American Woolen preferred.

Texas Gulf Sulphur also was among the few strong stocks. The shares sold at 62½, the best price seen for them in several weeks, and closed at 62⅝ for a net gain of 1⅝ points.

Strength in American Can was at the expense of the short interests. At today's high price, which also was its close, 54½, it showed a net gain for the day of -1⅜ points and a gain of more than ten points from the low of the year.

New Peak Prices Reached.

Four stocks were able to reach new highs since the end of 1925. They were Equitable Office Building preferred, Mullins Body, American Writing Paper, and Gliddon prior preferred. Three stocks went to new lows for the same period—namely: American Brown Boveri common and preferred, and Cluett-Peabody.

Texas Pacific Land Trust sold down to 28½, where it showed a loss of more than ten points from the high of the week, and Byers showed a drop of eleven points from its recent high.

Loans, discounts, investments, etc., of the New York clearing house banks decreased $61,991,000 this week. The deficit in reserve of $3,511,080, shown a week ago, was increased to $26,419,530. Net demand deposits decreased $92,015,000, and time deposits increased $3,575,000.

MAIDEN MEDITATIONS by Sara Moore

THE FLAPPER WIFE TO ANY MAN.

You praise me for my quietness,
You boast about my thrift;
You plan the budget and declare
For saving I've a gift.
You dictate modesty in dress—
Long skirts and high cut collars;
But any blonde can turn your head
Who looks "a million dollars."

[Copyright: 1927; By The Chicago Tribune.]

CHIVALRY.

Damsel-in-Distress wept sore—
Ran to brave Sir Lancelot's door;
Snapped his steno tall and bleak:
"Your appointment is next week."

Lancelot, now a legal ace,
Yawned, "I might take up your case
If the size appeals to me
Of your first retaining fee."

Gone the day of quick romance,
Gone the flash of sword and lance.
All great deeds of chivalry
Now are done quite—legally.

Champions on justice bent
Now collect a stiff per cent.

For rent, one heart; a modern one
Vacated just today;
A sunny, airy, roomy place;
A tenant who will stay
Is offered this: a long term lease;
He must be one who cares
To undertake remodeling;
Also to make repairs!

SAM 'N' HENRY ---- By Correll & Gosden

The Boys Are Broke and Things Look Mighty, Mighty Dark

[In trying to move a small safe Sam injured his foot, and we find the boys pending an evening in their room.]

SAM — Henry, I think my foot's goin' be a'right by tomorrow, an' I kin git back on de job.

Henry—If yo' is countin' on mashin' yo' foot ev'vy time yo' move sumpin', yo' betteh git some iron shoes or sumpin'.

Sam—Well, dat was yo' fault. Henry, 'cause yo' let de safe slide down out o' yo' hand on my feet. Anotheh thing, I can't move no safe by myself.

Henry — Don' argue wid me now. I'se busy.

(Henry has been sitting at a table in the room, writing on a piece of cardboard.)

Sam—Whut is yo' figgerin' out dere, Henry?

Henry—I is de president of de comp'ny, an' I'se figgerin' up how much money we'd made today if we'd worked an' hauled a trunk ev'vy hour.

Sam — How much would we made, Henry?

Henry—Dat's a matteh dat we gotta take up at a open meetin'.

Sam—Well, tell me dis, Henry. How is we goin' git some money tomorrow to git sumpin' to eat wid?

Henry—I'se thinkin' 'bout goin' to de bank an' borrowin' some money.

Sam—Well, whut is yo' goin' give de bank fo' cor-rat-ral?

THINKIN' IS HARD WORK

Henry—Give 'em Gram'pa, de hoss, for cor-rat-ral. Dat'll let em know dat we mean bizness.

Sam—If yo' take de hoss down to de bank, Henry, how is we goin' haul trunks wid him?

Henry—Now, don' be so dumb. I ain't goin' take de hoss in de bank in de man's office. We'll put a mor'gage on de hoss.

Sam—I don' think he kin carry no more, Henry. He got all de harness on him an' he got a great big collar. He's pullin' enough.

Henry (heaving a sigh of disgust at Sam's ignorance)—Dere yo' go. Listen, yo' is de advertisin' manager, ain't yo'?

Sam—Yeh, I'se de advertisin' manager. Whut about it, Henry?

Henry—Well, tend to de advertisin' department an' don' mess wid de president no mo'.

Sam—De only thing, Henry, we gotta figger out how we kin make some money.

Henry—Well, I been figgerin' all day. I been thinkin' and thinkin'.

Sam—Yo' been asleep fo' de las' four hours heah on de bed, Henry.

Henry—Dere yo' go agin. I done tol' yo' dat's when I do my thinkin'—when I'se layin' down wid my eyes closed.

Sam—I thought yo' was asleep, Henry.

Henry—Sometimes when I'se thinkin' I think so hard dat it sorta kill my brain fo' a minute an' I sorta drop off to sleep.

Sam—Well, keep on thinkin', Henry, 'cause we gotta make some money heah.

(There is a knock at the door.)

Henry (fearing trouble) —O, O. Dere's somebody at de door. I hope it ain't de lan'lord, 'cause we owes him enough.

Sam—Whut is yo' goin' tell him, Henry?

A LETTEH FROM LIZA

Henry—You is de treasurer. You handle de matteh. (Calls to door.) Come in.

(The door opens and a special delivery carrier walks in.)

Sam (speechless at not seeing the landlord)—Awa—awa—awa——.

"Special Delivery for Sam Smith."

Man (interrupting)—Special delivery for Sam Smith.

Sam—Dat's me, mistah. Han' it to me heah. I got a bad foot. I can't git on it much, mistah.

Henry—If dat's from Liza, I hope she's sendin' you some money, dat's all.

Sam—Mus' I sign on dis line heah, mistah?

Man—No, no, sign on this line down at the bottom.

Henry—Is yo' done writ to Liza lately?

Sam (signing) — Wait a minute, Henry. S-m-i-t-h—dere you is, mistah. (As the carrier leaves.) Close de door when yo' go out, will yo' please?

Henry—Does Liza know you'se broke?

Sam—I fo'got to tell yo', Henry I writ her a lettah de otheh day an' tol' her dat we done started in de transfer bizness right now. I ain't said nothin' 'bout bein' broke.

Henry—Yo' betteh start thinkin' 'bout it cause we is flat, an' we ain't got no oats fo' de hoss. (Sam is nervous over his letter.) Stop shakin' dere an' open up de letteh.

Sam—Ev'vy time I git a letteh from Liza, Henry, it makes my heart jump right up in my throat, yo' know it? Umm—umm, I LOVES dat gal. Soon as I git on my feet an' git some money I goin' marry her too.

Henry—Read de letteh, read de letteh. Whut do she say?

Sam (as he gets the letter unfolded) —Umm—umm, listen to dis, Henry, listen to dis!

Henry—I know. I kin tell by dat smile on yo' face. She's callin' yo' lollypop dere, or sweet geranium or sompin'. Shake de letteh an' see if dere's any money in it.

Sam—Ain't no money in it, Henry, but listen to dis. (Reads.) "My darlin' angel, little baby-face——" (to Henry) Umm—umm, ain't dat sumpin'?

Henry—Read de lettah now, read de lettah. Don' git de president mad.

Sam (reading)—"I'se jus' received yo' wonderful lettah an' I want you to know dat yo' little baby is waitin' fo' yo'." (To Henry) Doggone, Henry, dere's a sweet gal, now dere's a sweet gal.

Henry—Yo' must-a tol' her dat yo' was comin' back home to eat or sumpin'.

Sam—No I didn't, Henry. I jus' tol' her dat I'se gittin' 'long a'right. Tol' her we done gone in de transfer bizness an' we was goin' be big men.

Henry—Whut else do she say?

Sam—She say heah—"I loves you mo' an' mo' each day, an' when I thinks of you up in Chicago wid all de otheh big bizness men, I is proudeh an' proudeh of my little baby face."

Henry (disgusted)—O, O. If dere's any mo' stuff in dere like dat, skip dat.

Sam—Den she say heah—"I was tellin' gram'pa whut a big success you is makin' in de transfer bizness an' 'bout all de money dat you is makin' an' he tol' me to tell you——"

Henry (interrupting)—Whut is you done tol' dat gal?

Sam—I jus' tol' her dat we done bought a hoss an' wagon an' gone into de transfer bizness an' we was gonna git some mo' hosses soon.

Henry — Well, read what Liza's gram'pa say den. Let's hear it.

Sam—She say, "My gram'pa tol' me to tell you to be careful whut yo' do wid yo' money. Gram'pa talked to a friend o' his an' he tol' me to tell you to buy g-o-v-e-r-n-m-e-n-t——" (To Henry) Dat's gov'ment, ain't it, Henry?

Henry—Dat's right.

MORE ADVICE

Sam (reading)—Tol' me to tell you to buy gov'ment bonds an' be careful not to put too much money in one place.

Henry—O—O. If each one of us jus' had fifty cents we'd both take it oveh to de res'trant, I know dat.

Sam—Listen heah, Henry (reads)—"Gram'pa say to git two or three pieces of good real estate now an' hol' on to it."

Henry—De only way we goin' git any real estate is to steal it, dat's all.

Sam—Den she say heah (reads): "Gram'pa say dat real estate bonds is good, too, an' when you buy yo' hosses, buy 'em from some man dat knows his bizness."

Henry—We ain't got 'nuf money to buy a piece o' roast beef, much less any hoss meat.

Sam—Den she say heah on de nex' line: "Gram'pa say if you is makin' big money, you could send fifty or seventy-five dollahs each week to de bank down heah in Bummin'ham."

Henry—Dat man mus' think you is a millionaire, don' he? I don' know which is got less sense, Liza's gram'pa or our hoss, Gram'pa.

Sam—Liza's all mixed up, Henry. She mus' think we got money.

Henry—Read on—whut do she say dere?

Sam (reading)—"Gram'pa jus' tol' me to tell you not to throw yo' money away, but to hol' on to it now while you is got plen'y 'cause some day you might need all de money you is got now.

(There is a knock on the door.)

THE LANDLORD CALLS

Henry—Come in, come in.

(The landlord enters.)

Sam—Well, I be doggoned, heah's de lan'lord, Henry.

Henry (realizing the landlord's mission)—O, O. (To landlord) Good evenin', lan'lord. (Gets up to get his hat.) I was jus' gittin' ready to leave. I got a 'pointment down de street wid a gent'man. Yo' know I is de president of de transfer comp'ny.

Landlord—Now listen, boys, I done waited long 'nuf fo' dat rent. I is sorry to tell yo' but de time is up——

Henry (interrupting)—Jus' a minute, brotheh, jus' a minute heah. I'se gotta git down de street dere to see dis man fo' a few minutes, 'cause it means two —three hund'ed dollahs to me. Sam heah is treasurer an' he will handle dat matteh. I'll see yo' later. (To Sam) —Sam, you take care o' de gent'man heah. So long, I'll see yo' later. (Henry leaves.)

Landlord (to Sam as Sam puts on hat)—Just a minute, Sam, where is yo' goin'?

Sam (leaving)—I is de gent'man dat Henry is got de 'pointment wid.

Irish Bootlegger Takes Pride in Making Good Stuff

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

DUBLIN.—The United States holds no option on bootlegging. The Emerald Isle, where strong drink is as legal as weak tea, is going through a siege of this popular American practice, but for a reason just the opposite to that which makes millionaires of the Yankee moon makers.

The small farmers here are finding that agriculture is a poor paying proposition, while there is a ready market for the "poteen" due to its cheapness of price. The standard prices for good liquor are a bit stiff for the Irishmen of the rural districts, so the poteen producers enjoy a brisk trade at reduced prices.

Here, as in America, the authorities charged with putting down the manufacture of illicit liquor, have their troubles. Since the special orders have been issued to the civic guards to wipe out the illegal stills only one seizure has been made.

In one respect the Irish bootlegger differs from the American. The Irishman takes a certain pride in turning out a good quality of poteen, and his raw materials are not taken from products designed for external use only.

THE SAY-SO OF HOLLERAN YELL — by Westbrook Pegler

Wherein a Manager Ruins His Own Logical Contender

I AM very cautious by nature and I try to keep my cue chalked at all times, but there are occasions when occurrences will come along and occur in an unexpected manner and make a sucker out of a gentleman when he thinks he has protected himself in every way.

It seems to me that a great many of our big men have adopted my policy, as I notice that if you walk up to some big man in public life and ask him if he will have a drink he will not give you a definite answer until he finds out whether you want him to have a drink or don't want him to. And I have known some politicians who would not condemn Judas Iscariot until they investigated popular opinion on the subject.

But I have been thinking of an occurrence that occurred when I was the proprietor of an Indian heavyweight by the name of Chief Pain-in-the-Face, which goes to show that, no matter how much you may chalk your cue, you are bound to tear a hole in the table some time.

THE LIEDERKRANZ TRIBE

The chief was a New York bum by the name of Julius Sulzburger, but he had a very dark complexion, so I got him an Indian hat with some turkey feathers on it at a masquerade store and my affectionate old lady sewed some beads on his tights, and whenever we had a fight I would illustrate him with pictures of reindeers and cowboys and such things to make him look like an Indian.

Although he was not a very good fighter, he was a fairly smart bum, and I easily taught him to say such Indian phrases as "Want-um heap big weiner schnitzel," or "Ugh! Ugh! Me want-um borrow five dollars," with a slight German accent.

All this made my stiff look very picturesque to the public, and to show you how smart he was I will assert that one day out west when some Indians at the ringside started to talk Indian to him he talked back to them in German, so I explained to these Indians that he belonged to a tribe of Indians way up in Canada called the Leiderkranz Indians, and did not speak anything but Leiderkranz.

MONKEY BUSINESS

The heavyweight champion at the time was a very terrible bum and he was afraid to fight anybody, so I challenged him on behalf of Chief Pain-in-the-Face, figuring that we would get a lot of work in the clubs around the country as the logical contenders. But, as I stated, my bum was not very good, either, and when I suggested this plan to him he stated to me:

"Well, my dear sir, I think that is a heap fine propostion, but if we do this I am liable to run into some tough bums some night and forget to duck already, so on the whole I think it would be better to hire a monkey."

I would like to explain that when you are taking a logical contender around the country you do not wish to have him chilled unexpectedly by some unknown bum without any reputation, as this would be a great indignity for a logical contender, so it is considered good business to hire some friend to go along and take the falls. This kind of bum is known as a monkey, and these monkeys can be of great assistance in building up a logical contender's reputation, especially if they bleed well, because the public then sees that your contender is a great puncher and a man killer.

A RIFT IN THE LOOT

The heavyweight champion of the world was so terrible that most of the experienced monkeys had retired from the monkey business to become logical contenders, and we had some difficulty finding a suitable monkey. But we finally engaged one by the name of Ball, who was called Rubber Ball because he used to rub the bums in the gymnasium, although some authorities asserted that he was called Rubber Ball because he spent so much time bouncing off the floor of the ring.

The first place we boxed we introduced Rubber Ball as Sergt. Tewksworthy, the champion of the English army, and the next place we introduced him as Ole Oleson, the Minnesota lumberjack, and he would state, "By jove, you old blasted blighter," or, "I bane tank so," or if we introduced him as the champion of Spain he would go around calling people "senorita," and this was very helpful as it perfected the illusion for the public.

I must state in justice to this bum that he was strictly honorable and sportsmanlike for about a month, and he would ask me before each fight, "Well, when do I take my dive?" and I would say, "We will put on the knockout in the eighth round this evening," or if we were catching a train or there was not much resources in the box office, I might state, "Let us have a sensational knockout in the second round tonight."

But one day when we were playing a game with dice on the train, Julius Plain-in-the-Face got into an argument with the monkey and the monkey called him a Dinkelspeil Indian and threatened to take a punch at him the next time they got into the ring. Such low ethics horrified me and my bum, because clean sport should be conducted strictly in a spirit of friendly rivalry, so I dismissed the monkey and he got off the train at the next station. This left us in a very bad position, because we had an engagement for Chief Pain-in-the-Face to lick the monkey under the name of Jeffrey Wentworth, the champion of Harvard, the next night.

I taught him to say 'Want-um heap big weiner schnitzel' with a slight German accent."

A BAD SITUATION

As soon as we got to our town I told the promoter that Jeffrey Wentworth had to go back to Harvard to learn some more lessons and therefore we could not have any fight, but he said, "Oh, my dear sir, I have sold $2,500 worth of tickets and I have given $800 of the money away in presents to the chief of police and our state senator, so it would be a terrible blow to clean sport in this town if your bum does not fight anybody, as I could not refund this money to the subscribers."

"Well," I stated, "I certainly will not let him fight any of your local bums as he has a very sensitive nature and if he should happen to kill one of your citizens it would give the Indian race a bad name. But," I asserted, "I used to be a bum myself, and if you wish me to impersonate Jeffrey Wentworth I will do so and we will keep this matter a secret for the good of the game."

So that was our plan, and I thought it was a very fine thing for sport, but as I have stated, there are occasions when events will come along and occur with great unexpectedness no matter how well a gentleman chalks his cue.

'RAY FOR HARVARD!

That night in the first round my bum hit me a paste in the back of the head that must have knocked me crazy, because I didn't come to until the middle of the fourth round, and when I did come to my bum was asleep on the floor and the spectators were cheering for Jeffrey Wentworth of Harvard, amid great confusion.

"What has happened?" I inquired, "and why is my logical contender lying down in the middle of the ring in this manner?"

"A regular Harvard cheer for Jeffrey Wentworth," the spectators shouted, and I then realized that while I was in this irresponsible condition due to the paste on the back of the head, I had chased my bum all over the ring and finally hit Chief Pain-in-the-Face a belt on the potato and knocked out my own logical contender.

Two French Operas Tried in Germany

BERLIN.—(AP)—Two French novelties were given a first hearing in Germany at the Neuss theater of Leipzig.

Henri Rabaud's opera, "The Call of the Sea," based on J. M. Synge's "The Riders to the Sea," met but an indifferent reception, a fact that the critics attributed to the libretto, described as "a gloomy atmospheric painting devoid of all dramatic action."

The score of the former conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra is praised, however, as "a talented tonal synthesis from Wagner and Debussy, though just lacking the divine spark of genius."

More successful was the the première of Maurice Ravel's "The Magic Word," a lyric fantasia in two pictures of an attractive fairy tale for which Ravel has constructed "an iridescent tonal design with all his accustomed virtuosity."

THE B. AND C. AND THE DUKE

By Duke Budnik

Tha Story of a Poker Game at Sam's House

IT'S been up to me for about three months to have the pot grabbers over for a poker game on account all the other guys have had their turn. Last Tuesday the B. and C. gets informed that Friday night I was gonna have them over and she better get herself some place to go cause all tha rest of tha bunch has got their lions trained to beat it until it's time to serve tha lunch. Instead of getting a pleasant "Alright dear," tha following gas attack is launched:

"You ain't kidding me, are you papa?"

"Whadda ya mean, kidding?"

"Whose gonna clean up after those bums?"

"They don't dirty up anything."

Nobody heard tha door open.

. . . 'an nipped nine dollars while I'm sleeping.

A BAD MESS

"The only thing they don't get ashes on is tha ceiling."

"What did I buy you a vacuum cleaner fer?"

"You ain't paid fer it yet, have ya?"

"What the hell's the difference?"

"That Swede Rosenberg burnt a hole in tha table cloth last time."

"It wasn't him, it was Daniels."

"Your crazy, Daniels spilt tha coffee."

"Why don't ya pipe down with tha yelling? I ain't deaf."

"Supposing ya quit loser, whose gotta suffer?"

"Listen! Crabby, you win. I'll go to dodge meeting Friday instead."

Well, just between you an me I was in a helova mess. I had already told tha swindlers that everything was all set and Wednesday morning I hadda call everybody up and pull a lot of phony excuses as to why I coodn't have them. They natcherally was sore. Some of 'em had to make a lotta promises to get out Friday and here I go an pull a wet blanket on them.

Three o'clock Wednesday afternoon tha day is saved. Sam Mellow calls up an' asks if I cood get out at all Friday night. As long as I had pulled tha lodge act on tha B. and C. I told him I cood, so he says he'll call up tha crowd and we shood come to his place as his ole lady is home visitin' her folks and she'd never be any tha wiser.

THA SORE ACT

When I got home Wednesday tha B. and C. has a swell feed [on which I don't even comment]. Get me! I'm pullin' a "sore-as-hell" act on her. After we eat she says she'll do tha dishes alone if I take her to a movie and I says, "You'll not only do tha dishes alone, but you'll do tha movie alone." And I stood pat. Eight o'clock she asks, cood we go for a bus ride and she gets told that SHE good. WE coodn't.

Ten o'clock, after finishing tha paper I pull a yawn, don't say, "Good night," an mozee off ta bed. Thursday morning I discover what a sap I been all these years fer not pulling tha "sore act" before. You shooda seen tha breakfast she fixes. Grape fruit [loosened], toast, buttered instead of tha do-it-yerself system, even tha eggs are shelled. And just before I check out she says as how sorry she was about not having tha boys up Friday and it was selfishness on her part. Also that I shood have 'em all up and she'll fix a swell lunch and woodn' I forgive her. As long as I'm all set to play I just tole her not to open up tha subject again as it might cause me to lose my temper and also that the next time she has any women playing bridge in tha afternoon she better chase 'em 'fore I got home or I'd throw 'em out on their ears.

Here's something I didn' reckon on. Sam promised his Mrs. that he woodn' do any stepping while she was gone and that the only place he wood go would be to his lodge meeting on Friday nights. Incidentally, Sam belongs to tha same lodge as I do. He also promised not to have any company at tha house cause she didn't want to come home and find tha place upset. This information was dished during tha course of tha game in tha way of askin' us guys not to get any ashes on tha carpet and to sneak out quietly when we left so as tha neighbors woodn' hear us and maybe spill tha beans.

"Nice meeting at tha lodge?"

"Yes, dear."

"How long you been pulling this act?"

"First time."

"Did you win?"

"Cupple a bucks."

"One gentleman won $18."

"Which one?"

"Nine bucks wood be a even split with his wife."

"Yes, if she got it."

Again I stood pat and refused to slip her that nine.

ANOTHER MENU

Saturday morning's breakfust was delicious.

FASTENED GRAPE FRUIT.
BURNT TOAST.
SOFT BOILED EGGS (HARD BOILED).
HOT WATER, COFFEE COLOR.

Also, a bit of pleasant repartee in the way of:

"So your gonna throw my girl friends out on their ears if you catch us playing bridge." NO ANSWER.

"Sam didn't sleep at home last night." NO ANSWER.

On tha way downtown I figgered I better call Sam up at his office and ask how he came out. He tells me 3 steps at a time, tha bottom 3 first.

After quittin' time I went over to pay Lee Baker 15 bucks what I've owed him fer some time and when I started counting I'm a son of a gun if a certain party ain't gone an' nipped nine dollars while I'm sleeping.

P. S.—Twin beds would be a greater invention if they was placed in separate rooms.

The weekly woes of the Duke and his Ball and Chain are a regular feature in this section.

AN INTERRUPTION

One of tha birds inquired as to when was Sam's jailer due back and we got told either tomorrow or Sunday. For a pleasant surprise she changes her mind and manages to hit Chicago at half past eight Friday night. Knowing Sam wood be at tha lodge and not wanting to sit home alone she drops in at our house. After chewing tha rag till eleven o'clock she induces tha B. and C. to walk over to tha house with her.

On acct. most of tha birds hadda be home by eleven-thirty we played tha consolation round at eleven sharp. For those of you who don't know what a consolation round is, I will explain. You double the limit and play once around tha table in order to give tha losers a chance to lose some more. Well, we was so busy about this time that nobody heard tha door open. What happened was tha women heard our voices, snuck in tha living room and listened while we was settling up. I win 18 bucks. Guess tha women knew how everybody came out. Poor Sam Mellow dropped 16 bucks, twelve pints of ginger ale and two quarts of prewar Gordon that he made just before.

HEAVY ARTILLERY

Just as we was getting on our tip toes to beat it for home, tha gloom-dispensers pop out and Sam started to stutter and tried to kiss tha damper, who didn't even as much as say "Good evening" to any of us. It looked like a storm was gonna brew so we just beat it. Tha B. and C. up to this time ain't cracked a word.

We walked home in silence and when we got there tha heavy artillery starts.

Boilers Are Homes for Two Women

PARIS.—(AP)—Iron homes house two old women of Paris. Their houses are boilers. They are big discarded boilers from which the tubes have been worn out. In these solid, one-room homes, the two old women have lived for six years, keeping house in a primitive way but scorning charity.

One of the boilers is square, making a room about 8 feet long, 5 feet wide, but only 4 feet high. The other is an obsolete style of tubular boiler, about the same size. Stoves have been installed in them. Boxes are cupboards. Gunnysacks cover the cracks left by lean-to wooden doors.

Food is obtained by a little foraging at the public markets.

The women say they have no expenses, for they are old and expect their clothes to last as long as they do, with a little repairing for which they have plenty of time.

Queen Mary Has a Wilderness in Palace Grounds

LONDON.—(AP)—Queen Mary's favorite spot in the garden of Buckingham Palace is a place that she calls "The Wilderness." It is a spot entirely without any formal setting, near a lake, and abounding with flowers during spring and summer.

"The Wilderness" receives no special attention from the royal gardeners, and the flowers grow where and how they will. On a warm summer's day there is no more delightful spot in London. The trees hang over the water's edge, making a delightful retreat that might be in the depth of the countryside, instead of the heart of England's capital.

The queen takes great interest in the palace garden. She possesses a library on gardens and gardening, and is very feminine in her passion for beautiful flowers. Since she was a girl her majesty has counted gardening among her chief hobbies.

Handshakers Begin to Bore Sig. Mussolini

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME.—A tremor of apprehension went through political circles both here and abroad as Premier Benito Mussolini issued his latest decree. Most of the Italian dictator's pronouncements cause European statesmen uneasy moments, but this one struck right at the very heart of political tradition.

Sig. Mussolini is through with professional bores, celebrity seekers and handshakers, the background of every politician's success. In simple and unmistakable terms he has given the nation and world to understand that his time is as valuable as that of any other busy man and he does not want his office cluttered up with people who may be giants in their own home towns, but who come to visit him in the same sense they would visit the other historic or interesting tourist spots of the Eternal City.

He is tired of being looked upon as a curiosity, it is said, and has sent precise instructions to all prefects that persons wishing to acquaint him with matters they consider important must do so through the prefects. The prefects themselves must accompany all committees when requests for audiences are granted.

This order is not directed at the American tourists, who work all avenues of influence for introductions, but undoubtedly it will cut down the number of Yanks who march across that famous long strip of carpet, a seemingly endless path that separates their entrance into the room from the piercing eyes of Italy's leader.

HOT PAGES FRUM MY DIARY

By Snowshoe Al

This Entertaining of Newlyweds Ain't No Easy Job

LAST night it wuz raining, so I figured it wood be a swell time to go an' see my gal friend because she koodn't expect me to take her anywhere in the damp. The gal friend's name is Malvina. I calls her on the phone an' warns her that I'm kumming over.

"O, are yew?" sez she, gitting real peeved; "did I say yew kood?"

"Nope," I admits, yawning.

"All right, kum on," sez her, "an' be sure to put on a clean collar, because a young married couple, wich are friends uv mine, are also kumming over this evening. They jist got back frum their honeymoon. Don't kum over here with the intentions uv sitting around like a mummy. Broadcast sum sort uv a conversational noise—see if yew can act sociable—I'm trying to hide the fact frum my friends that I run around with a dumb crystal set!"

"Quit spilling the grief," sez I; "I'll do my share towards keeping the english language in circulation tonight."

NICE POOCH!

Wen I gits to her house I knocks on the door an' wuz told to kum in, so I shoves the door open an' meets the dog. The Bow-wow's name is Sylvester, an' he is 45 pounds uv pure unadulterated Cannibal, in fact every time me an' that Flea-incubator meet, everybody in the neighborhood starts betting each other money, because I always consider it an elimination contest, whereas Sylvester evidently has got my name filed away under "Food."

Talk about a tough Barking Machine! If that Bone Burier saw a regiment uv leather-necks go past the window he'd git so dam hungry he wood go crazy! He woodn't be able to understand why so much meat wuz gitting away frum him. The last time they let him outside he wuz seen running down the alley dragging a dead horse an' looking for a place to hide it. Also, I remember the time they found him standing in front uv a big sign-board, gazing with hungry eyes at a life-size painting uv an elephant. He already had all the paint chewed off as high up as the elephant's knees. Yup, that's the little playmate wot I encounters everytime I calls on Malvina.

SPEAKING OF DOG FIGHTS

Well, Sylvester makes one starved dive in my direction an' I tried to close the door between us, but he got his head caught in it. This bothered him greatly but it pleased me immensely, an' I wuz jist gitting ready to massage his mug with my shoe wen the gal friend stopped the slaughter.

"It wood be jist like yew to kick that poor innocent dear," sez she, chaining Sylvester to the radiator.

"Listen," I squawks; "wot gits my goat is the fact that wen anybody else knocks on this door that hunk uv Galloping Boloney is chained up! Far be it frum me to suspect foul play, but I've got a dirty idea that wen I knock, yew unfasten him an' howl: 'Kum in.'"

"It's a good thing that yew don't depend on yer ideas for a living," sez she, "or yew wood spend most uv yer time standing in the bread-line. I want yew to leave Sylvester alone. Dog fights are jist terrible!"

"Don't git funny!" sez I; "there has to be at least 2 dogs in a dog fight!"

"Well," sez she, "there's only one real difference between Sylvester an' yew—he has a pedigree!"

"Where's yer mother?" asks I.

"She has gone out," sez Mal.

"An' the kid brother—where is he?" sez I.

"He is not in," sez she; "ask me another!"

HERE COMES THE BRIDE

Jist then Matrimony's latest victims announced their arrival by knocking on the door, so I sat down an' prepared to become sociable. The first to enter the room wuz the bride. She had the graceful lines uv a darning needle, only she didn't weigh as much. She wuz followed immediately by the Gloom, who wuz a fair-haired boy uv 30 years, an' who weighed 260 pounds. Well, as soon as Sylvester got one look at this guy he got so hungry that he had a spasm an' tried to swallow the radiator. Me an' the dog wuz both hoping that the Gloom wood go over an' try to pat him, because I wanted to laugh an' Sylvester wanted to eat! No luck!!

We all sits down after I wuz introduced to this couple [their name wuz Jones] an' I gits the high sign frum the gal friend to become talkative. I stalls for a minute to let sumbody else start the lingo, but it seems as how young married couples wot have jist returned frum their honeymoon don't have anything to say, so I breaks loose with verbal racket.

"Well, how do yew like married life?" sez I.

"O, fine!" sez the Jones family.

"That's strange," sez I, "taking into consideration the number uv guys wot are shot by their wives on their honeymoon. Statistics compiled by the Quack Doctors' Association uv America show that only one guy in 4,000 has any right to git married. I can show yew a pamphlet——"

BEG PARDON??

Jist then I got a terrible kick on the ankle, so I lets out a wild howl. Malvina begged my pardon, but she did it with a dirty look in her eye, so I figured I better drop that subject. So I starts all over again.

"Where did yew go on yer honeymoon?" sez I.

"Niagara Falls," sez the Jones family.

"Har, har! Fish!!!" sez I; "so yew went to see the cute little drops uv water do the high-dive! I wooden't go to that place on a bet. Nothing to it! Did yew have a compartment on the train or did yew take a couple uv lower berths?"

"My, wot a beautiful lamp shade!" squawks Mrs. Jones.

"Isn't it, though?" howls Malvina. "Bad night out, aint it?" sez Mr. Jones to me.

"Yes," sez I, impatiently; "did youse take a compartment or did yew jist grab off a couple uv lower—OWWW!!"

"O pardon me, Al, wuz that yer foot I stepped on?" hisses the gal friend.

"Yew know dam well it wuz!" I squawks, gitting real peeved. "Wot side uv town do yew folks live on? Or do yew live with her mother? If yew do, yew're crazy."

"We have a 3 room apartment on ——avenue," sez the Jonses, adding the exact address.

THAT GORGEOUS LAMP

"O! O! Not so good!" sez I; "that neighborhood has got a helluva reputation. That's Bootlegger Boulevard. All the actresses frum the dime burlesque shows are rooming in that neighborhood. I know one named Maggie wich hangs out in that same block. O, baby! Wen it kums to lapping up Liquid Lightning, that filly cops the gold plated garbage can. She certainly likes the old Third Rail Vinegar! She can stow away more Oil Uv Mirth than anybody I ever—OWWW!!!"

"Wot's the matter?" sez the gal friend, real innocent-like.

"Yew know wot happened!" squawks me, "yew kicked my ankle!"

"I'm sorry, I didn't mean to," sez her.

"Apple-grease!" sezs I; "are yew folks furnishing yer own place?"

"O, yes!" admits the Jones Duet.

"I'll bet yew didn't buy twin beds. Har, har!"

"My, wot a gorgeous lamp shade!" sez Mrs. Jones.

"O, I'm so glad yew like it!" yells Malvina.

"It's still raining outside," sez Mr. Jones to me.

ANYBODY SEEN A HAT?

Well, within the next hour I asked several questions which caused Mrs. Jones to admire the lamp shade, so at last I suggests to Mal that she give her the damn thing.

About this time the Joneses decides to go home, so after assuring us that they had a lovely time they departed. I caught up with them before they reached the bottom uv the stairs, in fact they helped pick me up.

Tomorrow night I'm going back for my hat.

Little Tales of Big Heads

No Stars in the Air.

Because his accompanist had received several request for solos, a certain radio tenor strode sullenly toward a chair, remarking: "Well, I guess the star takes a back seat." The usually good natured program manager could not resist an amused look about the studio and asked innocently: "Where's the star?" E. C. M.

Her Nose Knows!

I once knew a woman with a large Roman nose. One day she was conversing with my mother and had begun to tell her how proud she was of her nose: "You know," she said, "that only a person who is an aristocrat has a nose as I have." V. S.

Small "Understanding."

A friend who often goes shopping with me has very tiny feet and upon her small "foundation" has built a superiority complex of giant proportions. She takes savage delight in calling attention to my number sixes, knowing that her twos will profit in contrast. I have spent many useless hours waiting for her to try on shoes in various stores and cause commotion among the clerks who seldom have calls for her size and last, when she has no intention of buying at all if she can be fitted. That's just one of Cinderella's little tricks whereby she spreads the doctrine of her tiny "tootsies." It was the proverbial last straw the other day when she told me: "It isn't only on account of the looks that I pride myself on my small feet. There's more to it than that. You know, small feet are sort of an indication of patrician ancestry." F. A. S.

Misconstrued.

The waiter in the waffle house had been very attentive and deferential all through the meal, so I smiled and gave him a liberal tip. When he helped me on with my coat he whispered in my ear: "How about a little date tonight?" A. M.

Gentlemen:

We have had such very definite results from our ad placed each week in your Metropolitan Section that we feel that you will be interested in hearing about them.

Because of an absolute check on the ad we know that it is not unusual for us to have as many as fifteen inquiries and to get ten or more orders for paint jobs from them.

The results have been gratifying to the extent that we contemplate continuing our ad in the Metropolitan Section each week.

Very truly yours,

Dear Sir:

It may be of some satisfaction for you to know that we are greatly pleased with the results obtained from the advertising carried in your Metropolitan section.

Just recently we have opened a new branch store at Seventy-First Street and South Shore Drive, and the business that we have enjoyed has been very gratifying. In fairness to you, we honestly believe that a large part of this success was due to the advertising placed in your medium.

Having been in the cleaning and dyeing business on the South Side for over a generation, it is a pleasant surprise to us to notice the many new accounts this publicity has given us.

Our firm is planning on an extensive expansion program, and we hope to use your columns more liberally in the future, being satisfied that it will pay us.

The Chicago Tribune,

Gentlemen:

We heartily endorse the Metropolitan Section of the Sunday Tribune as a valuable advertising medium.

Having one of the most modern and up-to-date greasing and oiling stations in Chicago, we decided to tell our story to Tribune readers. We started with small copy in the first issue of the Sunday Metropolitan Section, and have been increasing the size of our advertising as the returns have been coming in. One coupon ad - 75x2 - brought us 130 direct replies.

We consider these results indicative of the Tribune's pulling power in outlying territories.

Very truly yours,
Wm Marshall
Manager

TODAY three more advertisers add their testimony about the remarkable new sales force The Sunday Tribune has created in its Metropolitan Section for neighborhood advertisers. On the North Side an automobile refinishing firm nets ten paint jobs and more from one small ad. On the South Side the Metropolitan Section carried most of the load in making a new branch cleaning and dyeing establishment a success. On the West Side an oiling and greasing station gets 130 inquiries from one small ad.

And note from the letters that there was no uncertainty about these results. They were identified positively as the product of Metropolitan Section advertising.

Only one of the three has used over 1,000 lines to date. Yet all three businesses are showing mounting sales—and as they grow they can advertise more extensively and grow still faster.

This tested sales producing medium is equally available to others who want the same results. The Metropolitan Section offers outlying merchants the chance to buy Tribune circulation on their side of the city only, at a decidedly favorable rate. Any neighborhood merchant can now place the sales-producing power of The Tribune behind his business—the same power that has built many a million-dollar volume in Chicago and the Chicago territory. Send for a Tribune man and the facts today. See how easily you can place the proved power of The Sunday Tribune's new Metropolitan Section behind your business now!

INFORMALLY - - - Hollywood Admires Chicago's Sky-Line - - - By Genevieve Forbes Herrick

Movie Notables Work Hard for Publicity Here

ONE of the first lessons a Hollywood star learns, and certainly the last thing the press agent forgets, is that Chicago is a railroad center.

And cinema land is correspondingly in this city's debt. For it means that every time a lady of the screen leaves her California bungalow for her European villa and a possible divorce, she has several hours of leisure in Chicago.

Time to be photographed with the engineer of the train that carried her this far east; time to be interviewed at the depot where she arrives; time to get into a negligee, up in her suite at the hotel, there to be photographed and interviewed; time to buy a fresh bunch of orchids and be photographed and interviewed once more as the train pulls out for New York. And time, above all, to intone deep, throaty praises of "Chicago, there is really nothing like it; with its magnificent sky line."

—and possibly a husband.

DOUBLE ON CHICAGO

What works for the trip east goes double for the return trip west. For this same Chicago, still a railroad center, affords once more a purposeful loitering place where the film star, back from Europe with a French maid, twelve trunks full of clothes and, possibly, a titled husband, makes a stopover to praise old fashioned honeymoons, exhibit new fashioned jewels, and sing one more song in admiration of Chicago's lake, her boulevard system, even her smoky aura.

A Chicago interview with such a pilgrim starts either in California or in New York. As I have suggested, it's better when it starts in the east.

First of all, then, comes the telegram dispatched by the press agent in New York. It reads something like this:

"Vedette Salerno arrives in Chicago Tuesday. She will be in car 6; drawing room A [always drawing room A]. Miss Salerno is en route from southern Spain where she spent several weeks in getting local color for her coming interpretation of 'Carmen,' to Hollywood where she will begin work on her new picture immediately. Miss Salerno is accompanied by"—and here follows the roster of press representatives, film directors and assistants and assistant assistants, secretaries, maids, and, possibly, a bridegroom.

A CROWD GATHERS

With all this advance notice, it can hardly be an overwhelming surprise to Miss Vedette when she is met by the gentlemen of the press. But she usually goes through all the appropriate gestures of amazement, gentle dismay, pique, reluctant capitulation, and annoyed boredom at the proceeding.

But I'm getting ahead of the story. After the telegrams have arrived, the reporters and the cameramen go down to the railway station and gather around gate 6.

"Hey, who's comin' today?" queries a red cap.

"Pola Negri and her prince," somebody volunteers. Then the crowd gathers. Some are the casual travelers who chance to be near the gate. Others are especial fans of this particular star. And then there is the familiar fringe of people, most of them women, who meet trains for a thrill. There is one woman in town—I never did know who she was—who gets jostled and pushed about once a week, in her determined and successful attempts to get into drawing room and within speaking distance of the celebrity, whether it be film star, pugilist, African huntsman, or a prominent divorcee.

But this woman's favorite is Gloria Swanson. Every time Gloria goes traveling this woman is on the job. She slithers past policemen; she jockeys for positions on train tracks. And when she gets near Gloria she goes into a rhetorical hysteria that resolves itself into a series of gasps interspersed with, "O, I think you're wonderful."

She's a terrible pest, but she's making a success of her avocation.

THE STAR ARRIVES

At last the train comes in. The crowd mills around car No. 6. For all the surprise that the traveling celebrity pretends to register, she, or he, is dressed for the part. Every hair is in place; every jewel is shining brightly; the dog or the monkey, or whatever animal is the vogue that instant, is all combed and perfumed. And the flowers are growing on the star's shoulder, at her waist, in baskets that her maid carries.

Sometimes the cinema queen dresses more for a movie than for a journey. Just the other day a cold, raw, March day it was, I met a widely known movie star. She stepped off the train into a blustering wind; gowned in white, with white shoes, a white hat, and a summer ermine wrap. If the little office girl in the big factory put on such a costume for a train journey everybody would smile pityingly and say how too bad it was that she didn't know any better. But this lady from Hollywood tripped away in inappropriate finery to her rose filled apartment, there to issue fashion dicta and other important statements.

If the arriving star is a man, he, too, has his makeup all assembled. The flower is in his button hole; his lemon colored gloves are faultlessly clean, and the Japanese valet follows six paces in the rear with the swank raincoat.

ORCHIDS, DOGS, ETC.

The local representatives of the film star's company cluster about; they bring more flowers, preferably orchids. There is a rush and a swirl and the celebrity makes a bluff at making off down the platform. She is too tired, too nervous, too busy, or too something, to be photographed. But let the cameraman take her at her word, and begin to pack up his grip, and the lady has a change of heart. She is coy, gracious, acquiescent.

She cuddles her dog; or if the dog is up forward in the baggage car she recollects that now is the time to make a terrible fuss over his whereabouts. Which she proceeds to do. The dog being absent, she clutches, often, some new gewgaw from Europe, a curious doll, a novelty handbag, a fancy cane.

But the best photographic accessory of all is a new husband. For Hollywood publicity seems to be swinging the pendulum over toward superdomesticity. A honeymoon the new theory is, rates higher than a divorce.

So Gloria and her marquis, and Pola and her prince, not to speak of others with less ancestral in-laws, do a Darby and Joan on the train steps.

NOW THE INTERVIEW

Then comes the interview, as the movie star hurries out to the taxi. The conversation is mostly about big cities and little children. How splendid is Chicago, and what a dear little youngster that is standing there at the door! If the star has time she kisses the bewildered youngsters. Then on to the hotel.

If he or she is a topnotch star it's a de luxe suite, with a sitting room resembling the Coliseum. Lesser stars have to put up with smaller quarters.

Now comes the interview en masse.

Elects to slip on a dressing gown.

The star hurries to her apartment and does a quick change into a negligee. A man star often elects to slip into a brilliantly hued dressing gown. Sometimes the business suit does very well.

Sometimes there are conversational hurdles that the heroes and heroines from Hollywood have to take neatly and quickly in order to avoid publicity that is not all golden. We can usually tell how near to an unpleasant event is the star's association by the general temper of the interview. If the traveler is in the midst of such an unpleasant episode he or she is pretty sure to be too fatigued to see any one. The interview will come through a maid or a secretary or a judicious press agent.

Then, as the dangerous publicity fades into the distance the star grows sweeter and sweeter.

MABEL'S PEANUTS

For instance, when officialdom was anxious to find out just why Mabel Normand ate peanuts in front of a certain home one eventful day, Miss Normand was exceedingly reticent on her Chicago stop-overs. But later, when the peanut chapter was closed, Miss Normand grew conversational, even chummy. She went so far that one morning, as ten of us sat in her apartment and asked her of this and that, she looked over at a hat one of the ladies with pencils was wearing. Not a prepossessing bonnet. In fact, so the girl told me afterward, a basement bargain.

But Mabel Normand, warming up to her rôle, beamed over at this chapeau and murmured, as if she really meant it:

"Oh, what a perfectly darling hat. I must get one like it!"

And Pola Negri, reticent to the point of sobs instead of words, when she went through Chicago on her way to Valentino's funeral, sought to nullify any bad impression she might then have made, by radiating warm adjectives when she came here, just the other day, with a new husband and an old, old silver cross.

SAME OLD STUFF

Of course there are some things you must never ask the stars about. Don't mention peanuts to Mabel Normand. Don't grow geographic to Gloria Swanson and ask her if she remembers the little house on Mohawk street where she was born. And don't talk to Pola Negri of her new sister-in-law. These are some of the fundamental rules of the game.

As a matter of fact the interview is usually so patterned that it could be prepared beforehand in the office. In a few instances the answers could be left blank and checked hurriedly. It's an inevitable prophecy that the Hollywood travelers will choose to say much of the coming picture, its magnitude, its difference from all previous pictures.

Then there'll be the old patterned eulogy of Chicago, and the "dear public."

Even Peggy Joyce, who makes her own patterns, has been known to pull a bromide about Chicago's weather. She once said she liked it, "because it's so invigorating; it makes me feel like working." But she said it as she stepped aboard a train going away from Chicago.

The west bound train arrives shortly before noon. What with pictures and talks, and cuddling the dog, it's high noon by the time the star reaches the de luxe suite of the hotel. Then comes the costume change, and the mass interview. Luncheon next, followed by a shopping tour. The star may have just returned from Paris with seventeen trunks, and may have collected ten more in New York, but she must go shopping in Chicago. A present for her mother, or some toys for somebody's "kiddies." That makes a new lead for the later editions of the papers. A lost dog isn't a bad item for the late afternoon. Another change of costume, and fresh flowers for the taxi-ride to the evening train for California, and once more drawing room A.

POLA AND NORMA

Sometimes the stars get a bad break. For competition isn't good for these Chicago stop-overs.

Why, just the other day Norma Talmadge got her schedule so confused that she came to town the same day that Pola Negri and Prince Serge Mdivani arrived. Worse than that, the two women stopped at the same hotel. Pola Negri had suite 108; Norma had a corresponding suite up eight floors. But since everything is relative, Norma, who can be ever so haughty, was able to get the solitude she often says she wants, while the newlyweds down in 108 posed for pictures.

It takes not only the engineer of a train but a florist, several press agents, a modiste, a maid, a book of poetry, a dog in a basket, and an essay on Chicago weather to get any Hollywood star through Chicago with credit.

And—but I must stop now. They just laid a telegram on my desk. It informs me that Lottie Pickford, Jack Pickford, Colleen Moore, and John McCormick are arriving here. I've got to go and meet them.

PARIS.—(AP)—Scores of fast European express train lines are shown in a moving network on a large map in a Paris tourist office window. Each train route is a slender glass tube with a liquid full of bubbles forced through it. The London-Nice, Paris-Bucharest, Brussels-Rome and other crack international trains are visualized. The moving liquid gives an impression of speed and the web of lines connecting all the great cities conveys an idea of facility of travel that excites much comment.

The folks in your locality
With sparkling personality
Are singularly rare,
A man of scintillating mind
Is very difficult to find,
(Of that you are aware).

But now and then, if you, mayhap,
Should notice some magnetic chap
Of effervescent wit,
Mark well this personage and say
In lucid lingo of the day,
"That lucky lad has 'it'!"

For that's the modern slangy term
To state an inexplicit germ—
That art to captivate;
And people with a gifted sense
Attain renown and eminence
Through that hypnotic trait.

But oft a masculine defines
This quality by other signs,
And briefly, we allude
To liquid orbs and classic face,
To curves and swerves and shapely grace
Of female pulchritude.

And now some candid femmes reveal
The blokes who have the most appeal
Are portly bozos, who Sign checks with unconcern and ease,
And are oppressed by that disease
Of sordid revenue.

Have I that rare, elusive "it"?
It hurts me, friends, but I admit
My positive reply is nit!

Whites Are All "Foreign Devils" to Poor Chinese

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SHANGHAI. — One of the American missionary refugees, hurrying along to the bund to catch up with the rest of his party, was stopped by a Chinese beggar woman clad in rags and nursing an infant only a few weeks old.

"Yang Kwei-tsz," she whined, as she thrust out her bowl. "Yang Kwei-tsz" means "foreign devil."

"I shall give you nothing if you call me that," said the American missionary in the best Chinese he could speak, and walked on.

"Yang Kwei-tsz hsien seng," the woman whimpered, as she snatched at his coat to detain him. This means "Mr. Foreign Devil." He repeated his statement, and the bewildered woman tried again, saying "Hao Yang Kwei-tsz hsien seng." ("Mr. Good Foreign Devil").

Her persistence in calling him a "foreign devil" when she had nothing to gain by it, interested the American and he stopped to make inquiries.

"I shall give you nothing so long as you call me that," he repeated. So she made another attempt.

"Lao yeh hsien seng Yang Kwei-tsz," she said, thrusting out her bowl. This means "Lord Foreign Devil, give me a copper."

At this moment the babe cried a feeble toothless bleat and the mother turned her attention to soothing her offspring.

The American saw that she knew no better. She had learned no other name for the strange white people than "foreign devil." So he pressed a few coppers into her hand and passed along. As he went he could hear her call blessings upon him, wishing him a fruitful life, but still calling him "Yang Kwei-tsz," or "foreign devil."

The City called UPTOWN CHICAGO

To be close to greatness is to sometimes fail to realize one's good fortune to the full: Those who live in and around Uptown Chicago know its advantages, yet because they sometimes seek afar what is at their very doors, Uptown Chicago is going to speak for itself.

Within the borders of Uptown Chicago—Montrose, Clark and Argyle Streets and the Lake—there is a community as self-contained as any city. You can buy nothing anywhere else that you cannot buy there, nor can you buy at a saving elsewhere. [Balance the cost and bother of a trip that takes you farther than Uptown Chicago, and you'll find it more than any possible saving.] If you like to shop from your car, you can park it close by—an impossibility in Chicago's other great shopping area.

If you would dine out and dine well, Uptown Chicago's restaurants and hotels afford a wide and excellent choice of surroundings and food, and you need neither hurry nor pay more than is reasonable.

If you seek amusement, Uptown Chicago has long been famed for its unrivalled facilities for pleasure indoors and out. In its theaters and ballrooms and at its spacious beaches, thousands are royally entertained. When you plan your vacation, a consolidated railroad ticket office is ready to help with the plans and supply the tickets, and make a trip downtown needless.

And, of course, to live in Uptown Chicago itself is to live well, even for those of modest means. Apartments are more plentiful than they have been in years, and rentals are by no means high. Unusually good schools afford an especially sound reason for residence in Uptown Chicago; there are many large apartments available for families with school children.

Come to the City called Uptown Chicago and see for yourself the things it offers to those who live or visit within its invisible walls. When you know it well, you will find it ever-fascinating, ever-pleasing, ideal from every viewpoint.

Business Men—Uptown Chicago welcomes new businesses, and is doing more than any other Chicago community to assure the success of every enterprise within the Uptown Chicago area. We urge you to investigate the possibilities here for substantial success.

Ticonderoga and the Great War Path

[Copyright: 1927: By The Chicago Tribune.]

FROM the broad water of the St. Lawrence at Sorel, some forty-five miles or so below Montreal, but north of it, a waterway with portages and carries goes to New York harbor. Sorel, still a French town with habitants bringing their produce of vegetables, meat and tobacco to the market in the city square, was the old French seignory of that name. The lord of the manor built a fort where the Richelieu river flows in from the south, and later it was known as Fort Richelieu, for the cardinal whose name the river bears and who did most of all men to make New France in Canada a failure for France, although in Quebec province it is French today with the idiom of the days of Richelieu.

The seignor of Sorel with his fort was the final defense of Montreal from direct Indian attack by water from the Iroquois country further south. The divide of the waterway is at the head of Lake George in New York state. From there is a sixteen mile carry to the Hudson. From the Hudson a party of warriors or traders or an army could go north by the carry to the head of Lake George and use its ordinarily placid waters to the portage at Ticonderoga into Lake Champlain.

The scene was and still is of great beauty. In the water descent from Lake George to Lake Champlain there is a fall at a time used for a mill. Hills and barely penetrable forest cupped the shores.

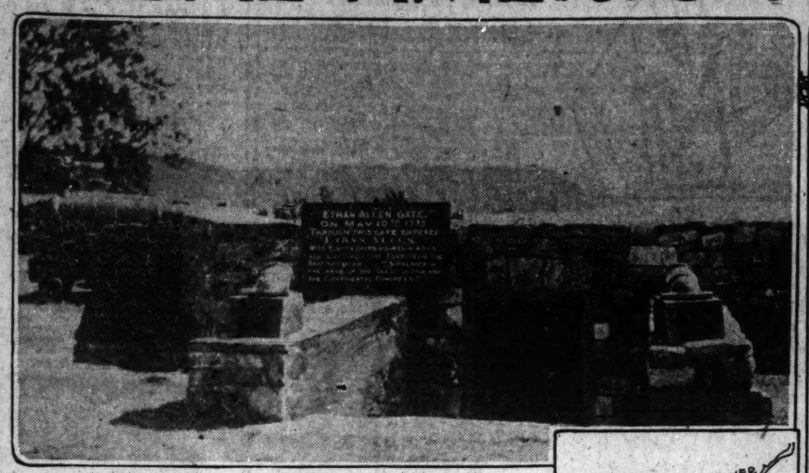
Invaded by Champlain.

Up at the foot of Lake Champlain is an island the French had named Isle aux Noix, which with an English tongue pronouncing it sounds strangely like Illinois. But it was only the isle of nuts, and the Illini were in their own language and day "men." There was a fortification on the island of which there are remains today. It was the last defense of the lakes from attack from the south.

Champlain was the leader of the first white men who saw this waterway. He yielded to the importunities of the St. Lawrence Algonquin Indians and to his own curiosity, and in 1609 he went with a war party of the northern Indians who wanted to see what effect his firearms would have on their military superiors, the Iroquois.



The Gate at Fort Ticonderoga through which Ethan Allen went to capture the fort in May, 1775.
(Pacific & Atlantic Photo.)

The spot where this curiosity was satisfied is now supposed to be in the neighborhood of the carry between Lake Champlain and Lake George, or between Ticonderoga and Crown Point. Champlain killed two Iroquois chiefs and the Algonquin Indians caught some prisoners and carried them back north for torture. Champlain wrote that the Iroquois sang plaintive songs.

This was the opening of the waterway for history. Soon the French along the St. Lawrence had to build their forts. The Iroquois recovered from their fear of firearms, and they started north for revenge. They were the Romans of the American aborigines. Their home was in the valley of the Mohawk in New York, with the Mohawk tribe to the east by the Hudson and the Senecas to the west at Niagara, five nations in all, until their kindred, the Tuscaroras, came up, after a losing war with the South Carolinian colonists, from the Cherokee mountain regions, and made the Five Nations the Six Nations.

Once an Indian Warpath.

Before our history this waterway had been an Indian warpath. These Romans of the primeval forests, the Iroquois, had military control of a vast area their war parties traveled. They had proconsuls on the Ohio, and fear of them was on the Ottawa in Canada and at Michillimackinac.

The shots Champlain fired in 1609 fixed in some Iroquois tribes and clans of the Long House, or general assembly of the nation, a bitterness toward the French which never died. This was true particularly of the Mohawks to the east. It was least true of the Senecas to the west, at Niagara. They were less stanch. They accommodated themselves to intrigue and persuasion, and let the French down the further western waterway of Lake Erie, French Creek, the Allegheny river, and the Ohio, while the Mohawks and the English were able to hold the Champlain route. And yet they only held at the extreme southern end for a long time.

The French had Fort Richelieu at

The great war path, New York to Montreal.

(Canadian National Rys. Photo.)

Sorel, Fort Chambly at the rapids and basin of the Richelieu river at Chambly, the fort on the Isle aux Noix, Fort Frederick at Crown Point on Lake Champlain, and Fort Carillon at the carry between Lake Champlain and Lake George. It was later and is now Fort Ticonderoga, but Montcalm, the great, fine minded French soldier, greater even than his conqueror, Wolfe, had named it Carillon, for the waterfall which sounded in his ears at night as a chime of bells. He also said it was a bad fort, and would be "a trap in which an honest man would lose his reputation." This was most singularly proved to be true in 1777, when Burgoyne drove the American Gen. St. Clair out of it by mounting a few cannon on a higher hill which commanded it, and in doing so nearly broke the heart of the American revolution.

Benedict Arnold.

No other waterway on the North American continent has seen such military action as has this stretch of river, lake, and portage between the harbors of Montreal and New York.

The first American navy fought and lost its battle off Valcour Island in Lake Champlain under that most remarkable man, hero and traitor, Benedict Arnold. That was when the American invasion of Canada, undertaken before the Declaration of Independence and while Boston was besieged, had proved a heroic winter failure [to be reverted to in these articles], and when in the retreat of 1776 it seemed impossible for the sick and dispirited troops of the colonies to cover their withdrawal from Canada and to hold the lakes.

The British won at Valcour Island, but winning, they did not dare come farther south than Crown Point. The Americans took refuge at Ticonderoga, where they held their ground. Carleton, the British commander, went back to Canada, and it was a year later that Burgoyne came down the same route to be defeated at Saratoga.

This route is where Abercrombie was defeated by Montcalm in a greater disaster than that of Braddock at Fort Duquesne at the forks of the Ohio. It is where Gen. Dieskau was captured by the colonials and British. It is where the massacre of Fort William Henry took place. It is the real dark and bloody ground of prehistoric and historic America. It has been the jugular vein of America. Its recorded contests began when Champlain fired his arquebuses. Its last great fight was near Plattsburg, when the gallant MacDonough won a great naval battle in 1814, one harder to win than Perry's in Lake Erie and one in which defeat would have been more serious.

Historic Memories.

This waterway has the story of Jane McCrea, the story of the brilliant and beloved Englishman, Lord Howe, killed in a skirmish which lost a battle with Montcalm, and it has one of the world's greatest ghost stories in the death of Maj. Duncan Campbell of the Black Watch, the Scotch Highlanders whom George II. recruited from the border marches.

At Ticonderoga the waterway gave Ethan Allen, the Green Mountain boy, his fame for American school boys who know him for his "great Jehovah and the Continental Congress." At Ticonderoga the waterway saw the ruin of the British Gen. Abercrombie in the French war and the near ruin of the American Gen. St. Clair in the revolution. Farther down, near the Hudson, it saw Burgoyne's army enclosed and taken by American patriots who might have lost their war if they had not won at Bennington and Saratoga.

It is a present day wonderland for the traveler and tourist and its ruins and monuments preserve its past.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

Bands in the Summer Style Parade Are Many and Play a Gay Melody of Chic.

By Bettina Bedwell.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—(Special Correspondence.)—No parade is worth much without at least one band, and fashion's parade, acting on the principle that if a little is good, a lot is much better, runs largely to bands, this season. Almost every daytime dress, however simple, has its coterie of bands, and the manner in which these bands are arranged makes up a large part of simple summer chic. Naturally, they have rhythm, and whether this rhythm is of the jazz variety or the more classic depends on whether the model, coat, dress or cape, is designed for debutante or grande dame.

When in doubt about trimming your summer frock a duet, trio or quartet of bands will make the melody of chic a sure thing. Of course, Paris has a way with bands, and there are rules and tempo and all of that. Bands often supply the contrast in color to a one tone frock, or they may, again, follow the single tone and be equally fashionable. Bands, whether of the home town Saturday night concert kind, or the crêpe and mousseline bands of your dress, require a lot of hard work to achieve harmonious results.

They are, as worn in Paris on the models of the grands couturiers, hand made, with a lot of infinitesimal stitches making them march in straight or curved lines. Paris has an antipathy to the sewing machine for anything but inside seams that form the major construction lines of a garment. Anything that shows must be fait à la main if it is to have the grand chic. Making by hand gets an exquisite effect, although we Americans often object to the fragility of it and the tendency to come apart when we indulge in our youthful, often strenuous pastimes. You can resort to the machine, if it means peace of mind, and have all of your bands stitched fast so there is no danger of disruption, but Paris will continue to go out in hand stitched ones, even if that means a restriction of personal activity. Anyway, I will tell you something about the why and the wherefore of the band in summer styles, and you can settle this question between hand and machine labor to suit your own selves.

One of the favored ways of using bands in Paris is to tie together two contrasting materials into one frock. This has its advantages, not only in resulting chic, but in enabling one to produce a smart frock from two remnants of material neither of them of sufficient yardage to produce a frock all alone.

Our first model is a Worth dress that uses printed and plain material, about two yards of each. Although M. Jean Charles Worth probably wasn't thinking at all of economy, but only of getting a beautiful effect, when he made at, it none the less can serve very well economical purposes.

The blouse of this frock is navy and white printed crêpe georgette, and the skirt is plain navy. The manipulation of the bands is masterly, and achieves the purpose of making this two material dress one charming unit. On the sleeves, which are modified bishop, are three diagonal bands of plain dark blue georgette, and the collar is a band of dark blue tied in a bow on the left shoulder. On the skirt, which has four box plaits across the front, are placed bands of the printed material, while the triple bands that make the girdle are printed georgette veiled in plain blue. The down curve of this girdle is a point of design that is extremely clever, and that in itself presents a line which is most becoming.

In the second model sketched by Miss Pickering the use of contrasting bands is shown in the approved Paris manner. The color scheme is a favorite here—black and white. Beer, whose model this is, uses black satin for the straight slip beneath the frock, which is made of white georgette. As you can see, this over dress is banded with black georgette. The straight bodice has a simulated gilet of white, edged with a band of black georgette, which in turn is edged on both sides by exquisite drawn work bands.

The bishop sleeves are trimmed with drawn work motifs. The skirt is split at the center front to show the black satin slip beneath, and is banded also in black georgette and in double work bands. Over the hips which are slightly shirred, are placed drawn work motifs, these being repeated on the waist under the arms.

This is the type of frock that the fashionable woman wears a great deal in Paris for all kinds of afternoon affairs and for the informal dinner in the Bois. Bands on such frocks generally afford a rather striking contrast to the dress itself, and are usually set in the gown with the more elaborate and intricate kinds of hand work, such as drawn work and hemstitching in contrast to the simple stitches which are used to attach bands on daytime and sports dresses.

It looks, now, as if printed crêpes and chiffons will have, if anything, a more important place in styles than in former seasons. And these, too, are often treated to a bit of jazzing up by means of bands. Where a printed dress is worn with a plain coat, the band does the necessary office of uniting the two differing fabrics, and for the single frock, bands of plain material are also employed to advantage.

Our third model, created by Premet, who is a master of the single frock that goes by its wild lone without any sort of wrap being necessary, makes use of band trimming in a modified way. This dress is made of black chiffon, printed with shaded flowers and leaves of green. The dress is cut in a straight line, with long tight sleeves, and on the left side of the skirt is set a circular panel, which crosses the front of the skirt in a diagonal line and meets a long scarf which forms the collar and drapery.

This scarf of green georgette is banded along the edge on the right side with a band of black chiffon, which extends just up to the square neckline. The scarf itself passes around the neck and falls to the waist on the left side in front. The sleeves have wide fitted cuffs of black. A more gracious or more slender line than that of this frock is hard to imagine.

About the cleverest use of bands that Paris is offering is shown on our fourth model, which is the summer coat dress, light enough in weight for a hot day and giving the effect of a coat and dress. It's the kind of frock to wear in town when you want to look trim and tailored without being prostrated by the weight of a coat. Philippe et Gaston, whose model this is, have used navy blue crêpe romaine to make it.

Analyzed, the frock is a straight slip with long semi-fitted sleeves, and a clever V cut at the center front of the hemline. Over this are placed two straight half coats with curved edges. The edges are all edged with bands of dull silver and so are the cuffs and the collar. Over the collar of dark blue is placed a smaller collar of gray georgette.

Printed and plain georgette in navy blue and white make this Worth dress, sketched at the extreme left. Bands of plain material appear on the printed blouse, and of printed fabric on the plain skirt.

Next, white crepe georgette is banded with black georgette in this smart afternoon frock from Beer. Drawnwork bands and motifs edge the georgette. It is worn over a black satin slip.

Third, black and green printed chiffon and bands of black make a charming summer harmony in this Premet afternoon dress.

Lastly, dark blue crepe romaine banded with silver forms a stunning coat dress for hot weather. Designed by Philippe et Gaston.

HOW TO USE THE PATTERNS

A JUMPER frock is both useful and attractive looking, and pattern No. 706 is interesting and not difficult to handle. The jumper is sleeveless and collarless, both these parts being furnished by the blouse worn with it. Several blouses could be made, some of them of sheer white batiste, dimity, or linen; while a couple of others could be made of washable crêpe de chine in any desired color.

The jumper will look well made of kasha, one of the heavier crêpes, or linen, or silk broadcloth. It is cut in two pieces, and in the front is a deep "V" opening. After the seams have been finished, finish the neck and armholes with an inside or outside fitted facing or binding, hem it by hand across the bottom, and set in the pockets. It is a good way, in making these pockets, to baste a straight strip of the material over the basting, marking the slash and then marking the strip with the basting for the slash, also. Stitch close to this basting on both sides, and across the ends, and then cut through both thicknesses exactly on the basting.

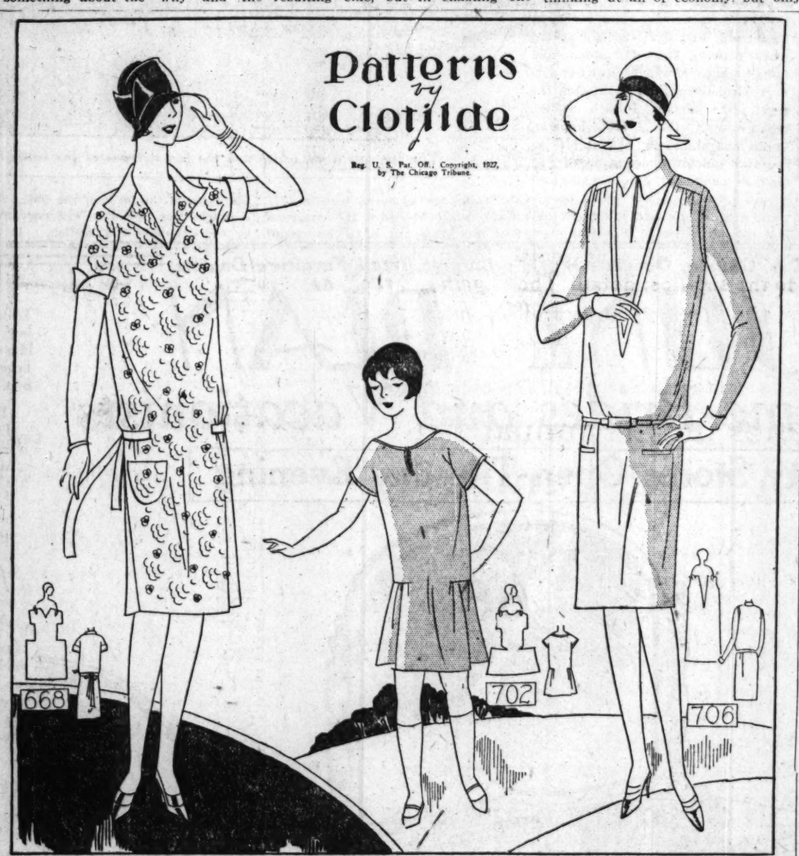
Make tiny clips at the end so that the strip may be turned to the wrong side of the dress without puckering. Let the strip show as a binding on the right side, baste down all around and press well. Sew one of the pocket pieces to the upper edge of the strip, and one to the bottom edge. Then sew the pocket together in a seam down the sides and across the bottom. Overcast the pocket opening together in loose, large stitches and leave them in until the dress is finished.

The fullness on the shoulders is a becoming feature and prevents that "drawn" look over the bust one sometimes sees.

The blouse is finished across the bottom with a casing for elastic, and at the neck in the front it is slashed, and the edges bound. This slashed place makes it possible to slip over the head.

Pattern No. 702 is for a pretty dress for a young girl. Taffeta, crêpe, challis or most wash materials will be suitable and the bottom of the dress and sleeves may be picoted, bound or faced, as fancy dictates. Both front and back are slashed at the sides at the hip line, and the lower slashed edge gathered and stitched to the upper slashed edge. This gives the needed fullness to the skirt. The drop shoulders form the short sleeves, and the neck and slashed opening are finished with a binding.

The seams where the dress is slashed at the sides could be covered with some small embroidery design in cross stitch or in the laid work, and the same design could be used each side of the slashed opening at the neck.



668—Woman's dress. Sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3⅝ yards of 36 inch material.

702—Girl's dress. Size 4, 6, 8, and 10 years. Size 10 requires 2 yards of 36 inch material.

706—Woman's or miss' jumper dress. Sizes 16, 18, and 20 years, and 34, 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 5⅜ yards of 36 or 40 inch material for the jumper and 2⅛ yards for the blouse.

Pattern No. 668 is for just the sort of dress that will be nice to wear at home many afternoons or mornings, depending on the material used, to a great extent. It is cut in two pieces—front and back—and at a low waist line the material extends out a way. Inverted plaits are formed on both sides, bringing the extended parts back so that a straight line will be made from armhole to hem. This also gives a graceful fullness when walking, without destroying the straight line effect.

Be sure that in laying the plaits you keep the under fold as straight and smooth as the upper. Baste each one from top to bottom and don't remove the bastings until the final pressing is given to the finished dress.

A string belt or sash of the dress material is attached to the front on each side and is tied in a bow in the back.

The dress is slashed down from the neck in the center front, underfaced and joined to the collar. It is pretty to pipe or finish the shoulder seams with a narrow band, in these short kimono sleeves. Prettily shaped turned back cuffs finish the sleeves, and a rather large patch pocket is stitched to the right side of the dress.

COSMETICS DRIVE AWAY THE BLUES

by Antoinette Donnelly

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—An efficient business woman of my acquaintance tells me that when she becomes particularly harassed about her work and the worries of making useful citizens out of three small sons, she doesn't pick up any book on philosophy, nor does she sit down in an attempt to readjust her mental outlook by a forced change of her own thoughts. She has tried that, and while on occasions she has found it helpful, there is a quicker way out of her depressions, a ridiculously feminine way, she admits. But maybe it isn't so ridiculous, since it is a known fact that no woman ever committed suicide on the way to buy a hat.

My business friend's secret is to dash over to her favorite masseuse's, have her face caressed by soft unguents, stroked by skillful hands—and eyes, cheeks, and mouth made up with the most effective cosmetics. She is willing to give the credit that is due the young woman for the restful massage she arranges, but the thing that is balm to her soul and which she wishes to put on record as the prescription par excellence for a rejuvenating effect on the spirit is a makeup job well done.

This supports the contention of Mme. Helene Rubinstein, one of the deans of the professional beautifying game. In a conversation I had with her recently she reported how, in her years of experience with thousands of women, she had seen this happy mental reaction to a face artfully embellished by cosmetic ruse. Not all the powers of philosophy impart quite that radiance of expression that one detects in the woman whose face has undergone clever cosmetic treatment.

Best Cure for the Blues.

"If a woman is feeling down in the mouth," says Mme. Rubinstein, "you cannot do her a greater kindness than to make her get her hair done, her nails, get a Turkish bath if she likes them, renew herself from every obvious angle of personal improvement, and add the finishing touch of cheering color on cheek and lips. Collette, the famous French writer, goes so far as to recommend 'a dash of rouge for a broken heart.'"

If we women were made of stemer stuff this advice might be set down as pure tommyrot. But until we are able to eliminate the motive of vanity which has been thousands of years in the making, we might just as well prescribe to the advantages of the moment, n'est ce pas?

And the moment is overflowing with advantages of the nature we are discussing. There are rouges and lipsticks for every type. There are color mixtures in powders, should the raw shade not conform harmoniously with the general color scheme.

Just any old dash of rouge dabbed any old way on the face we would not recommend for an ailing heart, much less for a face that needed cheering. This cosmetic cure for what ails you isn't the novice's game. It requires a good deal of perfection in the art of laying it on to lift the face into an evangelist of the philosophy we are preaching today.

Not all women are lucky enough to be able to afford the advantages of a professional craftsman, but there are certain rules about applying makeup that every woman may adapt with no expense and great advantage to her face—and her spirit.

A Happy Illusion.

To let you in on a bit of beauty parlor gossip, there is a certain young woman, famed for her pulchritudinous fascination, who isn't a beauty at all. She has a standing daily appointment with a beauty parlor operator who knows her makeup game to the last drop on the eyelash. There are hundreds of women who call in these skilled makeup artists to give them the finishing touches for dinner, supper-dance and ball.

Those of us who have to do our own handpainting needn't be discouraged, however, if we are willing to accept advice from those in a position to give it. Chiefly, women go wrong on makeup because of the light they operate under. Crowded living conditions frequently land the dressing table in the worst corner of the room, farthest from the window or from the electric light.

For day wear the only way to make up properly is to stand immediately in front of a window facing the strong daylight and to use a hand mirror close up. This is the only way you can achieve a correct idea of the color you are applying or of the manner in which you are applying it. The shadow from electric lights or from draped windows is too tricky to gamble with for honest outdoor effect.

Another important item when you are facing this strong light is: Do not be content with a front view, solely. A profile study of the rouge application may reveal a round patch on the cheek, sharply outlined, so that one sees exactly where the rouge begins and ends. And a successful rouging job requires, above all things, a blending of the color into the skin, with no trace of where the red begins and ends.

Rouge Under Powder.

A third mistake commonly made is to apply powder before the makeup. Countless times I have observed women powdering the whole face and then rubbing rouge on top of the powdered cheek in circles of varying size. The rouge goes on under the powder—not on top of it. And there is a whole set of rules about how to lay the rouge in paths rather than in circles to reduce cheeks, or make them appear fuller, to avoid calling attention to hollow cheeks and to minimize length and breadth, generally.

The contour of the face should be studied with a view to improving it, where necessary, with the help of rouge. If the face, say, is broad, either fat or with large cheek and jaw bones, it can be narrowed by laying the most brilliant path of rouge near the nose. If the cheek bones are naturally prominent the eye is attracted to them unmercifully if they are further highlighted with red splotches. If the face is thin, narrow and long it can be made to appear less so by keeping the most brilliant rouge well back on the cheek and blending forward.

One can get a better blending effect when the fingers are used instead of the rouge pad. Before rouge is used at all, you understand, that a creaming of the face is essential. Just a light creaming followed by a wiping off, so that the skin is simply flexible. And rouge put on in dots makes the blending with the fingers easier.

Rouge should not be allowed to go low on the cheeks, as this gives a sagging, aged and drawndown look.

Painting the Lips.

Grease paint foundations are advised against for any but the professional because movements of the facial muscles tend to cause cracks such as actors and actresses find on their faces at the end of a performance. On the stage it is not noticeable, but on the street or under more intimate night surroundings it is.

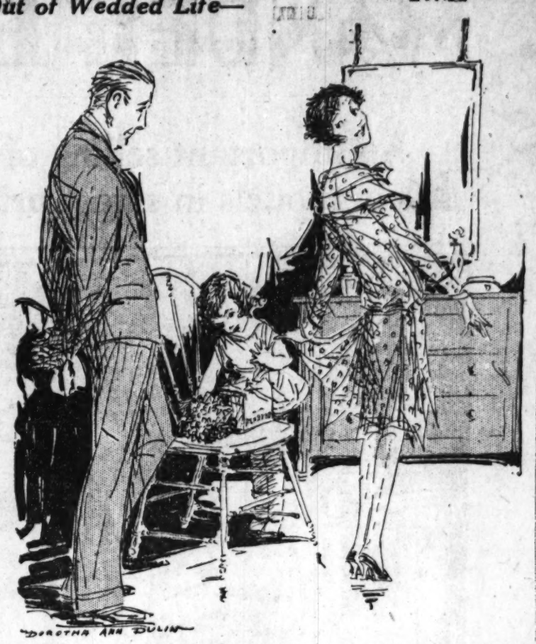
In painting the lips the effect should be to have the curves even, and to achieve this find exactly where the center of the upper one is located and work from there to each outer edge. Though your mouth may not be designed for a Cupid's bow effect, the fullest color must come in the center, anyway.

If the lower lip is too full, rouge it lightly, and if you wish to reduce the size of a large mouth, stop the paint above the extreme edge of the lip and tone down at the corners so it blends into the natural color.

ROMANCE AFTER MARRIAGE

It's Not the Daily Spatting Over Trivialities That Takes the Joy Out of Wedded Life—It's the Lack of Romance. Here Are Ways to Keep the Precious Quality Alive.

by Doris Blake



Is the power to conserve romance after marriage vested in the woman more than in the man?

Is it more often the wife's own fault than masculine fickleness or promiscuity when another woman steals her husband?

Not long ago one of our well known domestic court judges gave out the unqualified statement that a woman loses her husband to another woman solely through her own fault. But that does not take into account the born philanderer whose amatory proclivities could not be suppressed were he married to the greatest paragon of all the charms and virtues accredited to the art of holding a husband. True, this class of male appears in a limited edition when you consider the great army of husbands who have a natural desire to remain loyal to the women they wed.

One thing we do know is that a certain amount of romance has to be conserved in marriage or discontent and unhappiness is bred. It isn't the bickerings over the meat bills, nor the personal habits or mannerisms that get on the nerves of married people half so much as the feeling that romance is escaping, or has already passed them by. The fact that women do most of the divorce petitioning in this country may be interpreted to mean that they are more avid to recover the old glow that made their dreams at one time so rose tinted.

Give in Order to Receive.

On the face of the divorce plea other reasons may be advanced for the separation, but in countless numbers of cases is it not the bleak unromanticism of the marriage that makes it unbearable? Give an average woman a dash of romance and her humblest household duty may not become a privilege, but it certainly is robbed of ugliness. Give an average woman a man of ordinary attainments, yet so long as she is permitted to retain faith in his inherent fineness, goodness, and ultimate achievements she takes up her daily tasks with good heart.

Women need more romance in their lives than men. Needing it more then, let us go on the assumption that, like other virtues that contribute to the welfare of the world, the more you give of yourself the more you get in return. There is nothing to be gained from arguing that the romance in married life should be a fifty-fifty proposition, that a husband is entitled to no more of it than he gives. Fifty-fifty arrangements are not serviceable in marriage contracts, however well they serve in purely commercial arrangements. An entirely different set of emotions are brought into marriage which can inspire interest and love from the opposite sex, must express in some degree health, cleanliness, refinement. Intelligence, adaptability, unselfishness, and sincerity she needs likewise, but to be the magnet of attraction this purely physical thing of looks is vital.

combines. And women unquestionably do bring to marriage an omnivorous appetite for romance. That many of them do survive successfully the meager diets allotted them by their too, too practical consorts only goes to prove that they are a pretty amenable sex, after all.

Assuming, as we have suggested, that it is up to the woman to do most of the romance conservation work, what are some of the practical aids?

The women who succeed in getting the attentions that indicate a husband's keen romantic interest are not the drudges, nor the slaves, nor the doormat types. They are not the kind of women who slump off in personal attractiveness.

Aids to Romance.

On the contrary, as first aid we should place a high standard of personal attractiveness. If women succeed in this their husbands are inspired to maintain a similar degree of attractiveness. This is a highly important need to the continuation of romance after marriage, since in the early attraction of the now united pair this element of personal appearance had a large share. When a husband wanders off in the direction of other women he often does it merely because he finds in them, or thinks he does, the attraction his wife formerly had.

A woman's task as a wife is harder than that of sweetheart because she has to be both. Much of the mystery of the sweetheart is gone from her, which makes it more imperative that her physical attractiveness be continued. Married or single, the inspiration for emotions of love is beauty. It may not mean in either man or woman regularity of feature or any special height, build, or coloring. Nevertheless, it is a physical ideal that is pleasing. When this ideal degenerates through shiftlessness or carelessness of person there is no inspiration for romance to feed upon.

Personal Traits.

A woman, to possess attraction

While much of the mystery of the sweetheart is dissipated in the intimacy of marriage, the woman who wants romance in her life should strive to maintain some semblance of it in her own personal conduct. This can be accomplished to some extent by modesty of person, by avoiding the cheapness of overfamiliarity and by upholding a nice feminine reserve and privacy in the intimate affairs of her life. Many a man has been shocked out of romance by coarseness and vulgarity.

Then there is the element of tact in handling a man, or finesse we might better call it. Anyway, it is the graciousness that tells a woman just what to do, when and when not to do it. With this quality, wounds, irritations and resentment do not stifle the man's longing to bestow a love expression. A too blatant frankness, though the criticism may be just enough, will instantly snuff out tenderness. A little of the old rosy deceit that was practiced in those premarriage days when some correction was deemed advisable, had rather be employed. No girl before marriage would threaten her romance with the hammer and tongs of homely truths.

Of course, no one is always agreeable, always magnetic, always inspiring. We all have out faults, our moods and our mannerisms. But in those courtship days the unattractive side was concealed fairly well—and romance prospered. The innocent camouflage kept up after marriage, that is, the suppressing of your disagreeable impulses, rather than the practicing of deceit builds up the habit of agreeableness which makes others happy and in turn brings happiness back into your own life.

"Dear Miss Blake: I go out with a certain boy once in a while. If I happen to mention meeting a new boy or being out, he starts to rave. I tell him he is only jealous, but he says not.

"I dislike going out with him for that reason, as it spoils the whole day. I go out with him because he has given me a gift. SHORTY."

It isn't necessary to go out with a boy who makes himself objectionable because of unreasonableness, Shorty. 'Twould be better to return the gift if you feel obligated because of it. We all like our friends to be pleasant and agreeable.

Harps on Single Blessedness.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 24 and have been keeping company with a fellow three years my senior for six months. I love him and he shows an interest in me, and no fellow could treat a girl better. There is one thing he says to me which hurts and that is, 'It is foolish to get married; I am going to be a bachelor.'

"Do you advise me to give him up? "EVELYN."

He may not mean what he says, but you have your tip and should act accordingly, Evelyn. It isn't necessary to give up seeing him, but 'twould be wise to cultivate some other friends, as well. It may cause him to change his mind.

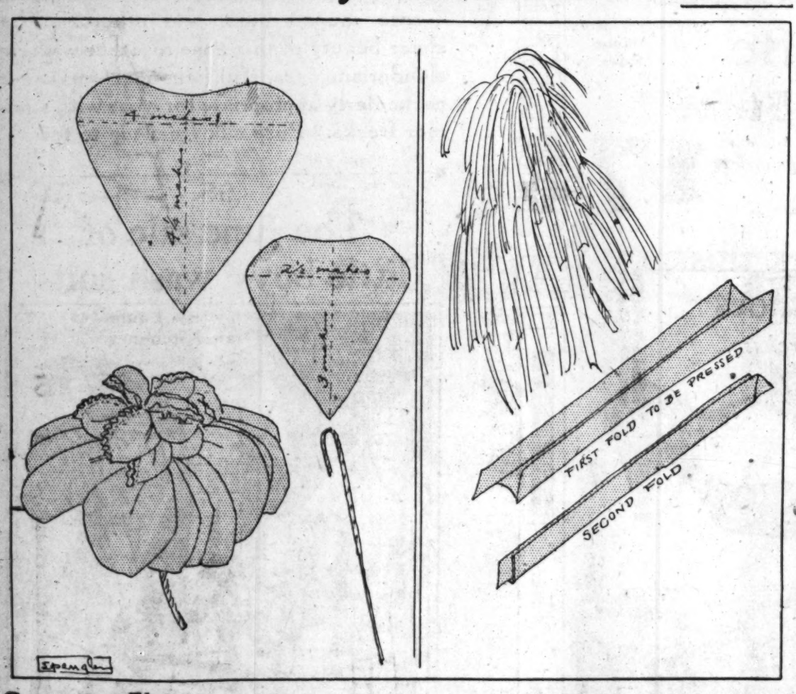
Practical and Fancy Needlework - - - By Clotilde



Georgette Flowers Add a Touch of Smartness to the New Summer Gowns

What is your sewing problem? Do you have trouble in following a pattern? Do you find difficulty in making a skirt hang evenly or making a sleeve that doesn't twist? If there is anything you would like to know about these or other problems of needlework write to Clotilde. The Tribune, Chicago, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope, if a personal reply is desired.

THE large flowers worn on the shoulder of dresses this season are made from all colors of georgette. Number one flower, shown today, is made of black georgette. One half of a yard is required either on the straight or bias of the material. The petals are left raw edged. There are sixteen of the large petals that measure four and one-fourth inches from top to point and four inches across the top of each petal.

Curve in the top of the petal, as in a rose. The next row of petals is three inches long and two and one-half inches across the top of each petal. There are fifteen petals in this group.

The third row has the same amount of petals as the second and the same measurements.

To begin to make the flower, take a piece of soft lace wire six inches long, double the top down one inch, put several thicknesses of the georgette over this wire to make the padded center of the flower. Put the last fifteen petals described up around the covered wire center. Lap the petals very closely and sew on firmly.

Next, add the fifteen petals on the second row and then add the sixteen large ones. Use a fine needle with a double silk thread the color of the georgette used.

Shir up the top of the first row of petals. Pull up the thread until it is tight. Either tie or give it a firm stitch. Hold those shirred petals over a steaming tea kettle until thoroughly saturated with steam. After it is dry, pull out the shirring threads and you will have a row of crinkled petals. The silk thread is used instead of the cotton thread for shirring or basting on soft materials, as when it is pulled out it does not leave a mark. A narrow bias strip of the georgette is wound tightly around the stem and finished off under the petals. A few stitches will help to hold it from getting loose.

Number two is called the carpet rag flower. It is made of bias cut strips, two and one-half inches wide on the selvage edge of the bias material used. Turn in both edges to the center. Press this well with a hot iron. Fold together again and press this well, also.

Make the center for the flower the same as in number one. Cut the first row of strips three inches long. Make ten of those strips and sew on to the stem. Cut the next row five inches long and make fifteen of those. Sew those next to the first row on the stem. Now cut the next row six inches long. Make twenty of those. Lap those strips closely together.

Cut the ends on a slant or straight across. Finish off the stem as in number one. The colors chosen for these flowers are black, jonquil, and butter yellow, and the soft shades of orchid,

FOR PERFECT PERMANENT WAVING

One Circuline for each curl—in clear, fresh water.

The Charm of Wavy Hair with Perfect Safety

Mr. Charles Nessler, the original inventor of permanent waving, states that "Circuline represents the highest possible achievement in permanent waving, because it treats each head of hair according to its individual requirements." That is why Circuline, unlike any other method of permanent waving, assures you of a wave just as tight or as loose as desired—as beautifully flowing as though Nature herself had waved it.

And not only is Circuline gentle, sure, absolutely free from any injurious chemicals such as lye, ammonia, potash, but it requires actually 100 degrees less heat than is necessary for a marcel wave.

But you are only sure of a Circuline Wave when your hairdresser uses authentic Circulines. You will recognize them as she immerses one for each curl in clear, fresh water. Each is individually wrapped, and stamped with the name "Nestle Circuline"—your assurance of a genuine Circuline Wave!

HORSEMANSHIP

by CAPT. FENTON S. JACOBS 11TH U.S. CAVALRY

This Article Discusses the Aid by Which the Rider Conveys His Commands to the Horse.

IN previous installments, of which this is the fifth, the rider has been placed in the saddle, at the halt, in a position that it is believed will best favor the use of the aids. Of course, it is understood that not being mechanical no two horses are identically the same, any more than we could expect any two people to be identical. For this reason no two riders will ride the same horse in exactly the same way. Notwithstanding, there are many fundamental principles which will apply to all horses and riders; it being largely a question of correct and proportionate application in order to produce the same results. The most important of these are the aids.

The aids are the different means employed by the rider to convey his desires or intentions to the horse. The aids, principally, may be divided into natural and artificial groups. The natural aids are the legs, hands and weight. The artificial aids are the spur, the whip, the voice, the pat, the martingale, the longe, and all the other means of domination created by the industry and ingenuity of man to prolong, strengthen, or take the place of his natural aids.

The legs, generally speaking, control the lateral movement of the hind quarters and give the horse the forward impulse. It is obviously necessary to produce movement before movement can be directed and controlled. The legs should be fixed—that is to say, close to and in light contact with the horse. They should be free from all involuntary motion and very steady in their actions.

Avoiding Confusion.

The fault opposed to fixity is swinging, which confuses the horse. When the pressure of both legs equally is increased the effect should be to move the horse forward; of producing the movement which the reins should direct. When one leg acts alone, for example, the right, immediately in rear of the girth, it should have the result, while provoking the forward movement, of pushing the croup to the left. The horse gives away from leg pressure. If he hesitates to obey, act by little taps of the calf and cease as soon as he obeys.

To teach a horse to respond to the legs: Dismounted, stand opposite the girth on the left side, hold the near snaffle rein and with the thumb prod him immediately in rear of the girth, increasing the intensity until he moves his hind quarters a step or two to his right. Then reward him with a pat on the neck and a handful of oats. Then mount, and producing slight tension on the reins, press the calf in rear of the girth in a similar manner as the thumb prod.

At first this should be attempted only a few times daily. Repeat the exercise on both sides. The importance of keeping the legs to the rear, as described in the third installment, cannot be overestimated. They are the logical rudders for the horse as they control practically all of his body in rear of the forehand. They drive his hind legs up under him and assist him to start, back, stop, turn or jump.

How to Use the Hands.

The hands control the lateral movement of the forehand and check, halt, or back the horse. The hands through the reins and bits, act on the horse's mouth, head, neck and shoulders, and like the legs, they may act, resist or give way. They may even act, indirectly, on the hindquarters by giving the shoulders such a position that his haunches are obliged to change direction. This is called opposing the shoulders to the haunches. For exact effects the reins must remain adjusted and stretched during work; if they were flapping, the indications of the hand would not reach the horse, or if they did they would arrive confused or in the form of awkward jerks.

Two adjusted reins acting rearward together, equally should have the effect of slowing, stopping, or backing the horse. They are called direct reins. This action should be produced by fixing the hands and closing the fingers; the elbows and hands should move the least possible to the rear. When one rein acts alone it has the effect, while provoking a retarding movement, of displacing the forehand, head, or neck or all, as indicated in the accompanying sketch.

Accord of the Aids.

Before seeking to regulate or reënforce the action of one rein or one leg by the other, one must be sure they do not contradict each other. If the right hand or leg acts, the left at first should give way to allow the right to produce its full effect; it resists if it is necessary to regulate the movement. With the reins held in one hand with the bearing rein alone acting, the direct rein alone hangs loose at the moment of action. If the two reins then are not in accord, at least they do not contradict each other.

The action of the hands and legs are opposed to each other in effect, therefore, when the legs act to increase speed the hands should give way—likewise, when the reins act to slow the gait the legs give way, then resist when it is necessary to limit the movement. This is called the accord of the aids.

The qualities of a good hand are steadiness, lightness, softness and firmness. A steady hand is one free from useless movement. A light hand maintains the merest contact with the horse's mouth. A soft hand gives support. A firm hand gives a frank decided bearing. Under no circumstances should reins ever be jerked. The curb reins should be used the least possible.

The hands should be independent with respect to the movement of the body and legs. If the hands are well placed, separated as they should be, the nails face each other, the elbows come against the body naturally; in consequence, the shoulders fall back, the chest is free, and the head is easily raised.

On the other hand, if the nails are down, the elbows have a tendency to fly out, the shoulders come forward, and close on the chest; the head follows the movement of the shoulders, the eyes are lowered, while the buttocks tend to slide to the rear.

How to Use Weight.

The weight (or balance) is used to supplement the action of the legs and hands. The weight of the body, by inclining the portion above the hips in the direction of desired movement acts to facilitate the obedience of the horse, and should be in accord with the effects produced by the legs and hands. The body inclination, by anticipating the sudden movement of the horse, also, enables the rider to retain his balance.

The aids should always be applied intermittently; must be distinct and not confused; thus, being at the halt to move forward at the walk: Gather the horse (slight tension on reins and slight pressure of legs—as a signal to attract his attention and to prepare him to respond promptly), then slightly relax the fingers of the hand and use the legs and weight in combination as previously described, with quickly repeated applications until the horse moves forward.

Being at the walk to halt: Gather the horse and use direct reins intermittently and weight, until the horse stops.

Illustrating the five principal effects of one (right) Rein. Also the direction produced by supporting legs, as indicated.

LEGEND.

Ha—Rider's hand active.
Hp—Rider's hand passive.
La—Rider's leg active.
Lp—Rider's leg passive.
S—Horse's shoulders.
H—Horse's haunches.

2. 2. For SHORT TURN to RIGHT—Use "RIGHT DIRECT REIN." Right leg active in rear of girth. To widen turn, increase action of left leg, decrease action of right hand.

3. 3. For WIDE TURN to LEFT—Use "RIGHT BEARING REIN." Both legs active. The direction produced is the opposite of that in No. 1, although same rein is used.

5. 5. See arrow direction of "RIGHT INDIRECT REIN IN REAR OF WITHERS." Active legs will produce movement to the left oblique.

This study of the five effects of reins with supporting legs indicates their theoretical effects only. Intermediate effects can be produced by increasing or decreasing the intensity with which aids are used to overcome resistance of horse. Remember, ALWAYS DECREASE INTENSITY AS SOON AS HORSE RESPONDS.

The TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

Fruity Nectars Are a Pleasant Diversion for the Warm Days of Approaching Summer

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

By Jane Eddington.

WHY the up to your health and the down to your disaster was so enormously rich in sentiments and sayings, in equipment and accessory, is hard to say, but it was. Mad mischief and the courting of disaster has seemingly inspired men to the most capital exercise of wit and brilliancy, while perhaps an Emerson was telling folk that they should live on so low a plane that air would excite them and they could get intoxicated on water, and Plato some 2,000 years earlier also made remarks cousin to this.

It is not that it could not be done—we have nothing to show that the immortally famous nectar of the gods was alcoholic—it simply has not been, or at any rate to the notable extent that strong drinks have been praised and thought necessary to stimulate wit, friendship and love. The history of the wine cup alone from pocula to stein—we are using wine figuratively, and know that it was Gambrinus who invented the liquid for the stein—what a vocabulary it takes to understand it! If specimens of the glasses alone could be had from the days when Rome from her throne of beauty ruled the world, perhaps with some of the other accompaniments, they would fill a museum.

At any rate we have some of the Roman words used. A crater was a large vessel in which to mix the wine with water, from which it was dipped with a cyathus, "a small vessel containing not quite two ounces." The poculum, plural pocula, was the general drinking cup. The beaker or goblet was a calix—did the flower calix come from it, or it from the flower? And there was the expensive patera and another which was a great tankard. We say imbibe where the Roman said "bibere" or "potare" [we get our potation here], while pofor was the drinker until he got fuddled, and then he was the "potator." By the way, one of the Roman drinking vessels was without foot or handle, and was used by two people, "conibibos."

But to take a leap across time, we may come to the "little brown jug" of the Yankee hay field. It contained "switchel," which was nothing but a mixture of ginger, molasses and sometimes vinegar, well diluted with water to taste, workingmen even to this day having an idea that plain water is not good for them. An ice man who was thirsty, when given a drink of water not long ago, said it was not good for him.

Entertaining Drinking Vessels.

Once at a dinner in an Italian home the sour wine, a cup of it, was served in what we would call pitchers of majolica. Each of these had on them words of invitation like "Bevi Cara" [drink, dear], "Bevi Poco" [drink a little], "Bevi Zio" [drink, uncle], and "Bevi Zia" [drink, aunt]. Perfect replicas of these could be purchased in the "Eternal City," which do not hold half a teaspoon but reflect a pleasant sentiment just the same.

Of course, many a mischievous legend has been put upon drinking cups. Perhaps you have seen those curious things with a neck full of holes which has the inscription: "To drink and not to spill will try the utmost of your skill." It will, but it is good fun to try.

Flavoring the Glass.

The last half of an ancient recipe for mint julep reads: "Epicures rub the lips of the tumbler with a piece of fresh pineapple, and the tumbler itself is very often incrusted outside with stalactites of ice. As the ice melts, you drink." An epicure might rub the rim of his tumbler, containing a minted lemonade, with the fresh pineapple. The ancient bartenders did a thing of this sort more delicate than hanging a slice or lobster shaped piece of lemon on a glass. A sugared and chilled and tender sprig of mint in a glass of lemonade—or sprigs—make one draw a long breath in order to get their full aroma.

Drinking Through a Straw.

It grows increasingly entertaining to an investigator of the eating habits of the ancients to find how there is little that is new under the sun—just new adaptations—in the ways of eating and drinking and getting food since the creation of man. Xenophon was born somewhere nearly 450 B. C., and it is a delight to read what he sets down about food in his writings. Among other things he says is that the Armenians lived in spacious underground houses in winter where they had abundant stores of wheat, barley, and vegetables, and where they kept also their sheep, goats, cattle, and poultry. But note this: They had beer in jars which they sucked through a reed when thirsty. This beer was made of barley and the grains were left in it. They drank the whole through a reed or straw so that they would not get these grains in their mouths. A straw today is most needed when a drink is partly solid. By the way, Xenophon's Ten Thousand seem to have found this drink rather strong, so they mixed it with water.

A Thin Sirup.

This is good flavored with fruit juice for the ice mushes, which we may call sherbets or granites: One pound of sugar and one quart of water. Put over fire and stir until sugar is dissolved, then cook for fifteen minutes. If thoroughly cooked, this will keep for some time in summer without fermenting.

A Thicker Sirup for Beverages.

The reason the drinks of the soda fountain often seem more delicious than those home mixed is because they are made with sirups. A drink made with a sirup has more body than one sweetened with dry sugar. One way to illustrate the difference between sugar and sirup sweetening is to compare an ice cream sundae with a sirup over it to one sprinkled with sugar. The latter thing is not done and drinks are not really half as good when this is done to them. This makes a good beverage sirup and is a universal formula: Two cups sugar, two cups water or fruit juice. This is the proportion used for making raspberry shrub from the vinegar which has stood over raspberries. The sugar must be completely dissolved before the liquid boils to prevent early crystallization. Then boil to 220 degrees, or a bit higher.

Sipping Sherbets.

Fruit juices and water half frozen have been a summer drink for a long time. In the Italian slums to this day we find lemon juice diluted till no sweetening of it is required—and beyond even that—and frozen to a mush, and greatly appreciated because cold. It is sherbet of a sort, or a "granite."

In one of Lady Wortley Montagu's letters, dated 1717, she tells of being entertained by a Turkish woman who gave her a dinner of fifty dishes of meat which were placed on the table one at a time, with knives of gold and hafts set in diamonds. "The table cloth and napkins," she says, "were all of tiffany, which were spoiled with the using, although so costly." (You can buy something of the same sort to this day, if you are foolish enough to want to.)

Of the sherbet she says: "The sherbet, which is the liquor which they drink at meals, was served in china bowls, but the covers are salvers of massive gold." The editor of these letters also makes a few remarks on this subject, as follows: "The present sultan and most of the grandees have now another kind of sherbet in their houses, known in Europe under the unromantic name of brandy. Sherbet, however, is still habitually sipped in hot weather, and I often joined an old boy over a bowl of this very pleasant beverage."

Hot Sirup.

In making fruit punches containing pieces of fruit, in order to bring out the flavors in full, use the sirup hot over fruit. It may then be made of two cups of sugar and one of liquid. It blends different fruit juices, but there are other ways of getting blends and a mussy mixture of fruit is not worth while and is not economical.

The Lemon Sharpener.

Lemon juice often brings up the flavor of other fruits wonderfully, but at the same time it may replace all aromas with its own, which is not so good, so it must be used with great discretion in mixing fruit drinks, unless they are specifically lemonades, which are the more agreeable for having the lemon juice toned down. The action in all cases between lemon juice and the mild fruit juices is reciprocal. It does wonders, for instance, for raspberry juice, but when we want to get the first enjoyment of our drink through our nose, it is well to add lemon juice by drops only, and the skin not at all, for when manipulated it throws out the strongest smell of anything. And pineapple juice in some cases will do the same thing as lemon juice, and leave more of flower to the drink. By the way, the reason some people will not use lemon with tea is that it drowns the odor of the tea—the very flower of it.

The Ginger Stinger.

The mixing of odors and juices in drinks is a nice business, and I am fond of telling of this experiment tried on a willing taster. First, a cup of boiling water was poured over a dozen sprigs of mint, allowed to stand five minutes, and drained off. Then a little lime juice was added to part of it. It had the daintiest of aromas, but not much character, when it was sweetened to taste. To the other part was added orange juice and the mint flavor was almost lost, but when a few drops of lemon juice were added out came the mint flavor, stronger than in these others. So when your drink lacks character, no matter how fine the fruit juices and dainty the flavors, add some drops of lemon juice, but again we say be careful if you do not want to turn it into what may correctly be called a lemonade, because the lemon flavor leads all the others.

To call ginger a "stinger" is to adopt the name from an English "temperance drink" containing as much cayenne pepper as ginger, so that the latter was really the stinger, but there is something so clean and cool about the sharpness or sting of ginger that we like to use that characterization of it. The quite modern combination of ginger ale over ice cream, which is so highly appreciated—it is really a ginger ice cream soda to which a little sirup may be added, as well as the ice cream and ginger ale—owes its popularity to a slight sting. The old home made ginger beers were nothing but ginger teas sweetened and flavored, and the hayfield drink was often made of nothing but powdered ginger, molasses, and water.

The Hop Bitter.

The old "small beer" was nothing but hop tea. An old recipe for it was: "To twelve quarts of cold water add one and a half pints of strong hop tea and one and one-half pints of molasses. Mix well together and bottle it immediately. It will be fit for use the next day if the weather is warm." "Common beer" was just hop tea with spruce or some other flavor, leavened for one day only with yeast.

A Hop Tincture.

This is one tested out and found good with seltzer water, which it seems was invented for some medicinal use nearly 200 years ago. Add one tablespoon of ground ginger to one-half ounce of hops and boil these in a pint of water gently for one-half hour. The hop leaves swell so that only a cup of liquid is likely to be left at the end of the half hour. Strain this off and add one-fourth pound of brown sugar. Stir till dissolved and cook to sirup stage. When cool add to it one cup or a little more of cold water. This will make eight glasses, served by filling a glass one-fourth full of the sirup, then adding seltzer water till the foam reaches the top of the glass. To make it mild, add some cream to the sirup or even as much cream as sirup. If you like to put your nose into a foam, here you have it.

Sugar Water.

In Creole stories we have often seen how the people of New Orleans refreshed themselves with "eau sucre," and now we have found in a cook book of 1852 what amounts to a recipe for it, which reads: "Sweeten boiling water with sugar to your taste. This beverage is much used by French ladies. It is considered soporific and good for fatigued or weak nerves." It is not only in our Creole literature that we find mention of people using this but also in those of France, and in the eighteenth century the sucking of sugar cane seems to have been popular, but of late people seem to suffer from such an indulgence.

A FRIEND IN NEED
by Sally Joy Brown

Here Is a Wonderful Opportunity for Children to Learn the Piano

THE following letter tells of a wonderful opportunity for girls and boys who like music and would like to learn how to play the piano:

"Dear Miss Brown: This school gives a summer normal course for piano teachers, from June 27 to July 29. To demonstrate teaching, a small class of children, 6 or 7 years old, is used. The class meets downtown from 10 to 11 o'clock, three mornings a week. These children have, therefore, fifteen music lessons with no charge. There is, of course, no possible obligation about their future study. All we ask is regularity of attendance during the five weeks.

"We are wondering if among your readers there are some who would care to have their children in this group. They must be beginners, having had no lessons, and must have a piano at home. Only fundamental work is accomplished in fifteen lessons, but it is an astonishingly good foundation. We desire to give the lessons to children who are really musical in tendencies.

"There will be a tryout held on Saturday, June 18, at the school. We feel this is a worth while thing and are most appreciative of your cooperation and the use of your fine column.

"D. P."

Isn't that a splendid opportunity for some young girls and boys to get well started in music? If you know of any child who is willing to study and meet requirements of the school, I'll be happy to have their names and to arrange for the tryout. Remember they can't know anything about music—they just must want to learn!

And here's a splendid chance for some who are further along in their music:

"I am a moderately successful music teacher. I have a hobby of helping in a small way a few who are anxious to secure musical instruction but unable to pay for it. I have found, in this way, a great deal of high grade talent, and it is a source of much pleasure and satisfaction to know that through one's own efforts such talent has been found and given a chance.

"During the spring and summer months my business is at its lowest ebb. Consequently, I have some time open. I have decided to give this time in the manner of which I speak, and have organized classes for the study of musical theory. I might add that theory is the real backbone of a musical career, either as a preparation or supplement.

S. M."

Send your name and address if you wish to take advantage of this generous offer of S. M.'s.

Now, just a word about some other music lovers. In Chicago are many who can play, some of them invalids, with little or no chance to amuse themselves, and they are barred from doing so by lack of instruments we know we'll never use. Why not, then, donate them and help spread happiness as the writers above are doing. Shall we make this music lovers' week and give any unused instrument?

Other Requests.

"Dear Miss Brown: May I tell you that I could make a little more money in giving piano lessons to beginners in the evening? I have three children waiting for me to give them lessons, but I have no piano and they have no piano. If I had one I could realize a little income and the children could come and do their practicing in the afternoon. Perhaps in time I could quit store work, which is so hard on me.

MRS. J. V."

"Dear Sally Joy Brown: Have any of your readers a saxophone no longer needed? I would like to join a band, but cannot afford to buy an instrument.

J. M. B."

"Dear Miss Brown: I am a son of a poor family and take piano lessons from a woman who charges only a small amount for the lessons. I am in need of a music bag and a metronome. I wonder if one of your readers could give me these things. I am 14 years of age.

J. B."

"Dear Miss Sally: Perhaps one of your readers has banjo parts to some of the popular songs which they have no further use for. I have just started playing and would greatly appreciate any banjo music I could get.

"M. J. B."

"Dear Miss Brown: I am a patient at this sanitarium and I wonder if some of your readers has a ukelele he or she would like to give away. I certainly would enjoy having one to strum on.

W. S."

ISN'T IT ODD
by William Atherton Du Puy

ISN'T it odd that man, by dint of using his head, should have found a way to make use of even so forbidding a child of nature as the prickly pear of the west!

That great stretch of desert country that reaches from San Antonio to Los Angeles favors this prickly pear above all plants. With its skin sealed airtight on the outside it can hold its moisture as can few others and live green and vigorous with little water. With its needle sharp thorns it scorns attack from browsing cattle or even the nibbling jackrabbit. It survives where most forms of life perish.

Cattlemen through the decades have seen their herds die of starvation while back of the thorn covering of the prickly pear was much nourishing food. It remained for men of science, sent into these parts by the department of agriculture, to work out a plan for utilizing the stock food that lay in this plant.

First they tried growing it under cultivation. This plant, which got along quite well where few others would live, grew to surprising size when the ground was plowed that the water might be let into the soil when the few rains of the years did come. Cultivated prickly pears grew ten times as fast as those that were not cultivated.

The crop was planted somewhat as is sugar cane—by laying the joints in a furrow. They took root and grew. They went right on growing summer and winter. They yielded from 20 to 50 tons of cattle food to the acre.

There remained but the problem of how it was to be used. Then some one thought of a novel scheme—that of using a blowpipe and burning the thorns off. This scheme was tried. It was found that it worked well. After the flame of the blowpipe was passed over the thorns of a plant those thorns had disappeared. The cattle soon discovered the miracle and fell on the singed plants and devoured them.

So was a way found for growing a new forage crop, or at least for making use in an emergency of nature's crop here in the southwest. The prickly pear grows year after year. If it is needed it can be singed and thus fed to the cattle. If it is not needed it remains green and keeps growing. If it is not used for ten years none of its growth will be wasted. It is stored fodder, but it needs no barn. Finally the time of need comes. The ranchman goes out with his torch and burns the thorns off of one row of prickly pears. That is the ration for his stock for the day. They fall to and eat up that row.

But the reserve food supply they cannot touch. On the morrow more thorns are singed. It is easier thus to give the stock what food they are to have than it would be if they were being fed hay which must be pitched down from the stack and hauled out to them. The prickly pear, in fact, has certain advantages over even red clover as a food for cattle.

A LOYAL SON

The Strange Adventures of Young Robinson Grewso

By KEMBLE

His Ma called him Robin, his Dad called him Son.
He grew like a weed and thought it great fun.
So he called himself Robinson Grewso.

"CHIN CHIN, you certainly did save me from bein' a slave to dem no account pirates." Sundae grinned from ear to ear as he patted the old bird.

"I sure thought they was drowned and I would be jailed for bumping them overboard. I didn't mean to do it."

"You did it, all the same," came a voice from somewhere.

Robin and Chin Chin looked around in dismay. They could not see a soul. Sundae grinned.

"Dar she is,-Robin, dat little fish gal, leanin' on dat floatin' island." And, sure enough, there she was—the tiny mermaid, bobbing her pretty head and showing her pearly teeth.

Robin and Chin Chin looked around in dismay.

"Those pirates, you know, are very dear friends of mine, and I think you were very rude to them."

Robin laughed outright. "Rude to pirates! That's a good one. How would you behave if pirates came on board your boat and began jabbing you with swords? Just what would you do?"

The little mermaid opened her eyes very wide.

"Seeing as I have no boat and have never been jabbed with swords, I really do not know, but Sundae had no right to push them in the water and then not try to save them."

Sundae looked surprised. "Really, Miss Fish Lady, I did try to save 'em. I leaned over de boat just like dis——"

And in trying to show how he did it, splash—overboard he went! And down, down, down he kept going. It seemed that he never would come up.

Robin and Chin Chin grew frantic at the thought of losing their little cannibal friend.

Crabby does a few jazz steps.

"Can't you do something?" Robin cried to the mermaid girl.

"Don't be so impatient, Robin," she answered. "My lifesaver will bring him up."

No sooner had she said it than the claws of a gigantic crab appeared above the surface and, clinging to the claws, hung the sputtering Sundae.

"He is the most kindhearted crab that ever lived," smiled the mermaid. "He just loves to help those who have sunk so low. He's a regular diving bell crab."

"What's that, a dumbbell crab?" screeched Chin Chin. "I knew it, I knew it."

The mermaid's eyes snapped. "You think he's a dumbbell, do you? I'll show you. Crabby!" she called out, "just get up on the side of the boat and sing that little song you composed."

Sundae grabbed one of his rescuer's claws and helped him on board. There the old fellow sat beating time with his many legs and out of a funny mouth that looked for all the world like a cruller came this simple ditty:

I live 'way down in the bottom of the lake
Where it's very, very dark, but I'm very wide awake;
If some poor critic comes a-sprawling down
I bump him up, for I cannot let him drown.

Robin and Chin Chin clapped their hands as Crabby finished his song. Then the sweet singer stood up on his hind legs and declared that he would show them a few jazz steps.

"O, yes," said he, "we have some gay times down below. We dance and the fiddler crabs play for us, the lantern fish light up the place for us, and twice a year we have a grand affair—a regular fish ball. Roll down some time and see us," grinned the old fellow. "We get along swimmingly," and with that he made a funny bow and splashed into the water. He dove and disappeared.

"You did it, all the same."

I was in my garden one morning when a sweet little voice in the garden next door said: "How do you do."

There stood a quaint little maid of about 5. I said, "Hello, what is your name and who are you?" for I had never seen her in my friend's garden before.

In a prim, dignified voice she replied: "I am one of my grandmother's grandchildren."

Billy was keeping the whole family waiting because he must put away his toys before they went for a ride.

"Hurry, Billy," called his mother. "hurry just as fast as you can."

"I is mother," he answered breathlessly, "I'se hurrying faster'n I can."

With the Extra Spoon.

The other evening in a dining car while I was having my dinner, I believe I experienced the most embarrassing moment of my life. At the beginning of the meal I noticed that I had an extra soup spoon, but paid no further attention to it. Now, I am absent minded at times and was more so at this particular time.

I heard the waiter cough discreetly a few times, but I didn't think there was anything amiss until I saw a young woman sitting across from me looking highly amused. I looked around and discovered myself trying to eat soup out of the finger bowl with my extra soup spoon. Needless to say, I made a rather hurried exit.

K. K. N.

Her Own Things.

I accompanied a friend of mine when she went to call on a friend of hers. My friend had told me some time before that Mrs. Smith lived in light housekeeping rooms, but had failed to tell me about her moving.

Everything was going nicely when furnishing a home came up for discussion. I gave a long talk about different tastes in furnishings and finished with, "Now, take your rooms, for example, Mrs. Smith. I don't see how any landlady can furnish rooms with such furniture and expect people to live happily in them."

But—horrors! Something was wrong. I fully realized what it was when Mrs. Smith icily informed me that she had no landlady to furnish her rooms for her.

N. Y.

Absent Minded.

At our high school some of the girls instead of buying their lunch bring it to school. Usually it is in the form of sandwiches. One day, having bought and eaten my lunch I still felt rather hungry. The girl sitting across from me had a whole box of sandwiches, and noting my hungry look, offered me the box. She then became absorbed in conversation with the girl on her left.

My thoughts left the food I was eating and wandered to the approaching baseball game. I mentally saw myself pitching with two down, the bases full, and the count two and three, etc., etc., and surrounded myself with a halo of glory.

With a shock my thoughts came back from their journey to the sharp voice of my friend. At first I did not grasp what she was saying, and I looked stupidly at the box in front of me. There I saw the cause of the trouble.

The box was empty! I had eaten all the sandwiches. You may believe I beat a hasty retreat. Embarrassed? Not much!

E. H.

A Head of Cabbage.

While taking cooking in grammar school, the teacher, who noticed that my girl friend and I were through our work ahead of the rest of the class, sent us out to get some groceries and a head of cabbage. When we came to the store, I was able to remember everything except the cabbage, and I couldn't think what it was that I had forgotten.

The clerk who waited on us had light, curly hair. He stooped under the counter for something and when he stood up I suddenly remembered what it was that I had forgotten and pointing to his head, I said, "O, now I know what it was I wanted—a head of cabbage." Then was I embarrassed? I'll say so.

E. M.

A New One on Him.

My most embarrassing moment was when we were invited out to dinner and took our young son. I was secretly congratulating myself on how well he was behaving, when the dessert was brought in—lemon pie with meringue.

Sonny tasted it and made a terrible face. Our hostess asked him what was the matter and he quickly replied, "My mother doesn't put soapsuds on her pies."

Was I embarressed.

Free Examination.

My husband is an insurance agent. Recently a woman made application for insurance. After the usual routine of application, medical examination, etc., the policy came through from the home office and my husband took it to her, only to be informed that she did not want the policy, and that the only reason she had made application was because she was worried about her health and wanted an examination to see if it was anything serious! She got the examination free of charge by the insurance company's doctor, under the pretense that she wanted to be insured. Some cheek!

MRS. H. M.

"Our" Cauliflowers.

When you plan your garden this spring you had better get down on your knees and pray that none of your neighbors will try the trick one of ours worked on us last year.

One day last spring, when our back yard had been newly spaded, along came this neighbor with a penny package of cauliflower seeds, which she offered with as much ceremony as if the gift had been a string of pearls.

All summer long I slaved over those cauliflowers. I kept the weeds from choking them while they were young, and the ground about them whenever it became parched, and revived the plants with water when the hot spell threatened to snuff out their lives.

Our neighbor was solicitous about the welfare of the cauliflowers. Every once in a while she would lean over the back fence and say: "Those cauliflowers of mine are getting along nicely." At the time I failed to get the point of her remark.

Came a day in the fall. The cauliflowers were now very plump. A week before they had been tied up for blanching; that day many of them were temptingly white. I was looking proudly over my crop when my neighbor appeared with an empty bushel basket under her arm.

"Well," she said, setting the basket down and taking a knife from the bottom of it, "I see our cauliflowers are ready to eat."

E. O'R.

Laying Down the Law.

It was a habit of my father-in-law to come around to our house perhaps two or three mornings a week to take me for a short drive with my little boy and girl. He often stopped places on errands and then ended with a spin on a country road.

One morning we stopped at his daughter's home. Before he could reach the house she was out on the steps, laying down the law, telling him she never had the car, etc., etc.

I could hear almost everything that was said, and since that day, which was months ago, my babies and myself have had no more pleasant morning rides.

Corns Lift Off

You'll laugh, really! It is so easy—doesn't hurt one bit!

Drop "Freezone" on that old, bothersome corn. Instantly it stops aching; then shortly you lift that sore, touchy corn right off with your fingers. It works like a charm, every time.

A tiny bottle of "Freezone" costs only a few cents at any drug store, sufficient to remove every hard corn, soft corn, corn between the toes and calluses—try it!

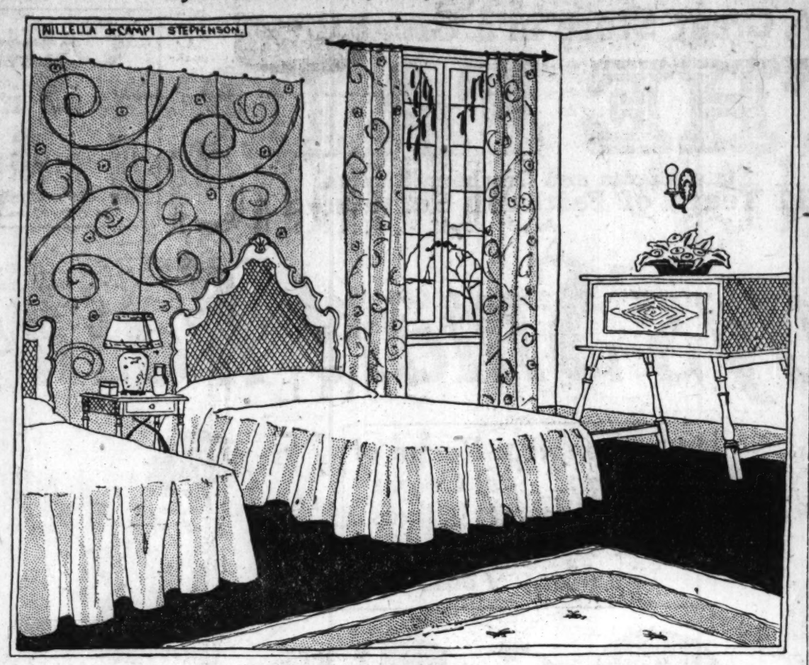
The HOME HARMONIOUS

By WillElla De Campi Stephenson.

In a Small Apartment or House, Where There Is but One Guest Room, It Should Be Neither Feminine Nor Masculine in Treatment, but a Happy Combination of the Two.

WillElla de Campi Stephenson will be glad to assist the homemaker in any problems pertaining to home building and home furnishing. Address your letter to Anita de Campi, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.



Spanish furnishings strike a happy note in this guest room.

IN furnishing the guest room there are several essential points to be remembered. In the house or apartment where there is only one guest room, that one room should not be definitely masculine nor feminine in character. The general tendency is to make the guest room frivolously feminine. The occasional men who occupy it must feel ridiculously out of place.

Simple furnishings of dignified character are most suitable. The room should contain twin beds, and, if possible, a day bed or chaise longue, so the guest may have a little rest and privacy during the day. Another essential provision for this room is that of a desk. This should be fitted with all of the necessary equipment: stationery, calendar, pens, ink, blotters, stamps, and a dictionary. A waste basket should be conveniently placed.

Spanish furnishings strike a happy note in the guest room illustrated today. Modern ideas of comfort are combined with the austerity of the Spanish style. The plaster walls are tinted a warm, pinkish orange. Woodwork is stained walnut. At the windows are hangings of block printed linen, in a distinguished floral pattern on a soft green ground. No glass curtains are used. The wide expanse of plaster wall at the head of the beds is broken by a hanging of the same block linen. Between the beds is a little night table holding a lamp made of a Spanish pottery jar with a parchment shade decorated to match. Bed covers are made of a soft green striped material, piped with orange.

A small Spanish desk is accompanied by a chair with seat and back covered in a basket weave material, in mauve, green and blue. A large, comfortable arm chair is upholstered in a striped linen with fine lines of black, green and old gold on a henna colored ground. Above a sturdy walnut chest hangs a mirror in a plain walnut frame. Lighting fixtures are of wrought iron, and wrought iron poles are used for hanging the window draperies. Two colorful Spanish rugs are used on the deep green floor.

A mirror in an oval frame hangs above a small commode which stands between the beds. On the commode is a porcelain lamp with flowered silk shade which lights up most effectively. A pair of little Sheraton side chairs at the sides of the beds have seats upholstered in old blue satin, brocaded with small flowers.

Placed near a window is a luxurious chaise longue done in deep mauve damask. It is accompanied by a graceful end table holding a blue glass lamp with a mauve shade and a set of smoking accessories. Above a little flat topped desk is a set of hanging shelves on which are placed a group of reference books and a few interesting novels. The dressing table has a glass top under which a piece of blue brocade is stretched. Wool chenille rugs in deep mauve are used.

American colonial furniture is used in another charming guest room. Pale jade pink paper with white polka dots covers the walls. The woodwork is painted white. At the windows are pink net glass curtains dotted with white so that they match the wall paper. Draperies are made of gayly flowered semi-glazed chintz on a jade pink ground. They are finished with ruffles and deep rose rep. Covers on the twin four post beds are made of the rep, with deep flounces of the covered flowered chintz at the sides. Beside each bed is a night stand holding an old fashioned glass lamp, with an accordion plaited chintz shade.

A large comfortable wing chair with a butterfly table beside it is upholstered in the chintz. Placed beside one of the windows, so that the light falls on it from the left, is a delightful little spinet desk with a ladder-back rush bottom chair. A lowboy, with a mirror hanging above it, makes the dressing table. All of the furniture is maple. Colorful hooked rugs enliven the floor, which is painted a deep taupe.

Amusingly different is a guest room done in the modernist manner. The walls are French gray, decorated with large solid circles of gold and jade green. Woodwork is painted black, with a fine line of green to match the furniture. At the windows are long draw curtains of jade green sunfast, lined with French gray and finished with a narrow black binding. Covers on the low twin beds match the draperies. A chaise longue and an arm chair are upholstered in black, piped with jade green. Small extra cushions, in many bright colors, look like a great chaise longue. A brass desk set and brass smoking accessories on a low table fit admirably into the general scheme of the room. Several gray fur rugs are used on the glossy black floor.

Painted furniture may be used appropriately in the guest room. One lovely room I have seen has a set painted antiqued turquoise. It is decorated in the Venetian manner, with touches of gold and floral motifs. In the room in which this set is placed the walls are a pale mauve and the woodwork is a deep violet with a line of turquoise. At the windows are glass curtains of pale mauve silk gauze with overcurtains of the same material in dull turquoise. The overcurtains are caught back by gold cords. Covers for the beds are made of a two-toned striped moire in mauve. A small sofa, placed between two windows, is upholstered in the same moiré. Pale lemon yellow silk makes lamp shades and shields.

More Puzzlers in Etiquette - - - - - - - by Persis Standish

HERE is the third of the etiquette quizzes and the questions are growing more difficult. Witness the first two. If you get these right and live up to them you may count yourself perfect.

1. What is a snob?
2. What is an aristocrat?
3. What should govern manners in public?
4. What should govern conversation in public places?
5. On which side of a man does a woman sit in a motor or a carriage?
6. Where does a woman sit in her own motor, if not driving it?
7. Does the husband or male relation receive with his wife at a reception?
8. Should a man ask if he may make a first call on a girl?
9. Where does a woman receive men who call upon her in an hotel?
10. Do brides and bridesmaids wear gloves at the wedding?
11. If the officiating clergyman is married, is his wife asked to the wedding?
12. If a widow remarries how many bridesmaids should she have?
13. Is there any tradition about congratulating the bride?
14. Can a woman refuse to dance with any one who asks her?
15. What sort of clothes should one wear in public?
16. Should a woman smoke in a public place?
17. Is it important for the business woman to have good manners?
18. Is it good form for a business woman to come to the office dressed for the "date" of the coming evening?

Answers.

1. A snob is the lowest form of animal life. It resembles the elephant and the rhinoceros in that it is a pachyderm. Its ambition is to obtain nods from those whom it deems distinguished. It is usually wrong.
2. An aristocrat is one who values intelligence more than gold and character more than intelligence, who practices kindness and humility, who recognizes his own kind dressed for a levee or in blue jeans. An aristocrat always has taste and a sense of humor. Therefore, his manners are perfect at all times.
3. Consideration of others and a desire to be inconspicuous.
4. Conversation in public should be conducted in low tones and should never contain reference to one's own or other people's private affairs.
5. She should sit on the right side unless some unforseen circumstance makes it impossible.
6. In her own motor she also sits on the right side.
7. No. He should be nearby in case there is anything she wishes him to do, but he should not be "in line."
8. No. It is a girl's privilege to ask the men she prefers to call upon her, as man is presuming if he asks to call the first time.
9. Unless she has a private sitting room a woman receives male guests in the hotel lobby or parlors.
10. If they wish they do, but modern fashion dictates that women may dispense with gloves and so the bride and the bridesmaids may take advantage of this, if they so wish.
11. Always. Even if the wife of the clergyman is unknown to the bride's family it is none the less courteous to invite her to the wedding.
12. A widow who remarries should have no attendants.
13. Yes, it is not done. All congratulations are given the bridegroom because tradition says a woman honors a man when she marries him.
14. Yes, she can, but she must not be seen dancing with any one else that dance unless she says that she has it engaged. For a woman to refuse to dance with one man on a trumped up excuse and then appear on the floor with another is an affront to her hostess as well as the man.
15. Quiet clothes. Only persons who have no other social life dress elaborately in public.
16. It all depends on the place. If it is customary for women to smoke in certain cafes or restaurants, any woman who smokes may do so there without being conspicuous, but a nice woman will not be the only one present who is smoking.
17. It is important for the business woman to have good manners, not only for her own honor but for the honor of her employer as well.
18. No, a business woman should wear only simple tailored clothes to the office.

Ran to brave Sir Lancelot's door;

Hollywood Admires Chicago's Sky-Line

- - - By Genevieve Forbes Herrick

Movie Notables Work Hard for Publicity Here

ONE of the first lessons a Hollywood star learns, and certainly the last thing the press agent forgets, is that Chicago is a railroad center.

And cinema land is correspondingly in this city's debt. For it means that every time a lady of the screen leaves her California bungalow for her European villa and a possible divorce, she has several hours of leisure in Chicago.

Time to be photographed with the engineer of the train that carried her this far east; time to be interviewed at the depot where she arrives; time to get into a negligee, up in her suite at the hotel, there to be photographed and interviewed; time to buy a fresh bunch of orchids and be photographed and interviewed once more as the train pulls out for New York. And time, above all, to intone deep, throaty praises of "Chicago, there is really nothing like it; with its magnificent sky line."

—and possibly a husband.

DOUBLE ON CHICAGO

What works for the trip east goes double for the return trip west. For this same Chicago, still a railroad center, affords once more a purposeful loitering place where the film star, back from Europe with a French maid, twelve trunks full of clothes and, possibly, a titled husband, makes a stopover to praise old fashioned honeymoons, exhibit new fashioned jewels, and sing one more song in admiration of Chicago's lake, her boulevard system, even her smoky aura.

A Chicago interview with such a pilgrim starts either in California or in New York. As I have suggested, it's better when it starts in the east.

First of all, then, comes the telegram dispatched by the press agent in New York. It reads something like this:

"Vedette Salerno arrives in Chicago Tuesday. She will be in car 6; drawing room A [always drawing room A]. Miss Salerno is en route from southern Spain where she spent several weeks in getting local color for her coming interpretation of 'Carmen,' to Hollywood where she will begin work on her new picture immediately. Miss Salerno is accompanied by"—and here follows the roster of press representatives, film directors and assistants and assistant assistants, secretaries, maids, and, possibly, a bridegroom.

With all this advance notice, it can hardly be an overwhelming surprise to Miss Vedette when she is met by the gentlemen of the press. But she usually goes through all the appropriate gestures of amazement, gentle dismay, pique, reluctant capitulation, and annoyed boredom at the proceeding.

A CROWD GATHERS

But I'm getting ahead of the story. After the telegrams have arrived, the reporters and the cameramen go down to the railway station and gather around gate 6.

"Hey, who's comin' today?" queries a red cap.

"Pola Negri and her prince," somebody volunteers. Then the crowd gathers. Some are the casual travelers who chance to be near the gate. Others are especial fans of this particular star. And then there is the familiar fringe of people, most of them women, who meet trains for a thrill. There is one woman in town—I never did know who she was—who gets jostled and pushed about once a week, in her determined and successful attempts to get into drawing room and within speaking distance of the celebrity, whether it be film star, pugilist, African huntsman, or a prominent divorcee.

THE STAR ARRIVES

But this woman's favorite is Gloria Swanson. Every time Gloria goes traveling this woman is on the job. She slithers past policemen; she jockeys for positions on train tracks. And when she gets near Gloria she goes into a rhetorical hysteria that resolves itself into a series of gasps interspersed with, "O, I think you're wonderful."

She's a terrible pest, but she's making a success of her avocation.

At last the train comes in. The crowd mills around car No. 6. For all the surprise that the traveling celebrity pretends to register, she, or he, is dressed for the part. Every hair is in place; every jewel is shining brightly; the dog or the monkey, or whatever animal is the vogue that instant, is all combed and perfumed. And the flowers are growing on the star's shoulder, at her waist, in baskets that her maid carries.

Sometimes the cinema queen dresses more for a movie than for a journey. Just the other day a cold, raw, March day it was, I met a widely known movie star. She stepped off the train into a blustering wind; gowned in white, with white shoes, a white hat, and a summer ermine wrap. If the little office girl in the big factory put on such a costume for a train journey everybody would smile pityingly and say how too bad it was that she didn't know any better. But this lady from Hollywood tripped away in inappropriate finery to her rose filled apartment, there to issue fashion dicta and other important statements.

If the arriving star is a man, he, too, has his makeup all assembled. The flower is in his button hole; his lemon colored gloves are faultlessly clean, and the Japanese valet follows six paces in the rear with the swank raincoat.

ORCHIDS, DOGS, ETC.

The local representatives of the film star's company cluster about; they bring more flowers, preferably orchids. There is a rush and a swirl and the celebrity makes a bluff at making off down the platform. She is too tired, too nervous, too busy, or too something, to be photographed. But let the cameraman take her at her word, and begin to pack up his grip, and the lady has a change of heart. She is coy, gracious, acquiescent.

She cuddles her dog; or if the dog is up forward in the baggage car she recollects that now is the time to make a terrible fuss over his whereabouts. Which she proceeds to do. The dog being absent, she clutches, often, some new gewgaw from Europe, a curious doll, a novelty handbag, a fancy cane.

But the best photographic accessory of all is a new husband. For Hollywood publicity seems to be swinging the pendulum over toward superdomesticity. A honeymoon the new theory is, rates higher than a divorce.

NOW THE INTERVIEW

So Gloria and her marquis, and Pola and her prince, not to speak of others with less ancestral in-laws, do a Darby and Joan on the train steps.

Then comes the interview, as the movie star hurries out to the taxi. The conversation is mostly about big cities and little children. How splendid is Chicago, and what a dear little youngster that is standing there at the door! If the star has time she kisses the bewildered youngsters. Then on to the hotel.

If he or she is a topnotch star it's a de luxe suite, with a sitting room resembling the Coliseum. Lesser stars have to put up with smaller quarters.

Now comes the interview en masse. The star hurries to her apartment and does a quick change into a negligee. A man star often elects to slip into a brilliantly hued dressing gown. Sometimes the business suit does very well.

Sometimes there are conversational hurdles that the heroes and heroines from Hollywood have to take neatly and quickly in order to avoid publicity that is not all golden. We can usually tell how near to an unpleasant event is the star's association by the general temper of the interview. If the traveler is in the midst of such an unpleasant episode he or she is pretty sure to be too fatigued to see any one. The interview will come through a maid or a secretary or a judicious press agent.

Then, as the dangerous publicity fades into the distance the star grows sweeter and sweeter.

MABEL'S PEANUTS

For instance, when officialdom was anxious to find out just why Mabel Normand ate peanuts in front of a certain home one eventful day, Miss Normand was exceedingly reticent on her Chicago stop-overs. But later, when the peanut chapter was closed, Miss Normand grew conversational, even chummy. She went so far that one morning, as ten of us sat in her apartment and asked her of this and that, she looked over at a hat one of the ladies with pencils was wearing. Not a prepossessing bonnet. In fact, so the girl told me afterward, a basement bargain.

But Mabel Normand, warming up to her rôle, beamed over at this chapeau and murmured, as if she really meant it:

"Oh, what a perfectly darling hat. I must get one like it!"

And Pola Negri, reticent to the point of sobs instead of words, when she went through Chicago on her way to Valentino's funeral, sought to nullify any bad impression she might then have made, by radiating warm adjectives when she came here, just the other day, with a new husband and an old, old silver cross.

SAME OLD STUFF

Of course there are some things you must never ask the stars about. Don't mention peanuts to Mabel Normand. Don't grow geographic to Gloria Swanson and ask her if she remembers the little house on Mohawk street where she was born. And don't talk to Pola Negri of her new sister-in-law. These are some of the fundamental rules of the game.

As a matter of fact the interview is usually so patterned that it could be prepared beforehand in the office. In a few instances the answers could be left blank and checked hurriedly. It's an inevitable prophecy that the Hollywood travelers will choose to say much of the coming picture, its magnitude, its difference from all previous pictures.

Then there'll be the old patterned eulogy of Chicago, and the "dear public."

Even Peggy Joyce, who makes her own patterns, has been known to pull a bromide about Chicago's weather. She once said she liked it, "because it's so invigorating; it makes me feel like working." But she said it as she stepped aboard a train going away from Chicago.

The west bound train arrives shortly before noon. What with pictures and talks, and cuddling the dog, it's high noon by the time the star reaches the de luxe suite of the hotel. Then comes the costume change, and the mass interview. Luncheon next, followed by a shopping tour. The star may have just returned from Paris with seventeen trunks, and may have collected ten more in New York, but she must go shopping in Chicago. A present for her mother, or some toys for somebody's "kiddies." That makes a new lead for the later editions of the papers. A lost dog isn't a bad item for the late afternoon. Another change of costume, and fresh flowers for the taxi-ride to the evening train for California, and once more drawing room A.

Sometimes the stars get a bad break. For competition isn't good for these Chicago stop-overs.

Elects to slip on a dressing gown.

POLA AND NORMA

Why, just the other day Norma Talmadge got her schedule so confused that she came to town the same day that Pola Negri and Prince Serge Mdivani arrived. Worse than that, the two women stopped at the same hotel. Pola Negri had suite 108; Norma had a corresponding suite up eight floors. But since everything is relative, Norma, who can be ever so haughty, was able to get the solitude she often says she wants, while the newlyweds down in 108 posed for pictures.

It takes not only the engineer of a train but a florist, several press agents, a modiste, a maid, a book of poetry, a dog in a basket, and an essay on Chicago weather to get any Hollywood star through Chicago with credit.

And—but I must stop now. They just laid a telegram on my desk. It informs me that Lottie Pickford, Jack Pickford, Colleen Moore, and John McCormick are arriving here. I've got to go and meet them.

THE SAY-SO OF HOLLERAN YELL by WESTBROOK PEGLER

Wherein a Manager Ruins His Own Logical Contender

I AM very cautious by nature and I try to keep my cue chalked at all times, but there are occasions when occurrences will come along and occur in an unexpected manner and make a sucker out of a gentleman when he thinks he has protected himself in every way.

It seems to me that a great many of our big men have adopted my policy, as I notice that if you walk up to some big man in public life and ask him if he will have a drink he will not give you a definite answer until he finds out whether you want him to have a drink or don't want him to. And I have known some politicians who would not condemn Judas Iscariot until they investigated popular opinion on the subject.

But I have been thinking of an occurrence that occurred when I was the proprietor of an Indian heavyweight by the name of Chief Pain-in-the-Face, which goes to show that, no matter how much you may chalk your cue, you are bound to tear a hole in the table some time.

THE LIEDERKRANZ TRIBE

The chief was a New York bum by the name of Julius Sulzburger, but he had a very dark complexion, so I got him an Indian hat with some turkey feathers on it at a masquerade store and my affectionate old lady sewed some beads on his tights, and whenever we had a fight I would illustrate him with pictures of reindeers and cowboys and such things to make him look like an Indian.

Although he was not a very good fighter, he was a fairly smart bum, and I easily taught him to say such Indian phrases as "Want-um heap big weiner schnitzel," or "Ugh! Ugh! Me want-um borrow five dollars," with a slight German accent.

I taught him to say 'Want-um heap big weiner schnitzel' with a slight German accent."

MONKEY BUSINESS

All this made my stiff look very picturesque to the public, and to show you how smart he was I will assert that one day out west when some Indians at the ringside started to talk Indian to him he talked back to them in German, so I explained to these Indians that he belonged to a tribe of Indians way up in Canada called the Leiderkranz Indians, and did not speak anything but Leiderkranz.

The heavyweight champion at the time was a very terrible bum and he was afraid to fight anybody, so I challenged him on behalf of Chief Pain-in-the-Face, figuring that we would get a lot of work in the clubs around the country as the logical contenders. But, as I stated, my bum was not very good, either, and when I suggested this plan to him he stated to me:

"Well, my dear sir, I think that is a heap fine propostion, but if we do this I am liable to run into some tough bums some night and forget to duck already, so on the whole I think it would be better to hire a monkey."

I would like to explain that when you are taking a logical contender around the country you do not wish to have him chilled unexpectedly by some unknown bum without any reputation, as this would be a great indignity for a logical contender, so it is considered good business to hire some friend to go along and take the falls. This kind of bum is known as a monkey, and these monkeys can be of great assistance in building up a logical contender's reputation, especially if they bleed well, because the public then sees that your contender is a great puncher and a man killer.

A RIFT IN THE LOOT

The heavyweight champion of the world was so terrible that most of the experienced monkeys had retired from the monkey business to become logical contenders, and we had some difficulty finding a suitable monkey. But we finally engaged one by the name of Ball, who was called Rubber Ball because he used to rub the bums in the gymnasium, although some authorities asserted that he was called Rubber Ball because he spent so much time bouncing off the floor of the ring.

The first place we boxed we introduced Rubber Ball as Sergt. Tewksworthy, the champion of the English army, and the next place we introduced him as Ole Oleson, the Minnesota lumberjack, and he would state, "By jove, you old blasted blighter," or, "I bane tank so," or if we introduced him as the champion of Spain he would go around calling people "senorita," and this was very helpful as it perfected the illusion for the public.

I must state in justice to this bum that he was strictly honorable and sportsmanlike for about a month, and not refund this money to the subscribers."

"Well," I stated, "I certainly will not let him fight any of your local bums as he has a very sensitive nature and if he should happen to kill one of your citizens it would give the Indian race a bad name. But," I asserted, "I used to be a bum myself, and if you wish me to impersonate Jeffrey Wentworth I will do so and we will keep this matter a secret for the good of the game."

So that was our plan, and I thought it was a very fine thing for sport, but as I have stated, there are occasions when events will come along and occur with great unexpectedness no matter how well a gentleman chalks his cue.

'RAY FOR HARVARD!

That night in the first round my bum hit me a paste in the back of the head that must have knocked me crazy, because I didn't come to until the middle of the fourth round, and when I did come to my bum was asleep on the floor and the spectators were cheering for Jeffrey Wentworth of Harvard, amid great confusion.

"What has happened?" I inquired, "and why is my logical contender lying down in the middle of the ring in this manner?"

"A regular Harvard cheer for Jeffrey Wentworth," the spectators shouted, and I then realized that while I was in this irresponsible condition due to the paste on the back of the head, I had chased my bum all over the ring and finally hit Chief Pain-in-the-Face a belt on the potato and knocked out my own logical contender.

[Copyright: 1927: By The Chicago Tribune.]

Holleran Yell will tell us more of his trials and tribulations with his "stumblebums" in an early issue.

he would ask me before each fight, "Well, when do I take my dive?" and I would say, "We will put on the knockout in the eighth round this evening," or if we were catching a train or there was not much resources in the box office, I might state, "Let us have a sensational knockout in the second round tonight."

But one day when we were playing a game with dice on the train, Julius Plain-in-the-Face got into an argument with the monkey and the monkey called him a Dinkelspeil Indian and threatened to take a punch at him the next time they got into the ring. Such low ethics horrified me and my bum, because clean sport should be conducted strictly in a spirit of friendly rivalry, so I dismissed the monkey and he got off the train at the next station. This left us in a very bad position, because we had an engagement for Chief Pain-in-the-Face to lick the monkey under the name of Jeffrey Wentworth, the champion of Harvard, the next night.

A BAD SITUATION

As soon as we got to our town I told the promoter that Jeffrey Wentworth had to go back to Harvard to learn some more lessons and therefore we could not have any fight, but he said, "Oh, my dear sir, I have sold $2,500 worth of tickets and I have given $800 of the money away in presents to the chief of police and our state senator, so it would be a terrible blow to clean sport in this town if your bum does not fight anybody, as I could

HOT PAGES FRUM MY DIARY

BY Snowshoe Al

This Entertaining of Newlyweds Ain't No Easy Job

LAST night it wuz raining, so I figured it wood be a swell time to go an' see my gal friend because she koodn't expect me to take her anywhere in the damp. The gal friend's name is Malvina. I calls her on the phone an' warns her that I'm kumming over.

"O, are yew?" sez she, gitting real peeved; "did I say yew kood?"

"Nope," I admits, yawning.

"All right, kum on," sez her, "an' be sure to put on a clean collar, because a young married couple, wich are friends uv mine, are also kumming over this evening. They jist got back frum their honeymoon. Don't kum over here with the intentions uv sitting around like a mummy. Broadcast sum sort uv a conversational noise—see if yew can act sociable—I'm trying to hide the fact frum my friends that I run around with a dumb crystal set!"

"Quit spilling the grief," sez I; "I'll do my share towards keeping the english language in circulation tonight."

NICE POOCH!

Wen I gits to her house I knocks on the door an' wuz told to kum in, so I shoves the door open an' meets the dog. The Bow-wow's name is Sylvester, an' he is 45 pounds uv pure unadulterated Cannibal, in fact every time me an' that Flea-incubator meet, everybody in the neighborhood starts betting each other money, because I always consider it an elimination contest, whereas Sylvester evidently has got my name filed away under "Food."

Talk about a tough Barking Machine! If that Bone Burier saw a regiment uv leather-necks go past the window he'd git so dam hungry he wood go crazy! He woodn't be able to understand why so much meat wuz gitting away frum him. The last time they let him outside he wuz seen running down the alley dragging a dead horse an' looking for a place to hide it. Also, I remember the time they found him standing in front uv a big sign-board, gazing with hungry eyes at a life-size painting uv an elephant. He already had all the paint chewed off as high up as the elephant's knees. Yup, that's the little playmate wot I encounters everytime I calls on Malvina.

SPEAKING OF DOG FIGHTS

Well, Sylvester makes one starved dive in my direction an' I tried to close the door between us, but he got his head caught in it. This bothered him greatly but it pleased me immensely, an' I wuz jist gitting ready to massage his mug with my shoe wen the gal friend stopped the slaughter.

"It wood be jist like yew to kick that poor innocent dear," sez she, chaining Sylvester to the radiator.

"Listen," I squawks; "wot gits my goat is the fact that wen anybody else knocks on this door that hunk uv Galloping Boloney is chained up! Far be it frum me to suspect foul play, but I've got a dirty idea that wen I knock, yew unfasten him an' howl: 'Kum in.'"

"It's a good thing that yew don't depend on yer ideas for a living," sez she, "or yew wood spend most uv yer time standing in the bread-line. I want yew to leave Sylvester alone. Dog fights are jist terrible!"

"Don't git funny!" sez I; "there has to be at least 2 dogs in a dog fight!"

"Well," sez she, "there's only one real difference between Sylvester an' yew—he has a pedigree!"

HERE COMES THE BRIDE

"Where's yer mother?" asks I.

"She has gone out," sez Mal.

"An' the kid brother—where is he?" sez I.

"He is not in," sez she; "ask me another!"

Jist then Matrimony's latest victims announced their arrival by knocking on the door, so I sat down an' prepared to become sociable. The first to enter the room wuz the bride. She had the graceful lines uv a darning needle, only she didn't weigh as much. She wuz followed immediately by the Gloom, who wuz a fair-haired boy uv 30 years, an' who weighed 260 pounds. Well, as soon as Sylvester got one look at this guy he got so hungry that he had a spasm an' tried to swallow the radiator. Me an' the dog wuz both hoping that the Gloom wood go over an' try to pat him, because I wanted to laugh an' Sylvester wanted to eat! No luck!!

We all sits down after I wuz introduced to this couple [their name wuz Jones] an' I gits the high sign frum the gal friend to become talkative. I stalls for a minute to let sumbody else start the lingo, but it seems as how young married couples wot have jist returned frum their honeymoon don't have anything to say, so I breaks loose with verbal racket.

"Well, how do yew like married life?" sez I.

"O, fine!" sez the Jones family.

"That's strange," sez I, "taking into consideration the number uv guys wot are shot by their wives on their honeymoon. Statistics compiled by the Quack Doctors' Association uv America show that only one guy in 4,000 has any right to git married. I can show yew a pamphlet——"

BEG PARDON??

Jist then I got a terrible kick on the ankle, so I lets out a wild howl. Malvina begged my pardon, but she did it with a dirty look in her eye, so I figured I better drop that subject. So I starts all over again.

"Where did yew go on yer honeymoon?" sez I.

"Niagara Falls," sez the Jones family.

"Har, har! Fish!!!" sez I; "so yew went to see the cute little drops uv water do the high-dive! I woodn't go to that place on a bet. Nothing to it! Did yew have a compartment on the train or did yew take a couple uv lower berths?"

"My, wot a beautiful lamp shade!" squawks Mrs. Jones.

"Isn't it, though?" howls Malvina.

"Bad night out, aint it?" sez Mr. Jones to me.

"Yes," sez I, impatiently; "did youse take a compartment or did yew jist grab off a couple uv lower—OWWW!!"

"O pardon me, Al, wuz that yer foot I stepped on?" hisses the gal friend.

"Yew know dam well it wuz!" I squawks, gitting real peeved. "Wot side uv town do yew folks live on? Or do yew live with her mother? If yew do, yew're crazy."

"We have a 3 room apartment on ——avenue," sez the Jonses, adding the exact address.

THAT GORGEOUS LAMP

"O! O! Not so good!" sez I; "that neighborhood has got a helluva reputation. That's Bootlegger Boulevard. All the actresses frum the dime burlesque shows are rooming in that neighborhood. I know one named Maggie wich hangs out in that same block. O, baby! Wen it kums to lapping up Liquid Lightning, that filly cops the gold plated garbage can. She certainly likes the old Third Rail Vinegar! She can stow away more Oil Uv Mirth than anybody I ever—GWWW!!!"

"Wot's the matter?" sez the gal friend, real innocent-like.

"Yew know wot happened!" squawks me, "yew kicked my ankle!"

"I'm sorry, I didn't mean to," sez her.

"Apple-grease!" sezs I; "are yew folks furnishing yer own place?"

"O, yes!" admits the Jones Duet.

"I'll bet yew didn't buy twin beds. Har, har!"

"My, wot a gorgeous lamp shade!" sez Mrs. Jones.

"O, I'm so glad yew like it!" yells Malvina.

"It's still raining outside," sez Mr. Jones to me.

ANYBODY SEEN A HAT?

Well, within the next hour I asked several questions which caused Mrs. Jones to admire the lamp shade, so at last I suggests to Mal that she give her the damn thing.

About this time the Joneses decides to go home, so after assuring us that they had a lovely time they departed. I caught up with them before they reached the bottom uv the stairs, in fact they helped pick me up.

Tomorrow night I'm going back for my hat.

Medics of Paris Renew Ancient War on Kissing

PARIS.—(AP)—Medical science's old, old war on the kiss is being renewed. The learned gentlemen trying to educate the public admit they haven't much hope of great success, but they are easing their consciences by issuing their warnings.

They paint again the pictures of bad microbes and tell mournfully of the great danger when lips meet lips. They suggest handshaking as a nice, sanitary substitute.

The French, however, it is admitted, are bound by tradition to do a wonderful lot of kissing—fortunately, more often on the cheek—or on both cheeks—than on the mouth.

The double cheek kiss figures in many public ceremonies. The duty isn't always pleasant, for generals and cabinet ministers often find it their duty to embrace florid, bewhiskered men, but occasionally a handsome young woman gets into the picture and the cabinet minister, on occasion, supplements the conventional "accolade" on both cheeks by an enthusiastic lip-to-lip performance.

Irish Bootlegger Takes Pride in Making Good Stuff

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

DUBLIN.—The United States holds no option on bootlegging. The Emerald Isle, where strong drink is as legal as weak tea, is going through a siege of this popular American practice, but for a reason just the opposite to that which makes millionaires of the Yankee moon makers.

The small farmers here are finding that agriculture is a poor paying proposition, while there is a ready market for the "poteen" due to its cheapness of price. The standard prices for good liquor are a bit stiff for the Irishmen of the rural districts, so the poteen producers enjoy a brisk trade at reduced prices.

Here, as in America, the authorities charged with putting down the manufacture of illicit liquor, have their troubles. Since the special orders have been issued to the civic guards to wipe out the illegal stills only one seizure has been made.

In one respect the Irish bootlegger differs from the American. The Irishman takes a certain pride in turning out a good quality of poteen, and his raw materials are not taken from products designed for external use only.

I WORRY

What's your pet worry? Tell it in a short and snappy jingle and we'll pay you $2 if we print it. Address Worries, Chicago Sunday Tribune.

On to Ontario!

I'm going to Ontario
To quench my awful thirst;
But what worries me is this:
What shall I order first?

Now, if two dollars you'll remit,
For this be-jangled rhyme,
I'll buy myself a permit,
And have a lovely time. J. D. S.

O, Weil!

A little verse I'd like to type,
And send it to ye ed.
Perhaps 'twill help to light my pipe,
My thoughts seem dumb and dead.

I worry 'cause my head is dense
Composed of i-vo-ry;
I worry—for there's lack of sense
In jingles "writ" by me. K. H.

Before Very Long.

While others are laughing gaily,
In a prison of care I'm walled;
And my worries increase daily,
For soon I shall be bald.

J. H.

Vacation Problems.

Now, where to spend vacation days
is what perplexes me;
I've pondered over booklets, a dozen
or two or three.
Sometimes I favor the countryside,
sometimes the sounding sea,
And then a camp in the cool, green
woods seems to beckon me.
O! friend of mine, in a similar fix,
do tell, which shall it be!

M. B.

Superstitious.

Something gave me an awful fright,
Coming home the other night;
Something passed across my way,
That has worried me every day;
'Twas only a little black cat, you see;
But I'm as Irish as can be.

Queen Mary Has a Wilderness in Palace Grounds

LONDON.—(AP)—Queen Mary's favorite spot in the garden of Buckingham Palace is a place that she calls "The Wilderness." It is a spot entirely without any formal setting, near a lake, and abounding with flowers during spring and summer.

"The Wilderness" receives no special attention from the royal gardeners, and the flowers grow where and how they will. On a warm summer's day there is no more delightful spot in London. The trees hang over the water's edge, making a delightful retreat that might be in the depth of the countryside, instead of the heart of England's capital.

The queen takes great interest in the palace garden. She possesses a library on gardens and gardening, and is very feminine in her passion for beautiful flowers. Since she was a girl her majesty has counted gardening among her chief hobbies.

Two French Operas Tried in Germany

BERLIN.—(AP)—Two French novelties were given a first hearing in Germany at the Neuss theater of Leipzig.

Henri Rabaud's opera, "The Call of the Sea," based on J. M. Synge's "The Riders to the Sea," met but an indifferent reception, a fact that the critics attributed to the libretto, described as "a gloomy atmospheric painting devoid of all dramatic action."

The score of the former conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra is praised, however, as "a talented tonal synthesis from Wagner and Debussy, although just lacking the divine spark of genius."

More successful was the the première of Maurice Ravel's "The Magic Word," a lyric fantasia in two pictures of an attractive fairy tale for which Ravel has constructed "an iridescent tonal design with all his accustomed virtuosity."

Little Tales of Big Heads

What's your pet little tale of a Big Head? Send it to Big Heads, Sunday Tribune, and we'll pay you $1 if we print it.

No Stars in the Air.

Because his accompanist had received several request for solos, a certain radio tenor strode sullenly toward a chair, remarking: "Well, I guess the star takes a back seat." The usually good natured program manager could not resist an amused look about the studio and asked innocently: "Where's the star?" E. C. M.

Misconstrued.

The waiter in the waffle house had been very attentive and deferential all through the meal, so I smiled and gave him a liberal tip. When he helped me on with my coat he whispered in my ear: "How about a little date tonight?" A. M.

She Admits It!

At school there is a girl liked by the seniors. The other day she said to me, "Well, I'll take you to the M. A. C. club dance. I know you will be glad to go with one of the school's prettiest girls." C. H.

Small "Understanding."

A friend who often goes shopping with me has very tiny feet and upon her small "foundation" has built a superiority complex of giant proportions. She takes savage delight in calling attention to my number sixes, knowing that her twos will profit in contrast. I have spent many useless hours waiting for her to try on shoes in various stores and cause commotion among the clerks who seldom have calls for her size and last, when she has no intention of buying at all if she can be fitted. That's just one of Cinderella's little tricks whereby she spreads the doctrine of her tiny "tootsies." It was the proverbial last straw the other day when she told me: "It isn't only on account of the looks that I pride myself on my small feet. There's more to it than that. You know, small feet are sort of an indication of patrician ancestry." F. A. S.

Two Officials Guard Crown of England's King

LONDON.—(AP)—The crown worn by King George upon occasions of state has two officially appointed guardians who are directly responsible for its safety.

The first is the lieutenant of the Tower of London. This post is always held by an army officer of high rank and all the crown jewels, normally housed in the Tower, are in his care.

The duty of the other official is to attend and guard the crown whenever it is necessary to remove it from the Tower. He is the holder of a post of long standing, and is called the king's bargemaster.

The duties of this guardian date back to the days when the crown was invariably carried by water along the River Thames from the Tower to Westminster.

THE GIRL AND THE WATCH

A Story from Real Life

A Hard-Boiled Club Man and a Pickpocket Gang

"O, how stupid of me! I mean the Y. W. C. A. headquarters."

DONALD OSBORNE was in a pleasant mood as he emerged from his club in Michigan avenue. He had just partaken of a splendid dinner, his cigar glowed smoothly and it was a mild, wintry evening, warm enough to unbutton one's overcoat and yet cool enough to be stimulating.

Other strollers were idling down the avenue, chatting and gazing into the bright shop windows. It was the theater hour and taxis were spinning toward Randolph street.

Osborne was in the middle of a block when a taxicab pulled up at the curb beside him and a girl in a fur coat stepped out, the cab waiting for her. Without hesitation she went up to Osborne.

"Could you tell me, please," she asked in a timid voice, a little tremulous, "how to get to the Y. W. C. A.? My taxi man doesn't seem to know."

THIN AND WAN

The girl's face was young, though a trifle thin and wan. Under the street light Osborne could see that her eyes were large and gray.

"There are several Y. W. C. A. branches here, I believe, miss," he replied, "which do you wish to find?"

"O, how stupid of me! I mean the Y. W. C. A. headquarters."

"Well, that's easy," answered Osborne, giving her the proper directions.

"O thank you so much!" The girl smiled at Osborne. It was a radiant smile, albeit a trifle sad, a smile which made Osborne's heart beat faster despite the fact he was a man of some years, well past forty indeed, and of considerable experience. For a moment he thought of asking her if she would permit him to escort her to the "Y."

ANOTHER MAN

Before he could form the words she had gone. She had skipped back to the waiting taxi and been spun away. It was not until the cab was leaving that Osborne noticed there was another man in it as well as the driver, a man slunk back in the corner of the seat with his coat collar turned up.

Strange, thought Osborne, that the girl's escort had not inquired the way. Young men nowadays seemed to have no chivalry whatever. As he sauntered on down the avenue, he continued to think of the girl—of her timidity, of her rather pathetic big gray eyes.

Osborne often thought of girls, although he was determined never to marry any of them. It wasn't that he was a woman hater but, rather, that he agreed with George Bernard Shaw in his opinion that marriage is like play writing and a man should not venture upon either after he is 40 years old.

When he was young he had had a sweetheart. They had disagreed over something or other and he had devoted himself entirely to business. He had done well—from a humble beginning had struggled far up the ladder of worldly success, and had become hardboiled in the climbing. But he was lonely sometimes for all of that. He felt lonely tonight after seeing this girl. The sense of well being he had experienced on leaving the club had departed. He decided to go to a show. Perhaps a good musical comedy would cheer him up.

Osborne reached for his watch it was gone!

LOST: ONE WATCH

Part of the chain still hung from his buttonhole, but the watch was gone. He had had it when he left the club.

Instantly the truth dawned on him. The girl was a pickpocket. The man in the taxi was her confederate. While she made silly conversation with him about a mythical Y. W. C. A. destination and smiled at him wistfully as she had nipped the chain with a pair of metal clippers and stolen his watch. With his coat unbuttoned as it was the track had evidently been easy enough.

Osborne ground his teeth. The watch was a valuable one. Valuable intrinsically and valuable as an heirloom. It was a heavy gold, hand engraved, key winding watch which his grandfather had brought with him from England in 1830. It had descended to his father. Then to him.

$100 REWARD

Osborne was a man of action. He hurried to a telephone and notified the police of the theft. Then he called the newspapers and inserted advertisements in the "lost" columns. He offered $100 for the return of the watch, "no questions asked." The thief would probably be unable to realize that much on the timepiece from a fence and the ad might lead to the return of the watch.

His smile was more sardonic than usual when Osborne returned to his club that night. For the first time in a long, long while he had met a girl whose face interested him. She had taken him for a sottie, robbed him and made a clean getaway. He had faint hope of ever seeing the watch or the girl again.

Two days later, however, as he was dressing to go to business, his telephone rang. A man's voice was speaking.

"I saw your ad in the papers," he explained, "and I know where your watch is. If you'll keep your word not to ask any questions and promise not to let the police in on this, I'll get it back for you."

"I promise," said Osborne.

"All right," replied the voice, "at 9 o'clock tonight be at the northeast corner of Madison and Halsted streets. Have the $100 with you in cash. You'll see a guy with a piece of court plaster on the side of his jaw. You say to him, 'Hello Davy.' Then he'll show you how to get your watch back pronto."

TO A SHABBY HOUSE

At 9 o'clock that evening Osborne arrived on the specified corner. After a while a taxi drew up and a small, nattily dressed man stepped out, keeping the cab waiting. On the side of his jaw was a strip of white court plaster.

"Hello, Davy," said Osborne, approaching him and using the password. The man looked him over for a moment with furtive, black eyes. Then he grinned.

"It's all O. K., Buddy," he said. "Come with me and I'll take you to the guy who's got your watch."

"Go with you where? I thought you were going to have the watch here."

"No, but it'll only take us ten minutes to see the guy whose got it."

The man known as Davy entered the waiting taxi, and Osborne reluctantly followed him. He did not like the idea of consorting with criminals, but he wanted his watch very much. Besides, he was usually able to take care of himself in a fracas and, as a precaution, he had a police whistle in his pocket.

The cab whizzed around devious corners. Davy had not given the cab driver an address, but the man seemed to know where to go.

The car stopped unexpectedly in front of a shabby house in a dark, disreputable street. There was no number on the house and it was like all the others in the block. The taxi driver's route had bewildered Osborne and he did not even know the street.

SLUGGED!

The man with the courtplastered face placed a key in the latch and opened the front door of the house. He entered, and Osborne, with some misgivings, followed him. A dim gas light was burning in the hallway. The man locked the door behind them and then—

Osborne took a terrific blow on the back of the head! A man standing just behind the door had slugged him with a piece of lead pipe, wrapped in cloth.

Osborne let out a cry and sank to the floor. Had the blow been a square one, he would have been knocked unconscious. As it was the bludgeon had slipped in the man's hands and struck him a glancing blow. Even as he fell to the floor, Osborne realized the situation and fighting fury filled his heart. The pickpockets had lured him to this house to rob him again.

As the man raised the lead pipe to strike again, Osborne seized his legs, football fashion, and threw him to the floor. In another second they were grappling with each other desperately, rolling over and over on the floor.

The man's hands clutched at Osborne's throat but he placed his knee on his stomach and forced him to release his hold. Again they rolled over and over, bruising their bodies against the furniture and the walls.

"Hold him still for a second, Pete!" cried Davy who had picked up the lead pipe and raised it over them eagerly, menacingly. "Hold him still for just a second and I'll soak him!"

THE GIRL AGAIN

Osborne realized his danger and desperately kept his man rolling with him. He could handle the man he was struggling with, but he knew that once he paused long enough to give Davy a chance to strike him, the lead pipe would descend and blot out his consciousness.

It was two against one. Osborne was breathing hard and could not have lasted much longer. Then, through a bloody mist, he saw the girl—

She was standing on the stairway under the gas light, taking in the situation with horror-struck, wide gray eyes. For a moment she gazed at Osborne and there seemed to be pity in her eyes. Then her hand went to the gas jet. There was darkness.

The man with the court-plastered face ripped out an oath and leaped at the girl. Now it was two against two.

With a supreme effort Osborne clutched the hair of his antagonist. He raised his head a few inches and brought it down against the floor—once, twice. The man stopped resisting and lay quiet in his grasp.

Osborne labored to his feet and groped his way to the foot of the staircase, where he had heard the girl scream. Davy was trying to strangle her. Osborne seized him by the collar with his left hand, held him off at arm's length and crashed a right-hand swing to his jaw. The man crumpled to the floor.

Osborne was ready to drop himself from complete exhaustion but he managed to strike a match and relight the gas jet. Both of his opponents lay unconscious on the floor, breathing hard.

HIS WATCH

As a precaution against their awakening, Osborne picked up the lead pipe and took out his police whistle. Then he turned to the girl. She was unhurt but still half hysterical from her struggle.

"I came here to get my watch," he said to her, "and I mean to get it! Get it for me and get your wraps."

The girl started to say something, but Osborne stamped his foot. She obediently ran up stairs while Osborne wondered why she had saved him in his battle with the two men. In a minute she came back, wearing her hat and fur coat and carrying the watch. She handed the watch to Osborne.

Now if this were a fiction story and not one from real life, we would undoubtedly have Osborne and the girl leaving the house toegther. She would explain that, after all, she was a good girl and, in the end, the clubman would fondly enfold the little underworld creature to his breast and ask her to become his wife. We are sorry, but it didn't happen that way at all. Osborne liked the girl, however, and must have felt that there was some good in her. But he was hard-boiled.

HARD BOILED

After the girl had handed him his watch he took from his pocket the $100 which he had intended to pay as a reward. He handed it to her and pointed to the door.

"Beat it!" he commanded.

The girl opened the door and fled.

Osborne gave her two minutes leeway, three. The men on the floor started to stir.

Osborne went to the door and blew long and loud on the police whistle.

Handshakers Begin to Bore Sig. Mussolini

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME.—A tremor of apprehension went through political circles both here and abroad as Premier Benito Mussolini issued his latest decree. Most of the Italian dictator's pronouncements cause European statesmen uneasy moments, but this one struck right at the very heart of political tradition.

Sig. Mussolini is through with professional bores, celebrity seekers and handshakers, the background of every politician's success. In simple and unmistakable terms he has given the nation and world to understand that his time is as valuable as that of any other busy man and he does not want his office cluttered up with people who may be giants in their own home towns, but who come to visit him in the same sense they would visit the other historic or interesting tourist spots of the Eternal City.

He is tired of being looked upon as a curiosity, it is said, and has sent precise instructions to all prefects that persons wishing to acquaint him with matters they consider important must do so through the prefects. The prefects themselves must accompany all committees when requests for audiences are granted.

This order is not directed at the American tourists, who work all avenues of influence for introductions, but undoubtedly it will cut down the number of Yanks who march across that famous long strip of carpet, a seemingly endless path that separates their entrance into the room from the piercing eyes of Italy's leader.

HIS SON-IN-LAW.

"What kind of a man is your son-in-law?" we asked.

"Well," replied old Gaunton Grimm. "I can best describe him by saying that he still expects to become rich by raising Belgian hares."—Kansas City Star.

NO QUARTZ.

"Any gold bearing quartz in that mine you grubstaked?"

"Quarts!" repeated Cactus Joe. "There aren't even pints."—Washington Star.

SAM 'N' HENRY ···· By Correll & Gosden

The Boys Are Broke and Things Look Mighty, Mighty Dark

[In trying to move a small safe Sam injured his foot, and we find the boys spending an evening in their room.]

"Special Delivery for Sam. Smith."

SAM — Henry, I think my foot's goin' be a'right by tomorrow, an' I kin git back on de job.

Henry—If yo' is countin' on mashin' yo' foot ev'vy time yo' move sumpin', yo' betteh git some iron shoes or sumpin'.

Sam—Well, dat was yo' fault, Henry, 'cause yo' let de safe slide down out o' yo' hand on my feet. Anotheh thing, I can't move no safe by myself.

Henry — Don' argue wid me now, I'se busy.

(Henry has been sitting at a table in the room, writing on a piece of cardboard.)

Sam—Whut is yo' figgerin' out dere, Henry?

Henry—I is de president of de comp'ny, an' I'se figgerin' up how much money we'd made today if we'd worked an' hauled a trunk ev'vy hour.

Sam — How much would we made, Henry?

Henry—Dat's a matteh dat we gotta take up at a open meetin'.

Sam—Well, tell me dis, Henry. How is we goin' git some money tomorrow to git sumpin' to eat wid?

Henry—I'se thinkin' 'bout goin' to de bank an' borrowin' some money.

Sam—Well, whut is yo' goin' give de bank fo' cor-rat-ral?

THINKIN' IS HARD WORK

Henry—Give 'em Gram'pa, de hoss, for cor-rat-ral. Dat'll let 'em know dat we mean bizness.

Sam—If yo' take de hoss down to de bank, Henry, how is we goin' haul trunks wid him?

Henry—Now, don' be so dumb. I ain't goin' take de hoss in de bank in de man's office. We'll put a mor'gage on de hoss.

Sam—I don' think he kin carry no more, Henry. He got all de harness on him an' he got a great big collar. He's pullin' enough.

Henry (heaving a sigh of disgust at Sam's ignorance)—Dere yo' go. Listen, yo' is de advertisin' manager, ain't yo'?

Sam—Yeh, I'se de advertisin' manager. Whut about it, Henry?

Henry—Well, tend to de advertisin' department an' don' mess wid de president no mo'.

Sam—De only thing, Henry, we gotta figger out how we kin make some money.

Henry—Well, I been figgerin' all day. I been thinkin' and thinkin'.

Sam—Yo' been asleep fo' de las' four hours heah on de bed, Henry.

Henry—Dere yo' go agin. I done tol' yo' dat's when I do my thinkin'—when I'se layin' down wid my eyes closed.

Sam—I thought yo' was asleep, Henry.

Henry—Sometimes when I'se thinkin' I think so hard dat it sorta kill my brain fo' a minute an' I sorta drop off to sleep.

Sam—Well, keep on thinkin', Henry, 'cause we gotta make some money heah.

(There is a knock at the door.)

Henry (fearing trouble) — O, O. Dere's somebody at de door. I hope it ain't de lan'lord 'cause we owes him enough.

Sam—Whut is yo' goin' tell him, Henry?

A LETTEH FROM LIZA

Henry—You is de treasurer. You handle de matteh. (Calls to door.) Come in.

(The door opens and a special delivery carrier walks in.)

Sam (speechless at not seeing the landlord)—Awa—awa—awa——.

Man (interrupting)—Special delivery for Sam Smith.

Sam—Dat's me, mistah. Han' it to me heah. I got a bad foot. I can't git on it much, mistah.

Henry—If dat's from Liza, I hope she's sendin' you some money, dat's all.

Sam—Mus' I sign on dis line heah, mistah?

Man—No, no, sign on this line down at the bottom.

Henry—Is yo' done writ to Liza lately?

Sam (signing) — Wait a minute, Henry. S-m-i-t-h—dere you is, mistah. (As the carrier leaves.) Close de door when yo' go out, will yo' please?

Henry—Does Liza know you'se broke?

Sam—I fo'got to tell yo', Henry. I writ her a lettah de otheh day an' tol' her dat we done started in de transfer bizness right now. I ain't said nothin' 'bout bein' broke.

Henry—Yo' betteh start thinkin' 'bout it cause we is flat, an' we ain't got no oats fo' de hoss. (Sam is nervous over his letter.) Stop shakin' dere an' open up de letteh.

Sam—Ev'vy time I git a letteh from Liza, Henry, it makes my heart jump right up in my throat, yo' know it? Umm—umm, I LOVES dat gal. Soon as I git on my feet an' git some money I goin' marry her too.

Henry—Read de letteh, read de letteh. Whut do she say?

Sam (as he gets the letter unfolded) —Umm—umm, listen to dis, Henry, listen to dis!

O-O-O!

Henry—I know. I kin tell by dat smile on yo' face. She's callin' yo' lollypop dere, or sweet geranium or sompin'. Shake de letteh an' see if dere's any money in it.

Sam—Ain't no money in it, Henry, but listen to dis. (Reads.) "My darlin' angel, little baby-face——" (to Henry) Umm—umm, ain't dat sumpin'?

Henry—Read de lettah now, read de lettah. Don' git de president mad.

Sam (reading)—"I'se jus' received yo' wonderful lettah an' I want you to know dat yo' little baby is waitin' fo' yo'." (To Henry) Doggone, Henry, dere's a sweet gal, now dere's a sweet gal.

Henry—Yo' must-a tol' her dat yo' was comin' back home to eat or sumpin'.

Sam—No I didn't, Henry. I jus' tol' her dat I'se gittin' 'long a'right. Tol' her we done gone in de transfer bizness an' we was goin' be big men.

Henry—Whut else do she say?

Sam—She say heah—"I loves you mo' an' mo' each day, an' when I thinks of you up in Chicago wid all de otheh big bizness men, I is proudeh an' proudeh of my little baby face."

Henry (disgusted)—O, O. If dere's any mo' stuff in dere like dat, skip dat.

Sam—Den she say heah—"I was tellin' gram'pa whut a big success you is makin' in de transfer bizness an' 'bout all de money dat you is makin' an' he tol' me to tell you——"

Henry (interrupting)—Whut is you done tol' dat gal?

Sam—I jus' tol' her dat we done bought a hoss an' wagon an' gone into de transfer bizness an' we was gonna git some mo' hosses soon.

Henry — Well, read what Liza's gram'pa say den. Let's hear it.

Sam—She say, "My gram'pa tol' me to tell you to be careful whut yo' do wid yo' money. Gram'pa talked to a friend o' his an' he tol' me to tell you to buy g-o-v-e-r-n-m-e-n-t——" (To Henry) Dat's gov'ment, ain't it, Henry?

Henry—Dat's right.

MORE ADVICE

Sam (reading)—Tol' me to tell you to buy gov'ment bonds an' be careful not to put too much money in one place.

Henry—O—O. If each one of us jus' had fifty cents we'd both take it oveh to de res'trant, I know dat.

Sam—Listen heah, Henry (reads:)—"Gram'pa say to git two or three pieces of good real estate now an' hol' on to it."

Henry—De only way we goin' git any real estate is to steal it, dat's all.

Sam—Den she say heah (reads): "Gram'pa say dat real estate bonds is good, too, an' when you buy yo' hosses, buy 'em from some man dat knows his bizness."

Henry—We ain't got 'nuf money to buy a piece o' roast beef, much less any hoss meat.

Sam—Den she say heah on de next line: "Gram'pa say if you is short big money, you could send him any seventy-five dollahs each week to de bank down heah in Bummin'ham."

Henry—Dat man mus' think you is a millionaire, don' he? I don' know which is got less sense, Liza's gram'pa or our hoss, Gram'pa.

Sam—Liza's all mixed up. Sho'. She mus' think we got money.

Henry—Read on—whut do she say dere?

Sam (reading)—"Gram'pa, jus' let me to tell you not to throw yo' money away, but to hol' on to it now while you is got plen'y 'cause some day you might need all de money you is got now.

(There is a knock on the door.)

THE LANDLORD CALLS

Henry—Come in, come in.

(The landlord enters.)

Sam—Well, I be doggoned, heah's de lan'lord, Henry.

Henry (realizing the landlord's mission)—O, O. (To landlord) Good evenin' lan'lord. (Gets up to get his hat.) I was jus' gittin' ready to leave. I got a 'pointment down de street wid a gent'man. Yo' know I is de president of de transfer comp'ny.

Landlord—Now listen, boys, I done waited long 'nuf fo' dat rent. I is sorry to tell yo' but de time is up——

Henry (interrupting)—Jus' a minute, brotheh, jus' a minute heah. I'se gotta git down de street dere to see dis man fo' a few minutes, 'cause it means ten—three hund'ed dollahs to me. But heah is treasurer an' he will handle dat matteh. I'll see yo' later. (To Sam—Sam, you take care o' de gent'man heah. So long, I'll see yo' later. (Henry leaves.)

Landlord (to Sam as Sam puts on hat)—Just a minute, Sam, where is yo' goin'?

Sam (leaving)—I is de gent'man dat Henry is got de 'pointment wid.

THE B. AND C. AND THE DUKE

By Duke Bakrak

Nobody heard tha door open.

Tha Story of a Poker Game at Sam's House

IT'S been up to me for about three months to have the pot grabbers over for a poker game on account all the other guys have had their turn. Last Tuesday the B. and C. gets informed that Friday night I was gonna have them over and she better get herself some place to go cause all tha rest of tha bunch has got their lions trained to beat it until it's time to serve tha lunch. Instead of getting a pleasant "Alright dear," tha following gas attack is launched:

"You ain't kidding me, are you papa?"

"Whadda ya mean. kidding?"

"Whose gonna clean up after those bums?"

"They don't dirty up anything."

A BAD MESS

"The only thing they don't get ashes on is tha ceiling."

"What did I buy you a vacuum cleaner fer?"

"You ain't paid fer it yet, have ya?"

"What the hell's the difference?"

"That Swede Rosenberg burnt a hole in tha table cloth last time."

"It wasn't him, it was Daniels."

"Your crazy, Daniels spilt tha coffee."

"Why don't ya pipe down with tha yelling? I ain't deaf."

"Supposing ya quit loser, whose gotta suffer?"

"Listen! Crabby, you win. I'll go to dodge meeting Friday instead."

Well, just between you an me I was in a helova mess. I had already told tha swindlers that everything was all set and Wednesday morning I hadda call everybody up and pull a lot of phony excuses as to why I coodn't have them. They natcherally was sore. Some of 'em had to make a lotta promises to get out Friday and here I go an pull a wet blanket on them.

Three o'clock Wednesday afternoon tha day is saved. Sam Mellow calls up an' asks if I cood get out at all Friday night. As long as I had pulled tha lodge act on tha B. and C. I told him I cood, so he says he'll call up tha crowd and we shood come to his place as his ole lady is home visitin' her folks and she'd never be any tha wiser.

THA SORE ACT

When I got home Wednesday tha B. and C. has a swell feed [on which I don't even comment]. Get me! I'm pullin' a "sore-as-hell" act on her. After we eat she says she'll do tha dishes alone if I take her to a movie and I says, "You'll not only do tha dishes alone, but you'll do tha movie alone." And I stood pat. Eight o'clock she asks, cood we go for a bus ride and she gets told that SHE cood. WE coodn't.

Ten o'clock, after finishing tha paper I pull a yawn, don't say, "Good night," an mozee off ta bed. Thursday morning I discover what a sap I been all these years fer not pulling tha "sore act" before. You shooda seen tha breakfast she fixes. Grape fruit [loosened], toast, buttered instead of tha do-it-yerself system, even tha eggs are shelled. And just before I check out she says as how sorry she was about not having tha boys up Friday and it was selfishness on her part. Also that I shood have 'em all up and she'll fix a swell lunch and woodn' I forgive her. As long as I'm all set to play I just tole her not to open up tha subject again as it might cause me to lose my temper and also that the next time she has any wome playing bridge in tha afternoon she better chase 'em 'fore I got home or I'd throw 'em out on their ears.

Here's something I didn' reckon on. Sam promised his Mrs. that he woodn' do any stepping while she was gone and that the only place he wood go would be to his lodge meeting on Friday nights. Incidentally, Sam belongs to tha same lodge as I do. He also promised not to have any company at tha house cause she didn't want to come home and find tha place upset. This information was dished during tha course of tha game in tha way of askin' us guys not to get any ashes on tha carpet and t. sneak out quietly when we left so as tha neighbors woodn' hear us and maybe spill tha beans.

. . . 'an nipped nine dollars while I'm sleeping.

AN INTERRUPTION

One of tha birds inquired as to when was Sam's jailer due back and we got told either tomorrow or Sunday. For a pleasant surprise she changes her mind and manages to hit Chicago at half past eight Friday night. Knowing Sam wood be at tha lodge and not wanting to sit home alone she drops in at our house. After chewing tha rag till eleven o'clock she induces tha B. and C. to walk over to tha house with her.

On acct. most of tha birds hadda be home by eleven-thirty we played tha consolation round at eleven sharp. For those of you who don't know what a consolation round is, I will explain. You double the limit and play once around tha table in order to give tha losers a chance to lose some more. Well, we was so busy about this time that nobody heard tha door open. What happened was tha women heard our voices, snuck in tha living room and listened while we was settling up. I win 18 bucks. Guess tha women knew how everybody came out. Poor Sam Mellow dropped 16 bucks, twelve pints of ginger ale and two quarts of prewar Gordon that he made just before.

HEAVY ARTILLERY

Just as we was getting on our tip toes to beat it for home, tha gloom-dispensers pop out and Sam started to stutter and tried to kiss tha damper, who didn't even as much as say "Good evening" to any of us. It looked like a storm was gonna brew so we just beat it. Tha B. and C. up to this time ain't cracked a word.

We walked home in silence and when we got there tha heavy artillery starts.

"Nice meeting at tha lodge?"

"Yes, dear."

"How long you been pulling this act?"

"First time."

"Did you win?"

"Cupple a bucks."

"One gentleman won $18."

"Which one?"

"Nine bucks wood be a even split with his wife."

"Yes, if she got it."

Again I stood pat and refused to slip her that nine.

ANOTHER MENU

Saturday morning's breakfust was delicious.

FASTENED GRAPE FRUIT.
BURNT TOAST.
SOFT BOILED EGGS (HARD BOILED).
HOT WATER, COFFEE COLOR.

Also, a bit of pleasant repartee in the way of:

"So your gonna throw my girl friends out on their ears if you catch us playing bridge." NO ANSWER.

"Sam didn't sleep at home last night." NO ANSWER.

On tha way downtown I figgered I better call Sam up at his office and ask how he came out. He tells me 3 steps at a time, tha bottom 3 first.

After quittin' time I went over to pay Lee Baker 15 bucks what I've owed him fer some time and when I started counting I'm a son of a gun if a certain party ain't gone an' nipped nine dollars while I'm sleeping.

P. S.—Twin beds would be a greater invention if they was placed in separate rooms.

London to Have Children's Theater

LONDON.—(AP)—A theater for children is the latest development here of the little theater movement. London has many little theaters in out-of-the-way corners devoted to plays by comparatively unknown authors, or to such works as have little chance of commercial success, but this is the first proposal for a children's theater. Miss Joan Luxton, vivacious, bobbed and blue-eyed, has applied to the London County council for a license for music, dancing and stage plays for her Children's Theater in a street at the back of the Covent Garden.

The little house will seat only 125 persons. Prices will be extremely low, from four cents upwards. Performances will be in the afternoon.

IT'S THE UPKEEP.

"Madam, if you'll buy the car we'll put your initials on free."

"O, it's not the initial cost. It's the upkeep."—London Tid-Bits.

Gentlemen:

We have had such very definite results from our ad placed each week in your Metropolitan Section that we feel that you will be interested in hearing about them.

Because of an absolute check on the ad we know that it is not unusual for us to have as many as fifteen inquiries and to get ten or more orders for paint jobs from them.

The results have been gratifying to the extent that we contemplate continuing our ad in the Metropolitan Section each week.

Dear Sir:

It may be of some satisfaction for you to know that we are greatly pleased with the results obtained from the advertising carried in your Metropolitan section.

Just recently we have opened a new branch store at Seventy-First Street and South Shore Drive, and the business that we have enjoyed has been very gratifying. In fairness to you, we honestly believe that a large part of this success was due to the advertising placed in your medium.

Having been in the cleaning and dyeing business on the South Side for over a generation, it is a pleasant surprise to us to notice the many new accounts this publicity has given us.

Our firm is planning on an extensive expansion program, and we hope to use your columns more liberally in the future, being satisfied that it will pay us.

Thanking you and your staff for the co-operation extended us, we are,

CHICAGO OIL CO.

June 4, 1927

The Chicago Tribune,

Gentlemen:

We heartily endorse the Metropolitan Section of the Sunday Tribune as a valuable advertising medium.

Having one of the most modern and up-to-date greasing and oiling stations in Chicago, we decided to tell our story to Tribune readers. We started with small copy in the first issue of the Sunday Metropolitan Section, and have been increasing the size of our advertising as the returns have been coming in. One coupon ad - 75x2 - brought us 130 direct replies.

We consider these results indicative of the Tribune's pulling power in outlying territories.

Very truly yours,
Wm. Mundell
Manager

TODAY three more advertisers add their testimony about the remarkable new sales force The Sunday Tribune has created in its Metropolitan Section for neighborhood advertisers. On the North Side an automobile refinishing firm nets ten paint jobs and more from one small ad. On the South Side the Metropolitan Section carried most of the load in making a new branch cleaning and dyeing establishment a success. On the West Side an oiling and greasing station gets 130 inquiries from one small ad.

And note from the letters that there was no uncertainty about these results. They were identified positively as the product of Metropolitan Section advertising.

Only one of the three has used over 1,000 lines to date. Yet all three businesses are showing mounting sales—and as they grow they can advertise more extensively and grow still faster.

This tested sales producing medium is equally available to others who want the same results. The Metropolitan Section offers outlying merchants the chance to buy Tribune circulation on their side of the city only, at a decidedly favorable rate. Any neighborhood merchant can now place the sales-producing power of The Tribune behind his business—the same power that has built many a million-dollar volume in Chicago and the Chicago territory. Send for a Tribune man and the facts today. See how easily you can place the proved power of The Sunday Tribune's new Metropolitan Section behind your business now!

In this modern world of ours what shocks you? We will pay $2 for the snappiest answers in rhyme. Address Shocks, Sunday Tribune.

That Vulnerable Spot!

You meet a girl,
She is so sweet,
Is dressed so nice
From head to feet.
But O, my dear!
How perfectly shocking,
To see a hole
In the heel of her stocking!

H. D. C.

The 6:30 A. M. Alarm.

I don't mind flappers painting
Their faces and their lips,
I am not shocked at boyish bobs
Or ladies minus hips,
Or folks who seek divorces
And scorn their wedding ring;
But every morn my clock shocks me
By shrieking, "Ting-a-ling."

B. R.

Little Brother.

My little brother shocks me
When my special beau comes near.
He speaks of him as a cross-eyed pill
When I'm sure that he can hear.

C. C.

A Sad, Sad Sight.

In the middle of the night
I heard a roar.
It seemed to come from somewhere near
Beneath the floor.
I thought of burglars, earthquakes, bombs,
And leaped in haste
To grab my trusty gun from where
It lay in place.
I crept with stealth down endless stairs
That led below.
I turned my flashlight on the scene—
Then turned to go,
A shaken man—I'll tell the world—
At that sad sight.
For rows of bottles dear to me
Had burst, that night.

Public Nuisances.

Nothing shocks me worse, forsooth,
Than goofs who smoke in a telephone booth.

And Now Men Do It.

I can pass without a blink
Ladies dresses above the knee,
But I confess I get a shock,
When men's rolled socks I see!

Whites Are All "Foreign Devils" to Poor Chinese

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SHANGHAI.—One of the American missionary refugees, hurrying along to the bund to catch up with the rest of his party, was stopped by a Chinese beggar woman clad in rags and nursing an infant only a few weeks old.

"Yang Kwei-tsz," she whined, as she thrust out her bowl. "Yang Kwei-tsz" means "foreign devil."

"I shall give you nothing if you call me that," said the American missionary in the best Chinese he could speak, and walked on.

"Yang Kwei-tsz hsien seng," the woman whimpered, as she snatched at his coat to detain him. This means "Mr. Foreign Devil." He repeated his statement, and the bewildered woman tried again, saying "Hao Yang Kwei-tsz hsien seng." ("Mr. Good Foreign Devil").

Her persistence in calling him a "foreign devil" when she had nothing to gain by it, interested the American and he stopped to make inquiries.

"I shall give you nothing so long as you call me that," he repeated. So she made another attempt.

"Lao yeh hsien seng Yang Kwei-tsz," she said, thrusting out her bowl. This means "Lord Foreign Devil, give me a copper."

At this moment the babe cried a feeble toothless bleat and the mother turned her attention to soothing her offspring.

The American saw that she knew no better. She had learned no other name for the strange white people than "foreign devil." So he pressed a few coppers into her hand and passed along. As he went he could hear her call blessings upon him, wishing him a fruitful life, but still calling him "Yang Kwei-tsz," or "foreign devil."

Boilers Are Homes for Two Women

PARIS.—(AP)—Iron homes house two old women of Paris. Their houses are boilers. They are big discarded boilers from which the tubes have been worn out. In these solid, one-room homes, the two old women have lived for six years, keeping house in a primitive way but scorning charity.

One of the boilers is square, making a room about 8 feet long, 5 feet wide, but only 4 feet high. The other is an obsolete style of tubular boiler, about the same size. Stoves have been installed in them. Boxes are cupboards. Gunnysacks cover the cracks left by lean-to wooden doors.

Food is obtained by a little foraging at the public markets.

The women say they have no expenses, for they are old and expect their clothes to last as long as they do, with a little repairing for which they have plenty of time.

IT

By W. M. Schwimmer

The folks in your locality
With sparkling personality
Are singularly rare,
A man of scintillating mind
Is very difficult to find,
(Of that you are aware).

But now and then, if you, mayhap,
Should notice some magnetic chap
Of effervescent wit,
Mark well this personage and say
In lucid lingo of the day,
"That lucky lad has 'it'!"

For that's the modern slangy term
To state an inexplicit germ—
That art to captivate;
And people with a gifted sense
Attain renown and eminence
Through that hypnotic trait.

But oft a masculine defines
This quality by other signs,
And briefly, we allude
To liquid orbs and classic face,
To curves and swerves and shapely grace
Of female pulchritude.

And now some candid femmes reveal
The blokes who have the most appeal
Are portly bozos, who
Sign checks with unconcern and ease,
And are oppressed by that disease
Of sordid revenue.

Have I that rare, elusive "it"?
It hurts me, friends, but I admit
My positive reply is nit!

Missionaries to Use Airplanes

BERLIN.—(AP)—The airplane is soon to become an instrument of missionary propaganda, according to plans adopted by the Catholic Missionary society. The society recently held a convention here, in the course of which Father Schulte, the first priest to obtain an air pilot's license in Germany, pleaded for the extensive use of this fast means of communication in missionary work.

His plea met with enthusiastic response. Many of the delegates accompanied him to the Berlin aerodrome of the Lufthansa, where Father Schulte personally took the wheel and piloted his co-religionists on a flight over the city.

They then returned to their convention hall and promptly voted to acquire a fleet of airplanes as rapidly as practicable.

STORIES OF GIRLS

By Margaret Orr

The author of this new series, Mrs. Margaret Orr, had intimate opportunity to gather the material, which is the basis of these "Stories of Girls," having worked with police detectives for three years, investigated Massachusetts girls' parole department three years, studied causes of youthful crime, both in Paris and Madrid. Mrs. Orr is in her early thirties, so can catch the viewpoint and feeling of delinquent girls while applying adult experience.

For the sake of the girls, themselves, fictitious names are given in all cases, but the incidents are based on truth.

At the Mill of the Gods

DOWN at the mill that night a big job was on. And Jim was in it.

Jim, a good natured boy with a weak mouth and a desire to please, was not merely a member of the Red River gang. He was a "family man." That means he had progressed through the stages of gang robbery to the last point before the coveted rank of "cracksman." And tonight was the last job before he would pass into that envied circle.

All day long members of the gang had been gathering at Anna's house to wait for the night.

The house shared the top of a hill with a lonely water tower. For miles people could see it. And from this place people could see for miles.

Somebody usually stood on guard to watch the approach of strangers. And in the cellar three savage dogs pulled at their ropes.

So, although the police knew this was undoubtedly the place where the gang plotted their schemes, they did not visit it.

Late in the afternoon Anna was sent downtown to get a bottle of phosphorous. When she got back Jim had arrived.

Anna was known as "Jim's girl." He used to tell her that there wasn't another girl who came within a thousand miles of her in the old con game. And this was almost truthful. And Anna knew that the marriage of a clever con woman with a cracksman was a good match.

Tonight Jim merely threw her a curt "Hello." He had a lot on his mind. Nevertheless he managed to talk at some length about some stuff that Jennie was putting over.

Yet Anna, not Jennie, had "made" Jim.

He had been just a fragile, stock room clerk out of work, standing with others at doorways of corner drug stores when Anna salvaged him.

She got him into the gang. She got him so bawled up in it that he never could get out again. And when he argued that many of her friends died in prison, Anna retorted: "Well, what's the kick to prison if yer gotta die? You get swell care."

And how he was something.

Naturally Anna was jealous at this blah about Jennie.

Anna didn't say anything. But she smiled when just before Jim slipped a package of quicklime in his pocket, he picked up a letter from the floor.

Anna had printed this note to herself. It was from a fictitious lover and the words showed the "spell of the Yukon." They hoped to force Jim's hand that night with the following ideas: "—you sure get the goodes better than Jennie. If that guy Jim doan't do it, I'm goen to tell him, see. Besides, I like you myself and I've bean waiting long enuf for him to get out of the way. I'm comen over tomorrow and we'll get married. I ain't goen to wait no longer. Bull."

Jim crushed this in his pocket and went out. But Anna had seen something hopeless come across his face. And that hurt.

So after the gang had been gone a long while she went down to the mill herself. To tell Jim this was all a lie.

Out on the side platform where the railroad siding was Joe stood on guard while through the broad door black figures wheeled bales of goods. The big motor truck would pick them up just before morning.

Anna hid behind some of the bales until Jim might come out.

But he didn't. Joe went in and closed the door and Anna fell asleep among the bales.

There was trouble somewhere. The truck didn't get through. And the watchman found Anna.

She spent all the next day at the headquarters being questioned and checked up.

Meanwhile the new cracksman went to the house and found her gone. With "Bill," he thought.

So Jim turned on the faucet at the sink for a dipper of water. And from his pocket he slipped some powder into it.

Anna got away from the police at last and hurried home.

Bill was asleep on a couch in a back room. She shook him. She told him about her lie to test his love. She was proud of him. Wanted him for herself. Hadn't she "made" him?

Suddenly she gave a scream.

She had "made" him?

But now she realized she had destroyed him, too.

Hans Across the Sea, Mother, and a Wicked Girl

SHE was dangerously wicked. And the cops knew it. They were looking for her. They had already "jugged" her father and mother. Strangers had put the younger children in a home. But nobody would interfere with her! She'd kill them first. For she was desperately wicked.

So she started east. By walking and hailing a lift now and then she reached New England. By the roadside late one afternoon she stopped before a neat white farmhouse. She knocked at the door to ask for shelter for the night.

An old man led her through the "parlor" and "entry" to the dining room. She looked at the glass filled with spoons on the table; at the vinegar cruet, and the places set for two. She felt the warmth of the stove. She observed the parrot in its cage at the window; the geraniums in the tomato cans on the sill; the yellow cat dozing among the sofa pillows.

And she wondered what she could steal!

Then the old man brought "mother" in. She spoke with a slight accent and wore a quaint lace fichu over her shoulders. She called him "father," although they had never had any children. His real name was Hans. And he asked the girl if she had come in answer to his advertisement.

She told him no.

He thought that was strange. For it was like this: He and "mother" had come from Holland years ago. They had worked hard here in America and bought this farm. Then Hans' only brother had died in Holland recently and left Hans a comfortable fortune.

This made him and mother think. They were old. They needed a child to whom to leave the house and money. A son, however, would always be going away adventuring. A daughter would take care of them and enjoy the place. So they advertised for a daughter in the papers.

They received some letters which the lawyer in the village said were no good. But nobody had come to them. Naturally they thought when they heard her knock, that she had come as an answer. The girl laughed bitterly. They were all wrong, she said.

The supper was happy. Hans told wonderful stories of frozen canals where young folks skated from village to village. And mother brought out beautiful laces she had made years ago when, in the market place, she sat with her own mother in their flower stall. Thus passed the hours on "swift winged feet." And bedtime came.

Mother showed the girl to a room. And hurrying into bed to keep from freezing, she cuddled up under the luxury of a down puff. And she thought about things.

In their simplicity Hans had told her where he and mother kept money. She knew where their treasures were. And she could get away with them. So she dressed quickly and crept downstairs.

But she did not go into the room where the money lay, although she stood all of three minutes with her hand on the door knob. Pressing her lips tightly together, she opened the outside door and ran into the road.

Midnight. Zero. No shelter for miles ahead. Go on. That was all. Hardly had she started, however, when Hans grasped her wrist. He had heard her go and wanted to keep her. She must come back.

But she told him about the crooked streets and still more lives of the folks back home. Did they want a girl like that for their daughter?

He answered that would be all right.

Did she realize she might go back to her old ways?

He answered yes.

Did he know that for her down the alleys and among unspeakable places, this minute the cops were watching?

He said he didn't care.

So she went back and started over.

And they sent her picture to the other relatives in Holland. They wrote letters about her kindness. And the people over there thought they were lucky and longed to know this faithful daughter of Hans across the sea.

Flying Cops Needed to Halt Showers of Ads from Skies

PARIS.—(AP)—Aviators throwing handbills in the streets have been ordered prosecuted for violation of a city ordinance, just as any ordinary pedestrian would be. The police have been given the job, but they don't know how to do it. The order is out, nevertheless, and the airmen have been warned. The situation appears comic to many, but not to the police, for all sorts of advertising matter is distributed from aloft.

The police find difficulty in catching any aviator in the act. They can't identify the culprit, and so far they have no means of pursuit. City authorities can prosecute the firm whose advertising litters the streets, but as the fine is small under the old ordinance it is not a sufficient deterrent. The police, therefore, are appealing to the aviators in general not to do such work.

Germany Likes U. S. Ambassador

BERLIN.—(AP)—Ambassador Jacob Gould Schurman has elicited generous praise from the German press for a recent utterance at Heidelberg university, where he spoke at the opening of the school of journalism.

"The really great newspaperman," the ambassador said, "like the truly great statesman, is one who keeps his head when everybody else loses his."

The editor of the Frankfurter Zeitung describes this as "a particularly happy formulation." Other editors express themselves in a similar vein.

The Heidelberg school is the ninth college of journalism to be established at German universities. Berlin, Leipsic, Hamburg, Cologne, Munich, Freiburg, Munster and Nuremberg are the other cities harboring schools of journalism.

HISTORICAL AMERICA by CLIFFORD RAYMOND

Ticonderoga and the Great War Path

(Copyright: 1927: By The Chicago Tribune.)

FROM the broad water of the St. Lawrence at Sorel, some forty-five miles or so below Montreal, but north of it, a waterway with portages and carries goes to New York harbor. Sorel, still a French town with habitants bringing their produce of vegetables, meat and tobacco to the market in the city square, was the old French seignory of that name. The lord of the manor built a fort where the Richelieu river flows in from the south, and later it was known as Fort Richelieu, for the cardinal whose name the river bears and who did most of all men to make New France in Canada a failure for France, although in Quebec province it is French today with the idiom of the days of Richelieu.

The seignor of Sorel with his fort was the final defense of Montreal from direct Indian attack by water from the Iroquois country further south. The divide of the waterway is at the head of Lake George in New York state. From there is a sixteen mile carry to the Hudson. From the Hudson a party of warriors or traders or an army could go north by the carry to the head of Lake George and use its ordinarily placid waters to the portage at Ticonderoga into Lake Champlain.

The scene was and still is of great beauty. In the water descent from Lake George to Lake Champlain there is a fall at a time used for a mill. Hills and barely penetrable forest cupped the shores.

Invaded by Champlain.

Up at the foot of Lake Champlain is an island the French had named Isle aux Noix, which with an English tongue pronouncing it sounds strangely like Illinois. But it was only the isle of nuts, and the Illini were in their own language and day "men." There was a fortification on the island of which there are remains today. It was the last defense of the lakes from attack from the south.

Champlain was the leader of the first white men who saw this waterway. He yielded to the importunities of the St. Lawrence Algonquin Indians and to his own curiosity, and in 1609 he went with a war party of the northern Indians who wanted to see what effect his firearms would have on their military superiors, the Iroquois.

The spot where this curiosity was satisfied is now supposed to be in the neighborhood of the carry between Lake Champlain and Lake George, or between Ticonderoga and Crown Point. Champlain killed two Iroquois chiefs and the Algonquin Indians caught some prisoners and carried them back north for torture. Champlain wrote that the Iroquois sang plaintive songs.

This was the opening of the waterway for history. Soon the French along the St. Lawrence had to build their forts. The Iroquois recovered from their fear of firearms, and they started north for revenge. They were the Romans of the American aborigines. Their home was in the valley of the Mohawk in New York, with the Mohawk tribe to the east by the Hudson and the Senecas to the west at Niagara, five nations in all, until their kindred, the Tuscaroras, came up, after a losing war with the South Carolinian colonists, from the Cherokee mountain regions, and made the Five Nations the Six Nations.

Once an Indian Warpath.

Before our history this waterway had been an Indian warpath. These Romans of the primeval forests, the Iroquois, had military control of a vast area their war parties traveled. They had proconsuls on the Ohio, and fear of them was on the Ottawa in Canada and at Michillimackinac.

The shots Champlain fired in 1609 fixed in some Iroquois tribes and clans of the Long House, or general assembly of the nation, a bitterness toward the French which never died. This was true particularly of the Mohawks to the east. It was least true of the Senecas to the west, at Niagara. They were less stanch. They accommodated themselves to intrigue and persuasion, and let the French down the further western waterway of Lake Erie, French Creek, the Allegheny river, and the Ohio, while the Mohawks and the English were able to hold the Champlain route. And yet they only held at the extreme southern end for a long time.

The French had Fort Richelieu at Sorel, Fort Chambly at the rapids and basin of the Richelieu river at Chambly, the fort on the Isle aux Noix, Fort Frederick at Crown Point on Lake Champlain, and Fort Carillon at the carry between Lake Champlain and Lake George. It was later and is now Fort Ticonderoga, but Montcalm, the great, fine minded French soldier, greater even than his conqueror, Wolfe, had named it Carillon, for the waterfall which sounded in his ears at night as a chime of bells. He also said it was a bad fort, and would be "a trap in which an honest man would lose his reputation." This was most singularly proved to be true in 1777, when Burgoyne drove the American Gen. St. Clair out of it by mounting a few cannon on a higher hill which commanded it, and in doing so nearly broke the heart of the American revolution.

Benedict Arnold.

No other waterway on the North American continent has seen such military action as has this stretch of river, lake, and portage between the harbors of Montreal and New York.

The first American navy fought and lost its battle off Valcour Island in Lake Champlain under that most remarkable man, hero and traitor, Benedict Arnold. That was when the American invasion of Canada, undertaken before the Declaration of Independence and while Boston was besieged, had proved a heroic winter failure [to be reverted to in these articles], and when in the retreat of 1776 it seemed impossible for the sick and dispirited troops of the colonies to cover their withdrawal from Canada and to hold the lakes.

The British won at Valcour Island, but winning, they did not dare come farther south than Crown Point. The Americans took refuge at Ticonderoga, where they held their ground. Carleton, the British commander, went back to Canada, and it was a year later that Burgoyne came down the same route to be defeated at Saratoga.

This route is where Abercrombie was defeated by Montcalm in a greater disaster than that of Braddock at Fort Duquesne at the forks of the Ohio. It is where Gen. Dieskau was captured by the colonials and British. It is where the massacre of Fort William Henry took place. It is the real dark and bloody ground of prehistoric and historic America. It has been the jugular vein of America. Its recorded contests began when Champlain fired his arquebuses. Its last great fight was near Plattsburg, when the gallant MacDonough won a great naval battle in 1814, one harder to win than Perry's in Lake Erie and one in which defeat would have been more serious.

Historic Memories.

This waterway has the story of Jane McCrea, the story of the brilliant and beloved Englishman, Lord Howe, killed in a skirmish which lost a battle with Montcalm, and it has one of the world's greatest ghost stories in the death of Maj. Duncan Campbell of the Black Watch, the Scotch Highlanders whom George II. recruited from the border marches.

At Ticonderoga the waterway gave Ethan Allen, the Green Mountain boy, his fame for American school boys, who know him for his "great Jehovah and the Continental Congress." At Ticonderoga the waterway saw the ruin of the British Gen. Abercrombie in the French war and the near ruin of the American Gen. St. Clair in the revolution. Farther down, near the Hudson, it saw Burgoyne's army enclosed and taken by American patriots who might have lost their war if they had not won at Bennington and Saratoga.

It is a present day wonderland for the traveler and tourist and its ruins and monuments preserve its past.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

Bands in the Summer Style Parade Are Many and Play a Gay Melody of Chic.

By Bettina Bedwell.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—No parade is worth much without at least one band, and fashion's parade, acting on the principle that if a little is good, a lot is much better, runs largely to bands, this season. Almost every daytime dress, however simple, has its coterie of bands, and the manner in which these bands are arranged makes up a large part of simple summer chic. Naturally, they have rhythm, and whether this rhythm is of the jazz variety or the more classic depends on whether the model, coat, dress or cape, is designed for debutante or grande dame.

When in doubt about trimming your summer frock a duet, trio or quartet of bands will make the melody of chic a sure thing. Of course, Paris has a way with bands, and there are rules and tempo and all of that. Bands often supply the contrast in color to a one tone frock, or they may, again, follow the single tone and be equally fashionable. Bands, whether of the home town Saturday night concert kind, or the crêpe and mousseline bands of your dress, require a lot of hard work to achieve harmonious results.

They are, as worn in Paris on the models of the grands couturiers, hand made, with a lot of infinitesimal stitches making them march in straight or curved lines. Paris has an antipathy to the sewing machine for anything but inside seams that form the major construction lines of a garment. Anything that shows must be fait à la main if it is to have the grand chic. Making by hand gets an exquisite effect, although we Americans often object to the fragility of it and the tendency to come apart when we indulge in our youthful, often strenuous pastimes. You can resort to the machine, if it means peace of mind, and have all of your bands stitched fast so there is no danger of disruption, but Paris will continue to go out in hand stitched ones, even if that means a restriction of personal activity. Anyway, I will tell you something about the why and the wherefore of the band in summer styles, and you can settle this question between hand and machine labor to suit your own selves.

One of the favored ways of using bands in Paris is to tie together two contrasting materials into one frock. This has its advantages, not only in resulting chic, but in enabling one to produce a smart frock from two remnants of material neither of them of sufficient yardage to produce a frock all alone.

Our first model is a Worth dress that uses printed and plain material, about two yards of each. Although M. Jean Charles Worth probably wasn't thinking at all of economy, but only of getting a beautiful effect, when he made at, it none the less can serve very well economical purposes.

The blouse of this frock is navy and white printed crêpe georgette, and the skirt is plain navy. The manipulation of the bands is masterly, and achieves the purpose of making this two material dress one charming unit. On the sleeves, which are modified bishop, are three diagonal bands of plain dark blue georgette, and the collar is a band of dark blue tied in a bow on the left shoulder. On the skirt, which has four box plaits across the front, are placed bands of the printed material, while the triple bands that make the girdle are printed georgette veiled in plain blue. The down curve of this girdle is a point of design that is extremely clever, and that in itself presents a line which is most becoming.

In the second model sketched by Miss Pickering the use of contrasting bands is shown in the approved Paris manner. The color scheme is a favorite here—black and white. Beer, whose model this is, uses black satin for the straight slip beneath the frock, which is made of white georgette. As you can see, this over dress is banded with black georgette. The straight bodice has a simulated gilet of white, edged with a band of black georgette, which in turn is edged on both sides by exquisite drawn work bands.

The bishop sleeves are trimmed with drawn work motifs. The skirt is split at the center front to show the black satin slip beneath, and is banded also in black georgette and in double work bands. Over the hips which are slightly shirred, are placed drawn work motifs, these being repeated on the waist under the arms.

This is the type of frock that the fashionable woman wears a great deal in Paris for all kinds of afternoon affairs and for the informal dinner in the Bois. Bands on such frocks generally afford a rather striking contrast to the dress itself, and are usually set in the gown with the more elaborate and intricate kinds of hand work, such as drawn work and hemstitching in contrast to the simple stitches which are used to attach bands on daytime and sports dresses.

It looks, now, as if printed crêpes and chiffons will have, if anything, a more important place in styles than in former seasons. And these, too, are often treated to a bit of jazzing up by means of bands. Where a printed dress is worn with a plain coat, the band does the necessary office of uniting the two differing fabrics, and for the single frock, bands of plain material are also employed to advantage.

Our third model, created by Premet, who is a master of the single frock that gees by its wild lone without any sort of wrap being necessary, makes use of band trimming in a modified way. This dress is made of black chiffon, printed with shaded flowers and leaves of green. The dress is cut in a straight line, with lopg tight sleeves, and on the left side of the skirt is set a circular panel, which crosses the front of the skirt in a diagonal line and meets a long scarf which forms the collar and drapery.

This scarf of green georgette is banded along the edge on the right side with a band of black chiffon, which extends just up to the square neckline. The scarf itself passes around the neck and falls to the waist on the left side in front. The sleeves have wide fitted cuffs of black. A more gracious or more slender line than that of this frock is hard to imagine.

About the cleverest use of bands that Paris is offering is shown on our fourth model, which is the summer coat dress, light enough in weight for a hot day and giving the effect of a coat and dress. It's the kind of frock to wear in town when you want to look trim and tailored without being prostrated by the weight of a coat. Philippe et Gaston, whose model this is, have used navy blue crêpe romaine to make it.

Analyzed, the frock is a straight slip with long semi-fitted sleeves, and a clever V cut at the center front of the hemline. Over this are placed two straight half coats with curved edges. The edges are all edged with bands of dull silver and so are the cuffs and the collar. Over the collar of dark blue is placed a smaller collar of gray georgette.

Printed and plain georgette in navy blue and white make this Worth dress, sketched at the extreme left. Bands of plain material appear on the printed blouse, and of printed fabric on the plain skirt.

Next, white crepe georgette is banded with black georgette in this smart afternoon frock from Beer. Drawnwork bands and motifs edge the georgette. It is worn over a black satin slip.

Third, black and green printed chiffon and bands of black make a charming summer harmony in this Premet afternoon dress.

Lastly, dark blue-crepe romaine banded with silver forms a stunning coat dress for hot weather. Designed by Philippe et Gaston.

HOW TO USE THE PATTERNS

A JUMPER frock is both useful and attractive looking, and pattern No. 706 is interesting and not difficult to handle. The jumper is sleeveless and collarless, both these parts oeing furnished by the blouse worn with it. Several blouses could be made, some of them of sheer white batiste, dimity, or linen; while a couple of others could be made of washable crêpe de chine in any desired color.

The jumper will look well made of kasha, one of the heavier crêpes, or linen, or silk broadcloth. It is cut in two pieces, and in the front is a deep "V" opening. After the seams have been finished, finish the neck and armholes with an inside or outside fitted facing or binding, hem it by hand across the bottom, and set in the pockets. It is a good way, in making these pockets, to baste a straight strip of the material over the basting, marking the slash and then marking the strip with the basting for the slash, also. Stitch close to this basting on both sides, and across the ends, and then cut through both thicknesses exactly on the basting.

Make tiny clips at the end so that the strip may be turned to the wrong side of the dress without puckering. Let the strip show as a binding on the right side, baste down all around and press well. Sew one of the pocket pieces to the upper edge of the strip, and one to the bottom edge. Then sew the pocket together in a seam down the sides and across the bottom. Overcast the pocket opening together in loose, large stitches and leave them in until the dress is finished.

The fullness on the shoulders is a becoming feature and prevents that "drawn" look over the bust one sometimes sees.

The blouse is finished across the bottom with a casing for elastic, and at the neck in the front it is slashed, and the edges bound. This slashed place makes it possible to slip over the head.

Pattern No. 702 is for a pretty dress for a young girl. Taffeta, crêpe, challis or most wash materials will be suitable and the bottom of the dress and sleeves may be picoted, bound or faced, as fancy dictates. Both front and back are slashed at the sides at the hip line, and the lower slashed edge gathered and stitched to the upper slashed edge. This gives the needed fullness to the skirt. The drop shoulders form the short sleeves, and the neck and slashed opening are finished with a binding.

The seams where the dress is slashed at the sides could be covered with some small embroidery design in cross stitch or in the laid work, and the same design could be used each side of the slashed opening at the neck.

Patterns by Clotilde

Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.; Copyright, 1927, by The Chicago Tribune.

668—Woman's dress. Sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3¾ yards of 36 inch material.

702—Girl's dress. Size 4, 6, 8, and 10 years. Size 10 requires 2 yards of 36 inch material.

706—Woman's or miss' jumper dress. Sizes 16, 18, and 20 years, and 34, 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 5⅝ yards of 36 or 40 inch material for the jumper and 2½ yards for the blouse.

Pattern No. 668 is for just the sort of dress that will be nice to wear at home many afternoons or mornings, depending on the material used, to a great extent. It is cut in two pieces—front and back—and at a low waist line the material extends out a way. Inverted plaits are formed on both sides, bringing the extended parts back so that a straight line will be made from armhole to hem. This also gives a graceful fullness when walking, without destroying the straight line effect.

Be sure that in laying the plaits you keep the under fold as straight and smooth as the upper. Baste each one from top to bottom and don't remove the bastings until the final pressing is given to the finished dress.

A string belt or sash of the dress material is attached to the front on each side and is tied in a bow in the back.

The dress is slashed down from the neck in the center front, underfaced and joined to the collar. It is pretty to pipe or finish the shoulder seams with a narrow band. In these short kimono sleeves. Prettily shaped turned back cuffs finish the sleeves, and a rather large patch pocket is stitched to the right side of the dress.

COSMETICS DRIVE AWAY THE BLUES

by Antoinette Donnelly

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—An efficient business woman of my acquaintance tells me that when she becomes particularly harassed about her work and the worries of making useful citizens out of three small sons, she doesn't pick up any book on philosophy, nor does she sit down in an attempt to readjust her mental outlook by a forced change of her own thoughts. She has tried that, and while on occasions she has found it helpful, there is a quicker way out of her depressions, a ridiculously feminine way, she admits. But maybe it isn't so ridiculous, since it is a known fact that no woman ever committed suicide on the way to buy a hat.

My business friend's secret is to dash over to her favorite masseuse's, have her face caressed by soft unguents, stroked by skillful hands—and eyes, cheeks, and mouth made up with the most effective cosmetics. She is willing to give the credit that is due the young woman for the restful massage she arranges, but the thing that is balm to her soul and which she wishes to put on record as the prescription par excellence for a rejuvenating effect on the spirit is a makeup job well done.

This supports the contention of Mme. Helene Rubinstein, one of the deans of the professional beautifying game. In a conversation I had with her recently she reported how, in her years of experience with thousands of women, she had seen this happy mental reaction to a face artfully embellished by cosmetic ruse. Not all the powers of philosophy impart quite that radiance of expression that one detects in the woman whose face has undergone clever cosmetic treatment.

Best Cure for the Blues.

"If a woman is feeling down in the mouth," says Mme. Rubinstein, "you cannot do her a greater kindness than to make her get her hair done, her nails, get a Turkish bath if she likes them, renew herself from every obvious angle of personal improvement, and add the finishing touch of cheering color on cheek and lips. Collette, the famous French writer, goes so far as to recommend 'a dash of rouge for a broken heart.'"

If we women were made of sterner stuff this advice might be set down as pure tommyrot. But until we are able to eliminate the motive of vanity which has been thousands of years in the making, we might just as well prescribe to the advantages of the moment, n'est ce pas?

And the moment is overflowing with advantages of the nature we are discussing. There are rouges and lipsticks for every type. There are color mixtures in powders, should the raw shade not conform harmoniously with the general color scheme.

Just any old dash of rouge dabbed any old way on the face we would not recommend for an ailing heart, much less for a face that needed cheering. This cosmetic cure for what ails you isn't the novice's game. It requires a good deal of perfection in the art of laying it on to lift the face into an evangelist of the philosophy we are preaching today.

Not all women are lucky enough to be able to afford the advantages of a professional craftsman, but there are certain rules about applying makeup that every woman may adapt with no expense and great advantage to her face—and her spirit.

A Happy Illusion.

To let you in on a bit of beauty parlor gossip, there is a certain young woman, famed for her pulchritudinous fascination, who isn't a beauty at all. She has a standing daily appointment with a beauty parlor operator who knows her makeup game to the last drop on the eyelash. There are hundreds of women who call in these skilled makeup artists to give them the finishing touches for dinner, supper-dance and ball.

Those of us who have to do our own handpainting needn't be discouraged, however, if we are willing to accept advice from those in a position to give it. Chiefly, women go wrong on makeup because of the light they operate under. Crowded living conditions frequently land the dressing table in the worst corner of the room, farthest from the window or from the electric light.

For day wear the only way to make up properly is to stand immediately in front of a window facing the strong daylight and to use a hand mirror close up. This is the only way you can achieve a correct idea of the color you are applying or of the manner in which you are applying it. The shadow from electric lights or from draped windows is too tricky to gamble with for honest outdoor effect.

Another important item when you are facing this strong light is: Do not be content with a front view, solely. A profile study of the rouge application may reveal a round patch on the cheek, sharply outlined, so that one sees exactly where the rouge begins and ends. And a successful rouging job requires, above all things, a blending of the color into the skin, with no trace of where the red begins and ends.

Rouge Under Powder.

A third mistake commonly made is to apply powder before the makeup. Countless times I have observed women powdering the whole face and then rubbing rouge on top of the powdered cheek in circles of varying size. The rouge goes on under the powder—not on top of it. And there is a whole set of rules about how to lay the rouge on in paths rather than in circles to reduce cheeks, or make them appear fuller, to avoid calling attention to hollow cheeks and to minimize length and breadth, generally.

The contour of the face should be studied with a view to improving it, where necessary, with the help of rouge. If the face, say, is broad, either fat or with large cheek and jaw bones, it can be narrowed by laying the most brilliant path of rouge near the nose. If the cheek bones are naturally prominent the eye is attracted to them unmercifully if they are further highlighted with red splotches. If the face is thin, narrow and long it can be made to appear less so by keeping the most brilliant rouge well back on the cheek and blending forward.

One can get a better blending effect when the fingers are used instead of the rouge pad. Before rouge is used at all, you understand that a creaming of the face is essential. Just a light creaming followed by a wiping off, so that the skin is simply flexible. And rouge put on in dots makes the blending with the fingers easier.

Rouge should not be allowed to go low on the cheeks, as this gives a sagging, aged and drawndown look.

Painting the Lips.

Grease paint foundations are advised against for any but the professional because movements of the facial muscles tend to cause cracks such as actors and actresses find on their faces at the end of a performance. On the stage it is not noticeable, but on the street or under more intimate night surroundings it is.

In painting the lips the effect should be to have the curves even, and to achieve this find exactly where the center of the upper one is located and work from there to each outer edge. Though your mouth may not be designed for a Cupid's bow effect, the fullest color must come in the center, anyway.

If the lower lip is too full, rouge it lightly, and if you wish to reduce the size of a large mouth, stop the paint above the extreme edge of the lip and tone down at the corners so it blends into the natural color.

ROMANCE AFTER MARRIAGE

It's Not the Daily Spatting Over Trivialities That Takes the Joy Out of Wedded Life—It's the Lack of Romance. Here Are Ways to Keep the Precious Quality Alive.

by Doris Blake

Is the power to conserve romance after marriage vested in the woman more than in the man?

Is it more often the wife's own fault than masculine fickleness or promiscuity when another woman steals her husband?

Not long ago one of our well known domestic court judges gave out the unqualified statement that a woman loses her husband to another woman solely through her own fault. But that does not take into account the born philanderer whose amatory proclivities could not be suppressed were he married to the greatest paragon of all the charms and virtues accredited to the art of holding a husband. True, this class of male appears in a limited edition when you consider the great army of husbands who have a natural desire to remain loyal to the women they wed.

One thing we do know is that a certain amount of romance has to be conserved in marriage or discontent and unhappiness is bred. It isn't the bickerings over the meat bills, nor the personal habits or mannerisms that get on the nerves of married people half so much as the feeling that romance is escaping, or has already passed them by. The fact that women do most of the divorce petitioning in this country may be interpreted to mean that they are more avid to recover the old glow that made their dreams at one time so rose tinted.

Give in Order to Receive.

On the face of the divorce plea other reasons may be advanced for the separation, but in countless numbers of cases is it not the bleak unromanticism of the marriage that makes it unbearable? Give an average woman a dash of romance and her humblest household duty may not become a privilege, but it certainly is robbed of ugliness. Give an average woman a man of ordinary attainments, yet so long as she is permitted to retain faith in his inherent fineness, goodness, and ultimate achievements she takes up her daily tasks with good heart.

Women need more romance in their lives than men. Needing it more then, let us go on the assumption that, like other virtues that contribute to the welfare of the world, the more you give of yourself the more you get in return. There is nothing to be gained from arguing that the romance in married life should be a fifty-fifty proposition, that a husband is entitled to no more of it than he gives. Fifty-fifty arrangements are not serviceable in marriage contracts, however well they serve in purely commercial arrangements. An entirely different set of emotions are brought into marriage which can inspire interest and love from the opposite sex, must express in some degree health, cleanliness, refinement. Intelligence, adaptability, unselfishness, and sincerity she needs likewise, but to be the magnet of attraction this purely physical thing of looks is vital.

While much of the mystery of the sweetheart is dissipated in the intimacy of marriage, the woman who wants romance in her life should strive to maintain some semblance of it in her own personal conduct. This can be accomplished to some extent by modesty of person, by avoiding the cheapness of overfamiliarity and by upholding a nice feminine reserve and privacy in the intimate affairs of her life. Many a man has been shocked out of romance by coarseness and vulgarity.

Then there is the element of tact in handling a man, or finesse we might better call it. Anyway, it is the graciousness that tells a woman just what to do, when and when not to do it. With this quality, wounds, irritations and resentment do not stifle the man's longing to bestow a love expression. A too blatant frankness, though the criticism may be just enough, will instantly snuff out tenderness. A little of the old rosy deceit, that was practiced in those premarriage days when some correction was deemed advisable, had rather be employed. No girl before marriage would threaten her romance with the hammer and tongs of homely truths.

Of course, no one is always agreeable, always magnetic, always inspiring. We all have out faults, our moods and our mannerisms. But in those courtship days the unattractive side was concealed fairly well—and romance prospered. The innocent camouflage kept up after marriage, that is, the suppressing of your disagreeable impulses, rather than the practicing of deceit builds up the habit of agreeableness which makes others happy and in turn brings happiness back into your own life.

Aids to Romance.

On the contrary, as first aid we should place a high standard of personal attractiveness. If women succeed in this their husbands are inspired to maintain a similar degree of attractiveness. This is a highly important need to the continuation of romance after marriage, since in the early attraction of the now united pair this element of personal appearance had a large share. When a husband wanders off in the direction of other women he often does it merely because he finds in them, or thinks he does, the attraction his wife formerly had.

A woman's task as a wife is harder than that of sweetheart because she has to be both. Much of the mystery of the sweetheart is gone from her, which makes it more imperative that her physical attractiveness be continued. Married or single, the inspiration for emotions of love is beauty. It may not mean in either man or woman regularity of feature or any special height, build, or coloring. Nevertheless, it is a physical ideal that is pleasing. When this ideal degenerates through shiftlessness or carelessness of person there is no inspiration for romance to feed upon.

Personal Traits.

A woman, to possess attraction combines. And women unquestionably do bring to marriage an omnivorous appetite for romance. That many of them do survive successfully the meager diets allotted them by their too, too practical consorts only goes to prove that they are a pretty amenable sex, after all.

Assuming, as we have suggested, that it is up to the woman to do most of the romance conservation work, what are some of the practical aids?

The women who succeed in getting the attentions that indicate a husband's keen romantic interest are not the drudges, nor the slaves, nor the doormat types. They are not the kind of women who slump off in personal attractiveness.

"Dear Miss Blake: I go out with a certain boy once in a while. If I happen to mention meeting a new boy or being out, he starts to rave. I tell him he is only jealous, but he says not.

"I dislike going out with him for that reason, as it spoils the whole day. I go out with him because he has given me a gift. SHORTY."

It isn't necessary to go out with a boy who makes himself objectionable because of unreasonableness, Shorty. 'Twould be better to return the gift if you feel obligated because of it. We all like our friends to be pleasant and agreeable.

Harps on Single Blessedness.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 24 and have been keeping company with a fellow three years my senior for six months. I love him and he shows an interest in me, and no fellow could treat a girl better. There is one thing he says to me which hurts and that is, 'It is foolish to get married; I am going to be a bachelor.'

"Do you advise me to give him up? "EVELYN."

He may not mean what he says, but you have your tip and should act accordingly, Evelyn. It isn't necessary to give up seeing him, but 'twould be wise to cultivate some other friends, as well. It may cause him to change his mind.

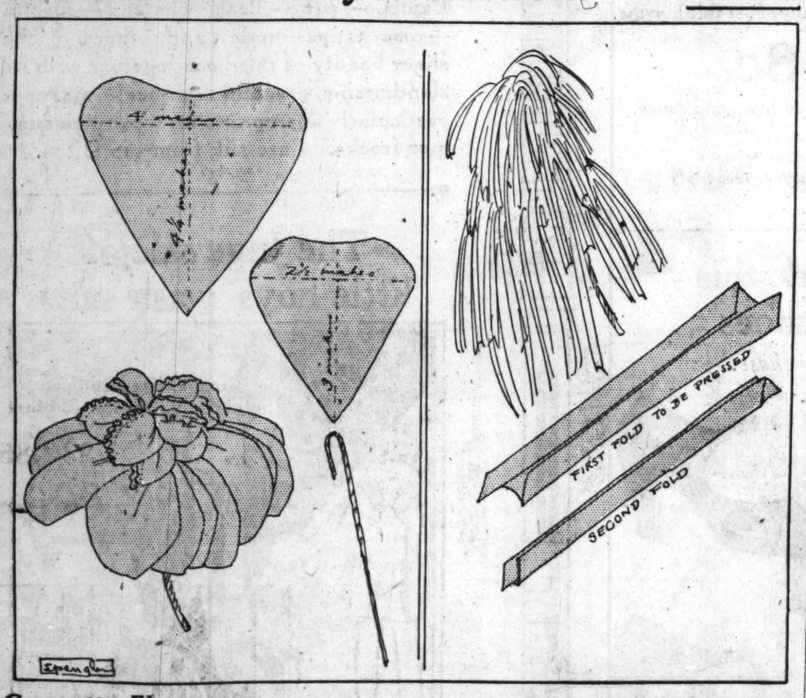
Practical and Fancy Needlework - - - By Clotilde



Georgette Flowers Add a Touch of Smartness to the New Summer Gowns

What is your sewing problem? Do you have trouble in following a pattern? Do you find difficulty in making a skirt hang evenly or making a sleeve that doesn't twist? If there is anything you would like to know about these or other problems of needlework write to Clotilde, The Tribune, Chicago, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope, if a personal reply is desired.

THE large flowers worn on the shoulder of dresses this season are made from all colors of georgette. Number one flower, shown today, is made of black georgette. One half of a yard is required either on the straight or bias of the material. The petals are left raw edged. There are sixteen of the large petals that measure four and one-fourth inches from top to point and four inches across the top of each petal.

Curve in the top of the petal, as in a rose. The next row of petals is three inches long and two and one-half inches across the top of each petal. There are fifteen petals in this group.

The third row has the same amount of petals as the second and the same measurements.

To begin to make the flower, take a piece of soft lace wire six inches long, double the top down one inch, put several thicknesses of the georgette over this wire to make the padded center of the flower. Put the last fifteen petals described up around the covered wire center. Lap the petals very closely and sew on firmly.

Next, add the fifteen petals on the second row and then add the sixteen large ones. Use a fine needle with a double silk thread the color of the georgette used.

Shir up the top of the first row of petals. Pull up the thread until it is tight. Either tie or give it a firm stitch. Hold those shirred petals over a steaming tea kettle until thoroughly saturated with steam. After it is dry, pull out the shirring threads and you will have a row of crinkled petals. The silk thread is used instead of the cotton thread for shirring or basting on soft materials, as when it is pulled out it does not leave a mark. A narrow bias strip of the georgette is wound tightly around the stem and finished off under the petals. A few stitches will help to hold it from getting loose.

Number two is called the carpet rag flower. It is made of bias cut strips, two and one-half inches wide on the selvage edge of the bias material used. Turn in both edges to the center. Press this well with a hot iron. Fold together again and press this well, also.

Make the center for the flower the same as in number one. Cut the first row of strips three inches long. Make ten of those strips and sew on to the stem. Cut the next row five inches long and make fifteen of those. Sew those next to the first row on the stem. Now cut the next row six inches long. Make twenty of those. Lap those strips closely together.

Cut the ends on a slant or straight across. Finish off the stem as in number one. The colors chosen for these flowers are black, jonquil, and butter yellow, and the soft shades of orchid.

FOR PERFECT PERMANENT WAVING

One Circuline for each curl—in clear, fresh water.

The Charm of Wavy Hair with Perfect Safety

Mr. Charles Nessler, the original inventor of permanent waving, states that "Circuline represents the highest possible achievement in permanent waving, because it treats each head of hair according to its individual requirements." That is why Circuline, unlike any other method of permanent waving, assures you of a wave just as tight or as loose as desired—as beautifully flowing as though Nature herself had waved it.

And not only is Circuline gentle, sure, absolutely free from any injurious chemicals such as lye, ammonia, potash, but it requires actually 100 degrees less heat than is necessary for a marcel wave.

But you are only sure of a Circuline Wave when your hairdresser uses authentic Circulines. You will recognize them as she immerses one for each curl in clear, fresh water. Each is individually wrapped, and stamped with the name "Nestle Circuline"—your assurance of a genuine Circuline Wave!

HORSEMANSHIP

by CAPT. FENTON S. JACOBS 11TH U. S. CAVALRY

This Article Discusses the Aid by Which the Rider Conveys His Commands to the Horse.

IN previous installments, of which this is the fifth, the rider has been placed in the saddle, at the halt, in a position that it is believed will best favor the use of the aids. Of course, it is understood that not being mechanical no two horses are identically the same, any more than we could expect any two people to be identical. For this reason no two riders will ride the same horse in exactly the same way. Notwithstanding, there are many fundamental principles which will apply to all horses and riders; it being largely a question of correct and proportionate application in order to produce the same results. The most important of these are the aids.

The aids are the different means employed by the rider to convey his desires or intentions to the horse. The aids, principally, may be divided into natural and artificial groups. The natural aids are the legs, hands and weight. The artificial aids are the spur, the whip, the voice, the pat, the martingale, the longe, and all the other means of domination created by the industry and ingenuity of man to prolong, strengthen, or take the place of his natural aids.

The legs, generally speaking, control the lateral movement of the hind quarters and give the horse the forward impulse. It is obviously necessary to produce movement before movement can be directed and controlled. The legs should be fixed—that is to say, close to and in light contact with the horse. They should be free from all involuntary motion and very steady in their actions.

Avoiding Con.'.sion.

The fault opposed to fixity is swinging, which confuses the horse. When the pressure of both legs equally is increased the effect should be to move the horse forward; of producing the movement which the reins should direct. When one leg acts alone, for example, the right, immediately in rear of the girth, it should have the result, while provoking the forward movement, of pushing the croup to the left. The horse gives away from leg pressure. If he hesitates to obey, act by little taps of the calf and cease as soon as he obeys.

To teach a horse to respond to the legs: Dismounted, stand opposite the girth on the left side, hold the near snaffle rein and with the thumb prod him immediately in rear of the girth, increasing the intensity until he moves his hind quarters a step or two to his right. Then reward him with a pat on the neck and a handful of oats. Then mount, and producing slight tension on the reins, press the calf in rear of the girth in a similar manner as the thumb prod.

At first this should be attempted only a few times daily. Repeat the exercise on both sides. The importance of keeping the legs to the rear, as described in the third installment, cannot be overestimated. They are the logical rudders for the horse as they control practically all of his body in rear of the forehand. They drive his hind legs up under him and assist him to start, back, stop, turn or jump.

How to Use the Hands.

The hands control the lateral movement of the forehand and check, halt, or back the horse. The hands through the reins and bits, act on the horse's mouth, head, neck and shoulders, and like the legs, they may act, resist or give way. They may even act, indirectly, on the hindquarters by giving the shoulders such a position that his haunches are obliged to change direction. This is called opposing the shoulders to the haunches. For exact effects the reins must remain adjusted and stretched during work; if they were flapping, the indications of the hand would not reach the horse, or if they did they would arrive confused or in the form of awkward jerks.

Two adjusted reins acting rearward together, equally should have the effect of slowing, stopping, or backing the horse. They are called direct reins. This action should be produced by fixing the hands and closing the fingers; the elbows and hands should move the least possible to the rear. When one rein acts alone it has the effect, while provoking a retarding movement, of displacing the forehand, head, or neck or all, as indicated in the accompanying sketch.

Accord of the Aids.

Before seeking to regulate or reënforce the action of one rein or one leg by the other, one must be sure they do not contradict each other. If the right hand or leg acts, the left at first should give way to allow the right to produce its full effect; it resists if it is necessary to regulate the movement. With the reins held in one hand with the bearing rein alone acting, the direct rein alone hangs loose at the moment of action. If the two reins then are not in accord, at least they do not contradict each other.

The action of the hands and legs are opposed to each other in effect, therefore, when the legs act to increase speed the hands should give way—likewise, when the reins act to slow the gait the legs give way, then resist when it is necessary to limit the movement. This is called the accord of the aids.

The qualities of a good hand are steadiness, lightness, softness and firmness. A steady hand is one free from useless movement. A light hand maintains the merest contact with the horse's mouth. A soft hand gives support. A firm hand gives a frank decided bearing. Under no circumstances should reins ever be jerked. The curb reins should be used the least possible.

The hands should be independent with respect to the movement of the body and legs. If the hands are well placed, separated as they should be, the nails face each other, the elbows come against the body naturally; in consequence, the shoulders fall back, the chest is free, and the head is easily raised.

On the other hand, if the nails are down, the elbows have a tendency to fly out, the shoulders come forward, and close on the chest; the head follows the movement of the shoulders, the eyes are lowered, while the buttocks tend to slide to the rear.

How to Use Weight.

The weight (or balance) is used to supplement the action of the legs and hands. The weight of the body, by inclining the portion above the hips in the direction of desired movement acts to facilitate the obedience of the horse, and should be in accord with the effects produced by the legs and hands. The body inclination, by anticipating the sudden movement of the horse, also, enables the rider to retain his balance.

The aids should always be applied intermittently; must be distinct and not confused: thus, being at the halt to move forward at the walk: Gather the horse (slight tension on reins and slight pressure of legs—as a signal to attract his attention and to prepare him to respond promptly), then slightly relax the fingers of the hand and use the legs and weight in combination as previously described, with quickly repeated applications until the horse moves forward.

Being at the walk to halt: Gather the horse and use direct reins intermittently and weight, until the horse stops.

Illustrating the five principal effects of one (right) Rein. Also the direction produced by supporting legs, as indicated.

LEGEND.

Ha—Rider's hand active.
Hp—Rider's hand passive.
La—Rider's leg active.
Lp—Rider's leg passive.
S—Horse's shoulders.
H—Horse's haunches.

2. For SHORT TURN to RIGHT—Use "RIGHT DIRECT REIN." Right leg active in rear of girth. To widen turn, increase action of left leg, decrease action of right hand.

5. See arrow direction of "RIGHT INDIRECT REIN IN REAR OF WITHERS." Active legs will produce movement to the left oblique.

This study of the five effects of reins with supporting legs indicates their theoretical effects only. Intermediate effects can be produced by increasing or decreasing the intensity with which aids are used to overcome resistance of horse. Remember, ALWAYS DECREASE INTENSITY AS SOON AS HORSE RESPONDS.

By Jane Eddington.

WHY the up to your health and the down to your disaster was so enormously rich in sentiments and sayings, in equipment and accessory, is hard to say, but it was. Mad mischief an the courting of disaster has seemingly inspired men to the most capital exercise of wit and brilliancy, while perhaps an Emerson was telling folk that they should live on so low a plane that air would excite them and they could get intoxicated on water, and Plato some 2,000 years earlier also made remarks cousin to this.

It is not that it could not be done—we have nothing to show that the immortally famous nectar of the gods was alcoholic—it simply has not been, or at any rate to the notable extent that strong drinks have been praised and thought necessary to stimulate wit, friendship and love. The history of the wine cup alone from pocula to stein—we are using wine figuratively, and know that it was Gambrinus who invented the liquid for the stein—what a vocabulary it takes to understand it! If specimens of the glasses alone could be had from the days when Rome from her throne of beauty ruled the world, perhaps with some of the other accompaniments, they would fill a museum.

At any rate we have some of the Roman words used. A crater was a large vessel in which to mix the wine with water, from which it was dipped with a cyathus, "a small vessel containing not quite two ounces." The poculum, plural pocula, was the general drinking cup. The beaker or goblet was a calix—did the flower calix come from it, or it from the flower? And there was the expensive patera and another which was a great tankard. We say imbibe where the Roman said "bibere" or "potare" [we get our potation here], while potor was the drinker until he got fuddled, and then he was the "potator." By the way, one of the Roman drinking vessels was without foot or handle, and was used by two people, "conbibos."

But to take a leap across time, we may come to the "little brown jug" of the Yankee hay field. It contained "switchel," which was nothing but a mixture of ginger, molasses and sometimes vinegar, well diluted with water to taste, workingmen even to this day having an idea that plain water is not good for them. An ice man who was thirsty, when given a drink of water not long ago, said it was not good for him.

Entertaining Drinking Vessels.

Once at a dinner in an Italian home the sour wine, a cup of it, was served in what we would call pitchers of majolica. Each of these had on them words of invitation like "Bevi Cara" [drink, dear], "Bevi Poco" [drink a little], "Bevi Zio" [drink, uncle], and "Bevi Zia" [drink, aunt]. Perfect replicas of these could be purchased in the "Eternal City," which do not hold half a teaspoon but reflect a pleasant sentiment just the same.

Of course, many a mischievous legend has been put upon drinking cups. Perhaps you have seen those curious things with a neck full of holes which has the inscription: "To drink and not to spill will try the utmost of your skill." It will, but it is good fun to try.

Flavoring the Glass.

The last half of an ancient recipe for mint julep reads: "Epicures rub the lips of the tumbler with a piece of fresh pineapple, and the tumbler itself is very often incrusted outside with stalactites of ice. As the ice melts, you drink." An epicure might rub the rim of his tumbler, containing a minted lemonade, with the fresh pineapple. The ancient bartenders did a thing of this sort more delicate than hanging a slice or lobster shaped piece of lemon on a glass. A sugared and chilled and tender sprig of mint in a glass of lemonade—or sprigs—make one draw a long breath in order to get their full aroma.

Drinking Through a Straw.

It grows increasingly entertaining to an investigator of the eating habits of the ancients to find how there is little that is new under the sun—just new adaptations—in the ways of eating and drinking and getting food since the creation of man. Xenophon was born somewhere nearly 450 B. C., and it is a delight to read what he sets down about food in his writings. Among other things he says is that the Armenians lived in spacious underground houses in winter where they had abundant stores of wheat, barley, and vegetables, and where they kept also their sheep, goats, cattle, and poultry. But note this: They had beer in jars which they sucked through a reed when thirsty. This beer was made of barley and the grains were left in it. They drank the whole through a reed or straw so that they would not get these grains in their mouths. A straw today is most needed when a drink is partly solid. By the way, Xenophon's Ten Thousand seem to have found this drink rather strong, so they mixed it with water.

A Thin Sirup.

This is good flavored with fruit juice for the ice mushes, which we may call sherbets or granites: One pound of sugar and one quart of water. Put over fire and stir until sugar is dissolved, then cook for fifteen minutes. If thoroughly cooked, this will keep for some time in summer without fermenting.

A Thicker Sirup for Beverages.

The reason the drinks of the soda fountain often seem more delicious than those home mixed is because they are made with sirups. A drink made with a sirup has more body than one sweetened with dry sugar. One way to illustrate the difference between sugar and sirup sweetening is to compare an ice cream sundae with a sirup over it to one sprinkled with sugar. The latter thing is not done and drinks are not really half as good when this is done to them. This makes a good beverage sirup and is a universal formula: Two cups sugar, two cups water or fruit juice. This is the proportion used for making raspberry shrub from the vinegar which has stood over raspberries. The sugar must be completely dissolved before the liquid boils to prevent early crystallization. Then boil to 220 degrees, or a bit higher.

Sipping Sherbets.

Fruit juices and water half frozen have been a summer drink for a long time. In the Italian slums to this day we find lemon juice diluted till no sweetening of it is required—and beyond even that—and frozen to a mush, and greatly appreciated because cold. It is sherbet of a sort, or a "granite."

In one of Lady Wortley Montagu's letters, dated 1717, she tells of being entertained by a Turkish woman who gave her a dinner of fifty dishes of meat which were placed on the table one at a time, with knives of gold and hafts set in diamonds. "The table cloth and napkins," she says, "were all of tiffany, which were spoiled with the using, although so costly." (You can buy something of the same sort to this day, if you are foolish enough to want to.)

Of the sherbet she says: "The sherbet, which is the liquor which they drink at meals, was served in china bowls, but the covers are salvers of massive gold." The editor of these letters also makes a few remarks on this subject, as follows: "The present sultan and most of the grandees have now another kind of sherbet in their houses, known in Europe under the unromantic name of brandy. Sherbet, however, is still habitually sipped in hot weather, and I often joined an old bey over a bowl of this very pleasant beverage."

TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

Hot Sirup.

In making fruit punches containing pieces of fruit, in order to bring out the flavors in full, use the sirup hot over fruit. It may then be made of two cups of sugar and one of liquid. It blends different fruit juices, but there are other ways of getting blends and a mussy mixture of fruit is not worth while and is not economical.

The Lemon Sharpener.

Lemon juice often brings up the flavor of other fruits wonderfully, but at the same time it may replace all aromas with its own, which is not so good, so it must be used with great discretion in mixing fruit drinks, unless they are specifically lemonades, which are the more agreeable for having the lemon juice toned down. The action in all cases between lemon juice and the mild fruit juices is reciprocal. It does wonders, for instance, for raspberry juice, but when we want to get the first enjoyment of our drink through our nose, it is well to add lemon juice by drops only, and the skin not at all, for when manipulated it throws out the strongest smell of anything. And pineapple juice in some cases will do the same thing as lemon juice, and leave more of flower to the drink. By the way, the reason some people will not use lemon with tea is that it drowns the odor of the tea—the very flower of it.

The Ginger Stinger.

The mixing of odors and juices in drinks is a nice business, and I am fond of telling of this experiment tried on a willing taster. First, a cup of boiling water was poured over a dozen sprigs of mint, allowed to stand five minutes, and drained off. Then a little lime juice was added to part of it. It had the daintiest of aromas, but not much character, when it was sweetened to taste. To the other part was added orange juice and the mint flavor was almost lost, but when a few drops of lemon juice were added out came the mint flavor, stronger than in these others. So when your drink lacks character, no matter how fine the fruit juices and dainty the flavors, add some drops of lemon juice, but again we say be careful if you do not want to turn it into what may correctly be called a lemonade, because the lemon flavor leads all the others.

To call ginger a "stinger" is to adopt the name from an English "temperance drink" containing as much cayenne pepper as ginger, so that the latter was really the stinger, but there is something so clean and cool about the sharpness or sting of ginger that we like to use that characterization of it. The quite modern combination of ginger ale over ice cream, which is so highly appreciated—it is really a ginger ice cream soda to which a little sirup may be added, as well as the ice cream and ginger ale—owes its popularity to a slight sting. The old home made ginger beers were nothing but ginger teas sweetened and flavored, and the hayfield drink was often made of nothing but powdered ginger, molasses, and water.

The Hop Bitter.

The old "small beer" was nothing but hop tea. An old recipe for it was: "To twelve quarts of cold water add one and a half pints of strong hop tea and one and one-half pints of molasses. Mix well together and bottle it immediately. It will be fit for use the next day if the weather is warm." "Common beer" was just hop tea with spruce or some other flavor, leavened for one day only with yeast.

A Hop Tincture.

This is one tested out and found good with seltzer water, which it seems was invented for some medicinal use nearly 200 years ago. Add one tablespoon of ground ginger to one-half ounce of hops and boil these in a pint of water gently for one-half hour. The hop leaves swell so that only a cup of liquid is likely to be left at the end of the half hour. Strain this off and add one-fourth pound of brown sugar. Stir till dissolved and cook to sirup stage. When cool add to it one cup or a little more of cold water. This will make eight glasses, served by filling a glass one-fourth full of the sirup, then adding seltzer water till the foam reaches the top of the glass. To make it mild, add some cream to the sirup or even as much cream as sirup. If you like to put your nose into a foam, here you have it.

Sugar Water.

In Creole stories we have often seen how the people of New Orleans refreshed themselves with "eau sucre," and now we have found in a cook book of 1852 what amounts to a recipe for it, which reads: "Sweeten boiling water with sugar to your taste. This beverage is much used by French ladies. It is considered soporific and good for fatigued or weak nerves." It is not only in our Creole literature that we find mention of people using this but also in those of France, and in the eighteenth century the sucking of sugar cane seems to have been popular, but of late people seem to suffer from such an indulgence.

A FRIEND IN NEED
by Sally Joy Brown

Here Is a Wonderful Opportunity for Children to Learn the Piano

THE following letter tells of a wonderful opportunity for girls and boys who like music and would like to learn how to play the piano:

"Dear Miss Brown: This school gives a summer normal course for piano teachers, from June 27 to July 29. To demonstrate teaching, a small class of children, 6 or 7 years old, is used. The class meets downtown from 10 to 11 o'clock, three mornings a week. These children have, therefore, fifteen music lessons with no charge. There is, of course, no possible obligation about their future study. All we ask is regularity of attendance during the five weeks.

"We are wondering if among your readers there are some who would care to have their children in this group. They must be beginners, having had no lessons, and must have a piano at home. Only fundamental work is accomplished in fifteen lessons, but it is an astonishingly good foundation. We desire to give the lessons to children who are really musical in tendencies.

"There will be a tryout held on Saturday, June 18, at the school. We feel this is a worth while thing and are most appreciative of your cooperation and the use of your fine column.

"D. P."

Isn't that a splendid opportunity for some young girls and boys to get well started in music? If you know of any child who is willing to study and meet requirements of the school, I'll be happy to have their names and to arrange for the tryout. Remember they can't know anything about music—they just must want to learn!

And here's a splendid chance for some who are further along in their music:

"I am a moderately successful music teacher. I have a hobby of helping in a small way a few who are anxious to secure musical instruction but unable to pay for it. I have found, in this way, a great deal of high grade talent, and it is a source of much pleasure and satisfaction to know that through one's own efforts such talent has been found and given a chance.

"During the spring and summer months my business is at its lowest ebb. Consequently, I have some time open. I have decided to give this time in the manner of which I speak, and have organized classes for the study of musical theory. I might add that theory is the real backbone of a musical career, either as a preparation or supplement. S. M."

Send your name and address if you wish to take advantage of this generous offer of S. M.'s.

Now, just a word about some other music lovers. In Chicago are many who can play, some of them invalids, with little or no chance to amuse themselves, and they are barred from doing so by lack of instruments we know we'll never use. Why not, then, donate them and help spread happiness as the writers above are doing. Shall we make this music lovers' week and give any unused instrument?

Other Requests.

"Dear Miss Brown: May I tell you that I could make a little more money in giving piano lessons to beginners in the evening? I have three children waiting for me to give them lessons, but I have no piano and they have no piano. If I had one I could realize a little income and the children could come and do their practicing in the afternoon. Perhaps in time I could quit store work, which is so hard on me. MRS. J. V."

"Dear Sally Joy Brown: Have any of your readers a saxophone no longer needed? I would like to join a band, but cannot afford to buy an instrument. J. M. B."

"Dear Miss Brown: I am a son of a poor family and take piano lessons from a woman who charges only a small amount for the lessons. I am in need of a music bag and a metronome. I wonder if one of your readers could give me these things. I am 14 years of age. J. B."

"Dear Miss Sally: Perhaps one of your readers has banjo parts to some of the popular songs which they have no further use for. I have just started playing and would greatly appreciate any banjo music I could get. "M. J. B."

"Dear Miss Brown: I am a patient at this sanitarium and I wonder if some of your readers has a ukelele he or she would like to give away. I certainly would enjoy having one to strum on. W. S."

The Strange Adventures of Young Robinson Grewso

By KEMBLE

His Ma called him Robin, his Dad called him Son.
He grew like a weed and thought it great fun.
So he called himself Robinson Grewso.

"CHIN CHIN, you certainly did save me from bein' a slave to dem no account pirates." Sundae grinned from ear to ear as he patted the old bird.

"I sure thought they was drowned and I would be jailed for bumping them overboard. I didn't mean to do it."

"You did it, all the same," came a voice from somewhere.

Robin and Chin Chin looked around in dismay. They could not see a soul. Sundae grinned.

"Dar she is, Robin, dat little fish gal, leanin' on dat floatin' island." And, sure enough, there she was—the tiny mermaid, bobbing her pretty head and showing her pearly teeth.

Robin and Chin Chin looked around in dismay.

"Those pirates, you know, are very dear friends of mine, and I think you were very rude to them."

Robin laughed outright. "Rude to pirates! That's a good one. How would you behave if pirates came on board your boat and began jabbing you with swords? Just what would you do?"

The little mermaid opened her eyes very wide.

"Seeing as I have no boat and have never been jabbed with swords, I really do not know, but Sundae had no right to push them in the water and then not try to save them."

Sundae looked surprised. "Really, Miss Fish Lady, I did try to save 'em. I leaned over de boat just like dis——"

And in trying to show how he did it, splash—overboard he went! And down, down, down he kept going. It seemed that he never would come up.

Robin and Chin Chin grew frantic at the thought of losing their little cannibal friend.

Crabby does a few jazz steps.

"Can't you do something?" Robin cried to the mermaid girl.

"Don't be so impatient, Robin," she answered. "My lifesaver will bring him up."

No sooner had she said it than the claws of a gigantic crab appeared above the surface and, clinging to the claws, hung the sputtering Sundae.

"He is the most kindhearted crab that ever lived," smiled the mermaid. "He just loves to help those who have sunk so low. He's a regular diving bell crab."

"What's that, a dumbbell crab?" screeched Chin Chin. "I knew it, I knew it."

The mermaid's eyes snapped. "You think he's a dumbbell, do you? I'll show you. Crabby!" she called out, "just get up on the side of the boat and sing that little song you composed."

Sundae grabbed one of his rescuer's claws and helped him on board. There the old fellow sat beating time with his many legs and out of a funny mouth that looked for all the world like a cruller came this simple ditty:

I live 'way down in the bottom of the lake
Where it's very, very dark, but I'm very wide awake;
If some poor critic comes a-sprawling down
I bump him up, for I cannot let him drown.

Robin and Chin Chin clapped their hands as Crabby finished his song. Then the sweet singer stood up on his hind legs and declared that he would show them a few jazz steps.

"O, yes," said he, "we have some gay times down below. We dance and the fiddler crabs play for us, the lantern fish light up the place for us, and twice a year we have a grand affair—a regular fish ball. Roll down some time and see us," grinned the old fellow. "We get along swimmingly," and with that he made a funny bow and splashed into the water. He dove and disappeared.

"You did it, all the same."

ISN'T IT ODD
by William Atherton Du Puy

ISN'T it odd that man, by dint of using his head, should have found a way to make use of even so forbidding a child of nature as the prickly pear of the west!

That great stretch of desert country that reaches from San Antonio to Los Angeles favors this prickly pear above all plants. With its skin sealed airtight on the outside it can hold its moisture as can few others and live green and vigorous with little water. With its needle sharp thorns it scorns attack from browsing cattle or even the nibbling jackrabbit. It survives where most forms of life perish.

Cattlemen through the decades have seen their herds die of starvation while back of the thorn covering of the prickly pear was much nourishing food. It remained for men of science, sent into these parts by the department of agriculture, to work out a plan for utilizing the stock food that lay in this plant.

First they tried growing it under cultivation. This plant, which got along quite well where few others would live, grew to surprising size when the ground was plowed that the water might be let into the soil when the few rains of the years did come. Cultivated prickly pears grew ten times as fast as those that were not cultivated.

The crop was planted somewhat as is sugar cane—by laying the joints in a furrow. They took root and grew. They went right on growing summer and winter. They yielded from 20 to 50 tons of cattle food to the acre.

There remained but the problem of how it was to be used. Then some one thought of a novel scheme—that of using a blowpipe and burning the thorns off. This scheme was tried. It was found that it worked well. After the flame of the blowpipe was passed over the thorns of a plant those thorns had disappeared. The cattle soon discovered the miracle and fell on the singed plants and devoured them.

So was a way found for growing a new forage crop, or at least for making use in an emergency of nature's crop here in the southwest. The prickly pear grows year after year. If it is needed it can be singed and thus fed to the cattle. If it is not needed it remains green and keeps growing. If it is not used for ten years none of its growth will be wasted. It is stored fodder, but it needs no barn. Finally the time of need comes. The ranchman goes out with his torch and burns the thorns off of one row of prickly pears. That is the ration for his stock for the day. They fall to and eat up that row.

But the reserve food supply they cannot touch. On the morrow more thorns are singed. It is easier thus to give the stock what food they are to have than it would be if they were being fed hay which must be pitched down from the stack and hauled out to them. The prickly pear, in fact, has certain advantages over even red clover as a food for cattle.

$5 APIECE FOR BRIGHT SAYINGS

The Tribune will pay $5 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, The Tribune, Chicago.

I was in my garden one morning when a sweet little voice in the garden next door said: "How do you do."

There stood a quaint little maid of about 5. I said, "Hello, what is your name and who are you?" for I had never seen her in my friend's garden before.

In a prim, dignified voice she replied: "I am one of my grandmother's grandchildren." U. M. W.

Billy was keeping the whole family waiting because he must put away his toys before they went for a ride.

"Hurry, Billy," called his mother. "hurry just as fast as you can."

"I is mother," he answered breathlessly, "I'se hurrying faster'n I can." A. K. A.

With the Extra Spoon.

The other evening in a dining car while I was having my dinner, I believe I experienced the most embarrassing moment of my life. At the beginning of the meal I noticed that I had an extra soup spoon, but paid no further attention to it. Now, I am absent minded at times and was more so at this particular time.

I heard the waiter cough discreetly a few times, but I didn't think there was anything amiss until I saw a young woman sitting across from me looking highly amused. I looked around and discovered myself trying to eat soup out of the finger bowl with my extra soup spoon. Needless to say, I made a rather hurried exit.

K. K. N.

Her Own Things.

I accompanied a friend of mine when she went to call on a friend of hers. My friend had told me some time before that Mrs. Smith lived in light housekeeping rooms, but had failed to tell me about her moving.

Everything was going nicely when furnishing a home came up for discussion. I gave a long talk about different tastes in furnishings and finished with, "Now, take your rooms, for example, Mrs. Smith. I don't see how any landlady can furnish rooms with such furniture and expect people to live happily in them."

But—horrors! Something was wrong. I fully realized what it was when Mrs. Smith icily informed me that she had no landlady to furnish her rooms for her.

N. Y.

Absent Minded.

At our high school some of the girls instead of buying their lunch bring it to school. Usually it is in the form of sandwiches. One day, having bought and eaten my lunch I still felt rather hungry. The girl sitting across from me had a whole box of sandwiches, and noting my hungry look, offered me the box. She then became absorbed in conversation with the girl on her left.

My thoughts left the food I was eating and wandered to the approaching baseball game. I mentally saw myself pitching with two down, the bases full, and the count two and three, etc., etc., and surrounded myself with a halo of glory.

With a shock my thoughts came back from their journey to the sharp voice of my friend. At first I did not grasp what she was saying, and I looked stupidly at the box in front of me. There I saw the cause of the trouble.

The box was empty! I had eaten all the sandwiches. You may believe I beat a hasty retreat. Embarrassed? Not much!

E. H.

A Head of Cabbage.

While taking cooking in grammar school, the teacher, who noticed that my girl friend and I were through our work ahead of the rest of the class, sent us out to get some groceries and a head of cabbage. When we came to the store, I was able to remember everything except the cabbage, and I couldn't think what it was that I had forgotten.

The clerk who waited on us had light, curly hair. He stooped under the counter for something and when he stood up I suddenly remembered what it was that I had forgotten and pointing to his head, I said, "O, now I know what it was I wanted—a head of cabbage." Then was I embarrassed? I'll say so.

E. M.

A New One on Him.

My most embarrassing moment was when we were invited out to dinner and took our young son. I was secretly congratulating myself on how well he was behaving, when the dessert was brought in—lemon pie with meringue.

Sonny tasted it and made a terrible face. Our hostess asked him what was the matter and he quickly replied, "My mother doesn't put soapsuds on her pies."

Was I embarressed.

Free Examination.

My husband is an insurance agent. Recently a woman made application for insurance. After the usual routine of application, medical examination, etc., the policy came through from the home office and my husband took it to her, only to be informed that she did not want the policy, and that the only reason she had made application was because she was worried about her health and wanted an examination to see if it was anything serious! She got the examination free of charge by the insurance company's doctor, under the pretense that she wanted to be insured. Some cheek!

MRS. H. M.

"Our" Cauliflowers.

When you plan your garden this spring you had better get down on your knees and pray that none of your neighbors will try the trick one of ours worked on us last year.

One day last spring, when our back yard had been newly spaded, along came this neighbor with a penny package of cauliflower seeds, which she offered with as much ceremony as if the gift had been a string of pearls.

All summer long I slaved over those cauliflowers. I kept the weeds from choking them while they were young; hoed the ground about them whenever it became parched, and revived the plants with water when the hot spell threatened to snuff out their lives.

Our neighbor was solicitous about the welfare of the cauliflowers. Every once in a while she would lean over the back fence and say: "Those cauliflowers of mine are getting along nicely." At the time I failed to get the point of her remark.

Came a day in the fall. The cauliflowers were now very plump. A week before they had been tied up for blanching; that day many of them were temptingly white. I was looking proudly over my crop when my neighbor appeared with an empty bushel basket under her arm.

"Well," she said, setting the basket down and taking a knife from the bottom of it, "I see our cauliflowers are ready to eat."

E. O'R.

Laying Down the Law.

It was a habit of my father-in-law to come around to our house perhaps two or three mornings a week to take me for a short drive with my little boy and girl. He often stopped places on errands and then ended with a spin on a country road.

One morning we stopped at his daughter's home. Before he could reach the house she was out on the steps, laying down the law, telling him she never had the car, etc., etc.

I could hear almost everything that was said, and since that day, which was months ago, my babies and myself have had no more pleasant morning rides.

Corns Lift Off

You'll laugh, really! It is so easy and doesn't hurt one bit!

Drop "Freezone" on that old, bothersome corn. Instantly it stops aching; then shortly you lift that sore, touchy corn right off with your fingers. It works like a charm, every time.

A tiny bottle of "Freezone" costs only a few cents at any drug store, sufficient to remove every hard corn, soft corn, corn between the toes and calluses—try it!

The HOME HARMONIOUS

By WillElla De Campi Stephenson.

In a Small Apartment or House, Where There Is but One Guest Room, It Should Be Neither Feminine Nor Masculine in Treatment, but a Happy Combination of the Two.

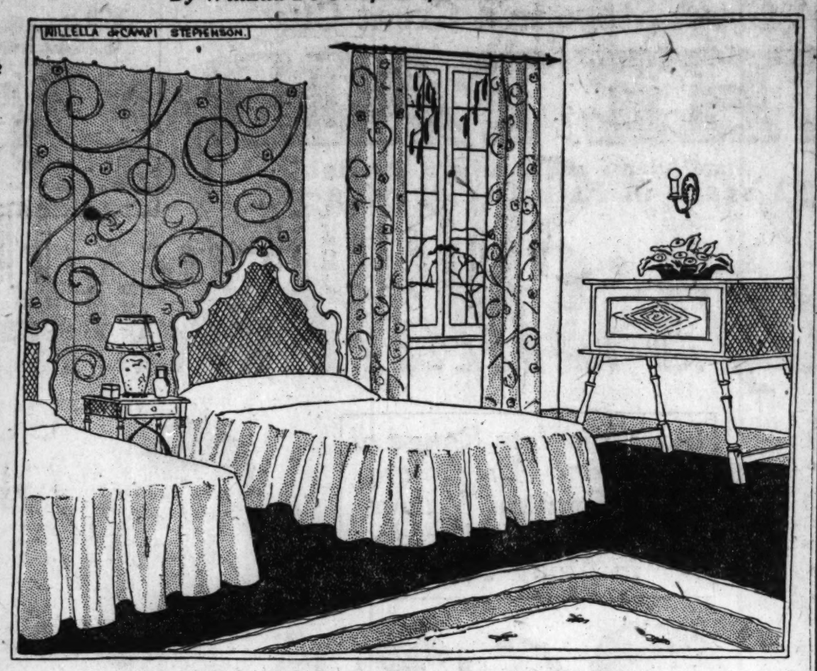
WillElla de Campi Stephenson will be glad to assist the homemaker in any problems pertaining to home building and home furnishing. Address your letter to Anita de Campi, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

IN furnishing the guest room there are several essential points to be remembered. In the house or apartment where there is only one guest room, that one room should not be definitely masculine nor feminine in character. The general tendency is to make the guest room frivolously feminine. The occasional men who occupy it must feel ridiculously out of place.

Simple furnishings of dignified character are most suitable. The room should contain twin beds, and, if possible, a day bed or chaise longue, so the guest may have a little rest and privacy during the day. Another essential provision for this room is that of a desk. This should be fitted with all of the necessary equipment: stationery, calendar, pens, ink, blotters, stamps, and a dictionary. A waste basket should be conveniently placed.

Spanish furnishings strike a happy note in the guest room illustrated today. Modern ideas of comfort are combined with the austerity of the Spanish style. The plaster walls are tinted a warm, pinkish orange. Woodwork is stained walnut. At the windows are hangings of block printed linen, in a distinguished floral pattern on a soft green ground. No glass curtains are used. The wide expanse of plaster wall at the head of the beds is broken by a hanging of the same block linen. Between the beds is a little night table holding a lamp made of a Spanish pottery jar with a parchment shade decorated to match. Bed covers are made of a soft green striped material, piped with orange.

A small Spanish desk is accompanied by a chair with seat and back covered in a basket weave material, in mauve, green and blue. A large, comfortable arm chair is upholstered in a striped linen with fine lines of black, green and old gold on a henna colored ground. Above a sturdy walnut chest hangs a mirror in a plain walnut frame. Lighting fixtures are of wrought iron, and wrought iron poles are used for hanging the window draperies. Two colorful Spanish rugs are used on the deep green floor.



Spanish furnishings strike a happy note in this guest room.

Pleasingly restful with its quiet simplicity is a guest room furnished with Sheraton pieces. A lattice paper of slender, mauve colored leaves on an ivory ground covers the walls. Woodwork is painted ivory. At the windows are ivory point d'esprit glass curtains. Draperies are made of a soft old blue taffeta, finished with narrow mauve ruffles. On the twin beds of Sheraton design are covers of the blue taffeta, piped with mauve and finished with mauve ruffles.

A mirror in an oval frame hangs above a small commode which stands between the beds. On the commode is a porcelain lamp with flowered silk shade which lights up most effectively. A pair of little Sheraton side chairs at the sides of the beds have seats upholstered in old blue satin, brocaded with small flowers.

Placed near a window is a luxurious chaise longue done in deep mauve damask. It is accompanied by a graceful end table holding a blue glass lamp with a mauve shade and a set of smoking accessories. Above a little flat topped desk is a set of hanging shelves on which are placed a group of reference books and a few interesting novels. The dressing table has a glass top under which a piece of blue brocade is stretched. Wool chenille rugs in deep mauve are used.

American colonial furniture is used in another charming guest room. Pale jade pink paper with white polka dots covers the walls. The woodwork is painted white. At the windows are pink net glass curtains dotted with white so that they match the wall paper. Draperies are made of gayly flowered semi-glazed chintz on a jade pink ground. They are finished with ruffles and deep rose rep. Covers on the twin four post beds are made of the rep, with deep flounces of the covered flowered chintz at the sides. Beside each bed is a night stand holding an old fashioned glass lamp, with an accordion plaited chintz shade.

A large comfortable wing chair with a butterfly table beside it is upholstered in the chintz. Placed beside one of the windows, so that the light falls on it from the left, is a delightful little spinet desk with a ladder-back rush bottom chair. A lowboy, with a mirror hanging above it, makes the dressing table. All of the furniture is maple. Colorful hooked rugs enliven the floor, which is painted a deep taupe.

Amusingly different is a guest room done in the modernist manner. The walls are French gray, decorated with large solid circles of gold and jade green. Woodwork is painted black, with a fine line of green to match the furniture. At the windows are long draw curtains of jade green sunfast, lined with French gray and finished with a narrow black binding. Covers on the low twin beds match the draperies. A chaise longue and an arm chair are upholstered in black, piped with jade green. Small extra cushions, in many bright colors, look like a great chaise longue. A brass desk set and brass smoking accessories on a low table fit admirably into the general scheme of the room. Several gray fur rugs are used on the glossy black floor.

Painted furniture may be used appropriately in the guest room. One lovely room I have seen has a set painted antiqued turquoise. It is decorated in the Venetian manner, with touches of gold and floral motifs. In the room in which this set is placed the walls are a pale mauve and the woodwork is a deep violet with a line of turquoise. At the windows are glass curtains of pale mauve silk gauze with overcurtains of the same material in dull turquoise. The overcurtains are caught back by gold cords. Covers for the beds are made of a two-toned striped moire in mauve. A small sofa, placed between two windows, is upholstered in the same moiré. Pale lemon yellow silk makes lamp shades and shields.

More Puzzlers in Etiquette - - - - - - - by Persis Standish

HERE is the third of the etiquette quizzes and the questions are growing more difficult. Witness the first two. If you get these right and live up to them you may count yourself perfect.

1. What is a snob?
2. What is an aristocrat?
3. What should govern manners in public?
4. What should govern conversation in public places?
5. On which side of a man does a woman sit in a motor or a carriage?
6. Where does a woman sit in her own motor, if not driving it?
7. Does the husband or male relation receive with his wife at a reception?
8. Should a man ask if he may make a first call on a girl?
9. Where does a woman receive men who call upon her in an hotel?
10. Do brides and bridesmaids wear gloves at the wedding?
11. If the officiating clergyman is married, is his wife asked to the wedding?
12. If a widow remarries how many bridesmaids should she have?
13. Is there any tradition about congratulating the bride?
14. Can a woman refuse to dance with any one who asks her?
15. What sort of clothes should one wear in public?
16. Should a woman smoke in a public place?
17. Is it important for the business woman to have good manners?
18. Is it good form for a business woman to come to the office dressed for the "date" of the coming evening?

Answers.

1. A snob is the lowest form of animal life. It resembles the elephant and the rhinoceros in that it is a pachyderm. Its ambition is to obtain nods from those whom it deems distinguished. It is usually wrong.
2. An aristocrat is one who values intelligence more than gold and character more than intelligence, who practices kindness and humility, who recognizes his own kind dressed for a levee or in blue jeans. An aristocrat always has taste and a sense of humor. Therefore, his manners are perfect at all times.
3. Consideration of others and a desire to be inconspicuous.
4. Conversation in public should be conducted in low tones and should never contain reference to one's own or other people's private affairs.
5. She should sit on the right side unless some unforseen circumstance makes it impossible.
6. In her own motor she also sits on the right side.
7. No. He should be nearby in case there is anything she wishes him to do, but he should not be "in line."
8. No. It is a girl's privilege to ask the men she prefers to call upon her, as man is presuming if he asks to call the first time.
9. Unless she has a private sitting room a woman receives male guests in the hotel lobby or parlors.
10. If they wish they do, but modern fashion dictates that women may dispense with gloves and so the bride and the bridesmaids may take advantage of this, if they so wish.
11. Always. Even if the wife of the clergyman is unknown to the bride's family it is none the less courteous to invite her to the wedding.
12. A widow who remarries should have no attendants.
13. Yes, it is not done. All congratulations are given the bridegroom because tradition says a woman honors a man when she marries him.
14. Yes, she can, but she must not be seen dancing with any one else that dance unless she says that she has it engaged. For a woman to refuse to dance with one man on a trumped up excuse and then appear on the floor with another is an affront to her hostess as well as the man.
15. Quiet clothes. Only persons who have no other social life dress elaborately in public.
16. It all depends on the place. If it is customary for women to smoke in certain cafes or restaurants, any woman who smokes may do so there without being conspicuous, but a nice woman will not be the only one present who is smoking.
17. It is important for the business woman to have good manners, not only for her own honor but for the honor of her employer as well.
18. No, a business woman should wear only simple tailored clothes to the office.

MAIDEN MEDITATIONS

by Sara Moore

THE FLAPPER WIFE TO ANY MAN.

You praise me for my quietness,
You boast about my thrift;
You plan the budget and declare
For saving I've a gift.
You dictate modesty in dress—
Long skirts and high cut collars;
But any blonde can turn your head
Who looks "a million dollars."

CHIVALRY.

Damsel-in-Distress wept sore—
Ran to brave Sir Lancelot's door;
Snapped his steno tall and bleak:
"Your appointment is next week."

Lancelot, now a legal ace,
Yawned, "I might take up your case
If the size appeals to me
Of your first retaining fee."

Gone the day of quick romance,
Gone the flash of sword and lance.
All great deeds of chivalry
Now are done quite—legally.

Champions on justice bent
Now collect a stiff per cent.

Come to our DOUBLE CELEBRATION

Our Third Birthday and 4TH Shopper's Special

Friday, June 10th to Saturday, July 2d
SOUVENIRS TO ALL!

YOU are cordially invited to join in the third birthday anniversary of the Calumet Rug and Carpet Company.

For three years we have grown steadily, building up a reputation, making improvements, always advancing — to please and satisfy our hundred thousand customers. It has been a struggle to do so much in three years, but we have been successful—gloriously so. We have fulfilled our promise to give the best service and the best that money can buy.

On June 12, 1924, the Calumet Rug Company began as a little 25x50 store at 11336 South Michigan Avenue. Today it has become one of the largest chain of rug stores in the city of Chicago. The main store is in the Wicks Building, 7341 Cottage Grove Avenue, and four branches cover the entire South Side to Hammond, Ind. Our Service Department is large and efficient and we have the best laying and labor departments, to further beautify the homes of our customers.

Our policy to buy for cash and sell for cash has meant better values for our customers. We repeat our pledge to offer only merchandise of proven worth, with satisfaction guaranteed or your money back.

Our anniversary celebration will give Chicago patrons an opportunity to get merchandise of this high quality at a rare reduction. Stock worth $100,000 will be offered at each of our stores at prices which will make you doubly eager to buy. Select anything you need or wish in the rug or floor covering line and take 20% off the market price! This 20% discount will be valid only during our third anniversary celebration.

Souvenirs will be given FREE to all callers and we take pleasure in asking you to watch for our Weekly Editorials and Shoppers' Specials.

We take this opportunity to thank our many thousands of customers, who have made our phenomenal success possible.

Very truly yours,

SAM 'N' HENRY ---- By Correll & Gosden

The Boys Are Broke and Things Look Mighty, Mighty Dark

[In trying to move a small safe Sam injures his foot, and we find the boys spending an evening in their room.]

SAM — Henry, I think my foot's goin' be a'right by tomorrow, an' I kin git back on de job.

Henry—If yo' is countin' on mashin' yo' foot ev'vy time yo' move sumpin', yo' betteh git some iron shoes or sumpin'.

Sam—Well, dat was yo' fault, Henry, 'cause yo' let de safe slide down out o' yo' hand on my feet. Anotheh thing, I can't move no safe by myself.

Henry — Don' argue wid me now. I'se busy.

(Henry has been sitting at a table in the room, writing on a piece of cardboard.)

Sam—Whut is yo' figgerin' out dere, Henry?

Henry—I is de president of de comp'ny, an' I'se figgerin' up how much money we'd made today if we'd worked an' hauled a trunk ev'vy hour.

Sam — How much would we made, Henry?

Henry—Dat's a matteh dat we gotta take up at a open meetin'.

Sam—Well, tell me dis, Henry. How is we goin' git some money tomorrow to git sumpin' to eat wid?

Henry—I'se thinkin' 'bout goin' to de bank an' borrowin' some money.

Sam—Well, whut is yo' goin' give de bank fo' cor-rat-ral?

THINKIN' IS HARD WORK

Henry—Give 'em Gram'pa, de hoss, for cor-rat-ral. Dat'll let 'em know dat we mean bizness.

Sam—If yo' take de hoss down to de bank, Henry, how is we goin' haul trunks wid him?

Henry—Now, don' be so dumb. I ain't goin' take de hoss in de bank in de man's office. We'll put a mor'gage on de hoss.

Sam—I don' think he kin carry no more, Henry. He got all de harness on him an' he got a great big collar. He's pullin' enough.

Henry (heaving a sigh of disgust at Sam's ignorance)—Dere yo' go. Listen, yo' is de advertisin' manager, ain't yo'?

Sam—Yeh, I'se de advertisin' manager. Whut about it, Henry?

Henry—Well, tend to de advertisin' department an' don' mess wid de president no mo'.

Sam—De only thing, Henry, we gotta figger out how we kin make some money.

Henry—Well, I been figgerin' all day. I been thinkin' and thinkin'.

Sam—Yo' been asleep fo' de las' four hours heah on de bed, Henry.

Henry—Dere yo' go agin. I done tol' yo' dat's when I do my thinkin'—when I'se layin' down wid my eyes closed.

Sam—I thought yo' was asleep, Henry.

Henry—Sometimes when I'se thinkin' I think so hard dat it sorta kill my brain fo' a minute an' I sorta drop off to sleep.

Sam—Well, keep on thinkin', Henry, 'cause we gotta make some money heah.

(There is a knock at the door.)

Henry (fearing trouble) — O. O. Dere's somebody at de door. I hope it ain't de lan'lord 'cause we owes him enough.

Sam—Whut is yo' goin' tell him, Henry?

A LETTEH FROM LIZA

Henry—You is de treasurer. You handle de matteh. (Calls to door.) Come in.

(The door opens and a special delivery carrier walks in.)

Sam (speechless at not seeing the landlord)—Awa—awa—awa——.

Man (interrupting)—Special delivery for Sam Smith.

Sam—Dat's me, mistah. Han' it to me heah. I got a bad foot. I can't git on it much, mistah.

Henry—If dat's from Liza, I hope she's sendin' you some money, dat's all.

Sam—Mus' I sign on dis line heah, mistah?

Man—No, no, sign on this line down at the bottom.

Henry—Is yo' done writ to Liza lately?

Sam (signing) — Wait a minute, Henry. S-m-i-t-h—dere you is, mistah. (As the carrier leaves.) Close de door when yo' go out, will yo' please?

"Special Delivery for Sam Smith."

Henry—Does Liza know you'se broke?

Sam—I fo'got to tell yo', Henry I writ her a lettah de otheh day an' tol' her dat we done started in de transfer bizness right now. I ain't said nothin' 'bout bein' broke.

Henry—Yo' betteh start thinkin' 'bout it cause we is flat, an' we ain't got no oats fo' de hoss. (Sam is nervous over his letter.) Stop shakin' dere an' open up de letteh.

Sam—Ev'vy time I git a letteh from Liza, Henry, it makes my heart jump right up in my throat, yo' know it? Umm—umm, I LOVES dat gal. Soon as I git on my feet an' git some money I goin' marry her too.

Henry—Read de letteh, read de letteh. Whut do she say?

Sam (as he gets the letter unfolded)—Umm—umm, listen to dis, Henry, listen to dis!

0-0-0!

Henry—I know. I kin tell by dat smile on yo' face. She's callin' yo' lollypop dere, or sweet geranium or sompin'. Shake de letteh an' see if dere's any money in it.

Sam—Ain't no money in it, Henry, but listen to dis. (Reads.) "My darlin' angel, little baby-face——" (to Henry) Umm—umm, ain't dat sumpin'?

Henry—Read de lettah now, read de lettah. Don' git de president mad.

Sam (reading)—"I'se jus' received yo' wonderful lettah an' I want you to know dat yo' little baby is waitin' fo' yo'." (To Henry) Doggone, Henry, dere's a sweet gal, now dere's a sweet gal.

Henry—Yo' must-a tol' her dat yo' was comin' back home to eat or sumpin'.

Sam—No I didn't, Henry. I jus' tol' her dat I'se gittin' 'long a'right. Tol' her we done gone in de transfer bizness an' we was goin' be big men.

Henry—Whut else do she say?

Sam—She say heah—"I loves you mo' an' mo' each day, an' when I thinks of you up in Chicago wid all de otheh big bizness men, I is proudeh an' proudeh of my little baby face."

Henry (disgusted)—O, O. If dere's any mo' stuff in dere like dat, skip dat.

Sam—Den she say heah—"I was tellin' gram'pa whut a big success you is makin' in de transfer bizness an' 'bout all de money dat you is makin' an' he tol' me to tell you——"

Henry (interrupting)—Whut is you done tol' dat gal?

Sam—I jus' tol' her dat we done bought a hoss an' wagon an' gone into de transfer bizness an' we was gonna git some mo' hosses soon.

Henry — Well, read what Liza's gram'pa say den. Let's hear it.

Sam—She say, "My gram'pa tol' me to tell you to be careful whut yo' do wid yo' money. Gram'pa talked to a friend o' his an' he tol' me to tell you to buy g-o-v-e-r-n-m-e-n-t——" (To Henry) Dat's gov'ment, ain't it, Henry?

Henry—Dat's right.

MORE ADVICE

Sam (reading)—Tol' me to tell you to buy gov'ment bonds an' be careful not to put too much money in one place.

Henry—O—O. If each one of us jus' had fifty cents we'd both take it oveh to de res'trant, I know dat.

Sam—Listen heah, Henry (reads)—"Gram'pa say to git two or three pieces of good real estate now an' hol' on to it."

Henry—De only way we goin' git any real estate is to steal it, dat's all.

Sam—Den she say heah (reads): "Gram'pa say dat real estate bonds is good, too, an' when you buy yo' hosses, buy 'em from some man dat knows his bizness."

Henry—We ain't got 'nuf money to buy a piece o' roast beef, much less any hoss meat.

Sam—Den she say heah on de nex' line: "Gram'pa say if you is makin' big money, you could send fifty or seventy-five dollahs each week to de bank down heah in Bummin'ham."

Henry—Dat man mus' think you is a millionaire, don' he? I don' know which is got less sense, Liza's gram'pa or our hoss, Gram'pa.

Sam—Liza's all mixed up, Henry. She mus' think we got money.

Henry—Read on—whut do she say dere?

Sam (reading)—"Gram'pa jus' tol' me to tell you not to throw yo' money away, but to hol' on to it now while you is got plen'y 'cause some day you might need all de money you is got now.

(There is a knock on the door.)

THE LANDLORD CALLS

Henry—Come in, come in.

(The landlord enters.)

Sam—Well, I be doggoned, heah's de lan'lord, Henry.

Henry (realizing the landlord's mission)—O, O. (To landlord) Good evenin', lan'lord. (Gets up to get his hat.) I was jus' gittin' ready to leave. I got a 'pointment down de street wid a gent'man. Yo' know I is de president of de transfer comp'ny.

Landlord—Now listen, boys, I done waited long 'nuf fo' dat rent. I is sorry to tell yo' but de time is up——

Henry (interrupting)—Jus' a minute, brotheh, jus' a minute heah. I'se gotta git down de street dere to see dis man fo' a few minutes, 'cause it means two—three hund'ed dollahs to me. Sam heah is treasurer an' he will handle dat matteh. I'll see yo' later. (To Sam)—Sam, you take care o' de gent'man heah. So long, I'll see yo' later. (Henry leaves.)

Landlord (to Sam as Sam puts on hat)—Just a minute, Sam, where is yo' goin'?

Sam (leaving)—I is de gent'man dat Henry is got de 'pointment wid.

HOT PAGES FRUM MY DIARY By Snowshoe Al

This Entertaining of Newlyweds Ain't No Easy Job

LAST night it wuz raining, so I figured it wood be a swell time to go an' see my gal friend because she koodn't expect me to take her anywhere in the damp. The gal friend's name is Malvina. I calls her on the phone an' warns her that I'm kumming over.

"O, are yew?" sez she, gitting real peeved; "did I say yew kood?"

"Nope," I admits, yawning.

"All right, kum on," sez her, "an' be sure to put on a clean collar, because a young married couple, wich are friends uv mine, are also kumming over this evening. They jist got back frum their honeymoon. Don't kum over here with the intentions uv sitting around like a mummy. Broadcast sum sort uv a conversational noise—see if yew can act sociable—I'm trying to hide the fact frum my friends that I run around with a dumb crystal set!"

"Quit spilling the grief," sez I; "I'll do my share towards keeping the english language in circulation tonight."

NICE POOCH!

Wen I gits to her house I knocks on the door an' wuz told to kum in, so I shoves the door open an' meets the dog. The Bow-wow's name is Sylvester, an' he is 45 pounds uv pure unadulterated Cannibal, in fact every time me an' that Flea-incubator meet, everybody in the neighborhood starts betting each other money, because I always consider it an elimination contest, whereas Sylvester evidently has got my name filed away under "Food."

Talk about a tough Barking Machine! If that Bone Burler saw a regiment uv leather-necks go past the window he'd git so dam hungry he wood go crazy! He wouldn't be able to understand why so much meat wuz gitting away frum him. The last time they let him outside he wuz seen running down the alley dragging a dead horse an' looking for a place to hide it. Also, I remember the time they found him standing in front uv a big sign-board, gazing with hungry eyes at a life-size painting uv an elephant. He already had all the paint chewed off as high up as the elephant's knees. Yup, that's the little playmate wot I encounters everytime I calls on Malvina.

SPEAKING OF DOG FIGHTS

Well, Sylvester makes one starved dive in my direction an' I tried to close the door between us, but he got his head caught in it. This bothered him greatly but it pleased me immensely, an' I wuz jist gitting ready to massage his mug with my shoe wen the gal friend stopped the slaughter.

"It wood be jist like yew to kick that poor innocent dear," sez she, chaining Sylvester to the radiator.

"Listen," I squawks; "wot gits my goat is the fact that wen anybody else knocks on this door that hunk uv Galloping Boloney is chained up! Far be it frum me to suspect foul play, but I've got a dirty idea that wen I knock, yew unfasten him an' howl: 'Kum in.'"

"It's a good thing that yew don't depend on yer ideas for a living," sez she, "or yew wood spend most uv yer time standing in the bread-line. I want yew to leave Sylvester alone. Dog fights are jist terrible!"

"Don't git funny!" sez I; "there has to be at least 2 dogs in a dog fight!"

"Well," sez she, "there's only one real difference between Sylvester an' yew—he has a pedigree!"

HERE COMES THE BRIDE

"Where's yer mother?" asks I.

"She has gone 'out,'" sez Mal.

"Any the kid brother—where is he?" sez I.

"He is not in," sez she; "ask me another!"

Jist then Matrimony's latest victims announced their arrival by knocking on the door, so I sat down an' prepared to become sociable. The first to enter the room wuz the bride. She had the graceful lines uv a darning needle, only she didn't weigh as much. She wuz followed immediately by the Gloom, who wuz a fair-haired boy uv 30 years, an' who weighed 260 pounds. Well, as soon as Sylvester got one look at this guy he got so hungry that he had a spasm an' tried to swallow the radiator. Me an' the dog wuz both hoping that the Gloom wood go over an' try to pat him, because I wanted to laugh an' Sylvester wanted to eat! No luck!!

We all sits down after I wuz introduced to this couple [their name wuz Jones] an' I gits the high sign frum the gal friend to become talkative. I stalls for a minute to let sumbody else start the lingo, but it seems as how young married couples wot have jist returned frum their honeymoon don't have anything to say, so I breaks loose with verbal racket.

"Well, how do yew like married life?" sez I.

"O, fine!" sez the Jones family.

"That's strange," sez I, "taking into consideration the number uv guys wot are shot by their wives on their honeymoon. Statistics compiled by the Quack Doctors' Association uv America show that only one guy in 4,000 has any right to git married. I can show yew a pamphlet——"

BEG PARDON??

Jist then I got a terrible kick on the ankle, so I lets out a wild howl. Malvina begged my pardon, but she did it with a dirty look in her eye, so I figured I better drop that subject. So I starts all over again.

"Where did yew go on yer honeymoon?" sez I.

"Niagara Falls," sez the Jones family.

"Har, har! Fish!!!" sez I; "so yew went to see the cute little drops uv water do the high-dive! I woodn't go to that place on a bet. Nothing to it! Did yew have a compartment on the train or did yew take a couple uv lower berths?"

"My, wot a beautiful lamp shade!" squawks Mrs. Jones.

"Isn't it, though?" howls Malvina.

"Bad night out, aint it?" sez Mr. Jones to me.

"Yes," sez I, impatiently; "did youse take a compartment or did yew jist grab off a couple uv lower—OWWW!!"

"O pardon me, Al, wuz that yer foot I stepped on?" hisses the gal friend.

"Yew know dam well it wuz!" I squawks, gitting real peeved. "Wot side uv town do yew folks live on? Or do yew live with her mother? If yew do, yew're crazy."

"We have a 3 room apartment on ——avenue," sez the Jonses, adding the exact address.

THAT GORGEOUS LAMP

"O! O! Not so good!" sez I; "that neighborhood has got a helluva reputation. That's Bootlegger Boulevard. All the actresses frum the dime burlesque shows are rooming in that neighborhood. I know one named Maggie wich hangs out in that same block. O, baby! Wen it kums to lapping up Liquid Lightning, that filly copa the gold plated garbage can. She certainly likes the old Third Rail Vinegar! She can stow away more Oil Uv Mirth than anybody I ever—OWWW!!!"

"Wot's the matter?" sez the gal friend, real innocent-like.

"Yew know wot happened!" squawks me, "yew kicked my ankle!"

"I'm sorry, I didn't mean to," sez her.

"Apple-grease!" sezs I; "are yew folks furnishing yer own place?"

"O, yes!" admits the Jones Duet.

"I'll bet yew didn't buy twin beds. Har, har!"

"My, wot a gorgeous lamp shade!" sez Mrs. Jones.

"O, I'm so glad yew like it!" yells Malvina.

"It's still raining outside," sez Mr. Jones to me.

ANYBODY SEEN A HAT?

Well, within the next several I asked several questions which caused Mrs. Jones to admire the large amount uv brass I had. Last I suggests to Mal that she get me the damn thing.

About this time the Jonses decided to go home, so after assuring us that they had a lovely time [illegible] I caught up with them before they reached the bottom uv the stairs. In fact they helped pick me up.

Tomorrow night I'm going back after my hat.

That Vulnerable Spot!

Is dressed so nice

But O, my dear!
How perfectly shocking,
To see a hole
In the heel of her stocking!

I don't mind flappers painting
Their faces and their lips,
I am not shocked at boyish bobs

And scorn their wedding ring;
But every morn my clock shocks me
By shrieking, "Ting-a-ling."

A Sad, Sad Sight.

In the middle of the night
I heard a roar.
It seemed to come from somewhere near
Beneath the floor.
I thought of burglars, earthquakes, bombs,
And leaped in haste
To grab my trusty gun from where
It lay in place.
I crept with stealth down endless stairs
That led below.
I turned my flashlight on the scene—
Then turned to go,
A shaken man—I'll tell the world—
At that sad sight.
For rows of bottles dear to me
Had burst, that night.

When men's rolled socks I see!

Queen Mary Has a Wilderness in Palace Grounds

LONDON. — (AP) — Queen Mary's favorite spot in the garden of Buckingham Palace is a place that she calls "The Wilderness." It is a spot entirely without any formal setting, near a lake, and abounding with flowers during spring and summer.

"The Wilderness" receives no special attention from the royal gardeners, and the flowers grow where and how they will. On a warm summer's day there is no more delightful spot in London. The trees hang over the water's edge, making a delightful retreat that might be in the depth of the countryside, instead of the heart of England's capital.

The queen takes great interest in the palace garden. She possesses a library on gardens and gardening, and is very feminine in her passion for beautiful flowers. Since she was a girl her majesty has counted gardening among her chief hobbies.

THE B. AND C. AND THE DUKE

By Duke Balzak

Tha Story of a Poker Game at Sam's House

Nobody heard tha door open.

IT'S been up to me for about three months to have the pot grabbers over for a poker game on account all the other guys have had their turn. Last Tuesday the B. and C. gets informed that Friday night I was gonna have them over and she better get herself some place to go cause all tha rest of tha bunch has got their lions trained to beat it until it's time to serve tha lunch. Instead of getting a pleasant "Alright dear," tha following gas attack is launched:

"You ain't kidding me, are you papa?"

"Whadda ya mean. kidding?"

"Whose gonna clean up after those bums?"

"They don't dirty up anything."

A BAD MESS

"The only thing they don't get ashes on is tha ceiling."

"What did I buy you a vacuum cleaner fer?"

"You ain't paid fer it yet, have ya?"

"What the hell's the difference?"

"That Swede Rosenberg burnt a hole in tha table cloth last time."

"It wasn't him, it was Daniels."

"Your crazy, Daniels spilt tha coffee."

"Why don't ya pipe down with tha yelling? I ain't deaf."

"Supposing ya quit loser, whose gotta suffer?"

"Listen! Crabby, you win. I'll go to dodge meeting Friday instead."

Well, just between you an me I was in a helova mess. I had already told tha swindlers that everything was all set and Wednesday morning I hadda call everybody up and pull a lot of phony excuses as to why I coodn't have them. They natcherally was sore. Some of 'em had to make a lotta promises to get out Friday and here I go an pull a wet blanket on them.

Three o'clock Wednesday afternoon tha day is saved. Sam Mellow calls up an' asks if I cood get out at all Friday night. As long as I had pulled tha lodge act on tha B. and C. I told him I cood, so he says he'll call up tha crowd and we shood come to his place as his ole lady is home visitin' her folks and she'd never be any tha wiser.

THA SORE ACT

When I got home Wednesday tha B. and C. has a swell feed [on which I don't even comment]. Get me! I'm pullin' a "sore-as-hell" act on her. After we eat she says she'll do tha dishes alone if I take her to a movie and I says, "You'll not only do tha dishes alone, but you'll do tha movie alone." And I stood pat. Eight o'clock she asks, cood we go for a bus ride and she gets told that SHE cood. WE coodn't.

Ten o'clock, after finishing tha paper I pull a yawn, don't say, "Good night," an mozee off ta bed. Thursday morning I discover what a sap I been all these years fer not pulling tha "sore act" before. You shooda seen tha breakfast she fixes. Grape fruit [loosened], toast, buttered instead of tha do-it-yerself system, even tha eggs are shelled. And just before I check out she says as how sorry she was about not having tha boys up Friday and it was selfishness on her part. Also that I shood have 'em all up and she'll fix a swell lunch and woodn' I forgive her. As long as I'm all set to play I just tole her not to open up tha subject again as it might cause me to lose my temper and also that the next time she has any women playing bridge in tha afternoon she better chase 'em 'fore I got home or I'd throw 'em out on their ears.

Here's something I didn' reckon on. Sam promised his Mrs. that he woodn' do any stepping while she was gone and that the only place he wood go would be to his lodge meeting on Friday nights. Incidentally, Sam belongs to tha same lodge as I do. He also promised not to have any company at tha house cause she didn't want to come home and find tha place upset. This information was dished during tha course of tha game in tha way of askin' us guys not to get any ashes on tha carpet and to sneak out quietly when we left so as tha neighbors woodn' hear us and maybe spill tha beans.

AN INTERRUPTION

One of tha birds inquired as to when was Sam's jailer due back and we got told either tomorrow or Sunday. For a pleasant surprise she changes her mind and manages to hit Chicago at half past eight Friday night. Knowing Sam wood be at tha lodge and not wanting to sit home alone she drops in at our house. After chewing tha rag till eleven o'clock she induces tha B. and C. to walk over to tha house with her.

On acct. most of tha birds hadda be home by eleven-thirty we played tha consolation round at eleven sharp. For those of you who don't know what a consolation round is, I will explain. You double the limit and play once around tha table in order to give tha losers a chance to lose some more. Well, we was so busy about this time that nobody heard tha door open. What happened was tha women heard our voices, shuck in tha living room and listened while we was settling up. I win 18 bucks. Guess tha women knew how everybody came out. Poor Sam Mellow dropped 16 bucks, twelve pints of ginger ale and two quarts of prewar Gordon that he made just before.

HEAVY ARTILLERY

Just as we was getting on our tip toes to beat it for home, tha gloom-dispensers pop out and Sam started to stutter and tried to kiss tha damper, who didn't even as much as say "Good evening" to any of us. It looked like a storm was gonna brew so we just beat it. Tha B. and C. up to this time ain't cracked a word.

We walked home in silence and when we got there tha heavy artillery starts.

"Nice meeting at tha lodge?"

"Yes, dear."

"How long you been pulling this act?"

"First time."

"Did you win?"

"Cupple a bucks."

"One gentleman won $18."

"Which one?"

"Nine bucks wood be a even split with his wife."

Again I stood pat and refused to slip her that nine.

ANOTHER MENU

Saturday morning's breakfust was delicious.

FASTENED GRAPE FRUIT.
BURNT TOAST.
SOFT BOILED EGGS (HARD BOILED).
HOT WATER, COFFEE COLOR.

Also, a bit of pleasant repartee in the way of:

"So your gonna throw my girl friends out on their ears if you catch us playing bridge." NO ANSWER.

"Sam didn't sleep at home last night." NO ANSWER.

On tha way downtown I figgered I better call Sam up at his office and ask how he came out. He tells me 3 steps at a time, tha bottom 3 first.

After quittin' time I went over to pay Lee Baker 15 bucks what I've owed him fer some time and when I started counting I'm a son of a gun if a certain party ain't gone an' nipped nine dollars while I'm sleeping.

P. S.—Twin beds would be a greater invention if they was placed in separate rooms.

No Stars in the Air.

Because his accompanist had received several request for solos, a certain radio tenor strode sullenly toward a chair, remarking: "Well, I guess the star takes a back seat." The usually good natured program manager could not resist an amused look about the studio and asked innocently: "Where's the star?" E. C. M.

Her Nose Knows!

I once knew a woman with a large Roman nose. One day she was conversing with my mother and had begun to tell her how proud she was of her nose: "You know," she said, "that only a person who is an aristocrat has a nose as I have." V. S.

Small "Understanding."

A friend who often goes shopping with me has very tiny feet and upon her small "foundation" has built a superiority complex of giant proportions. She takes savage delight in calling attention to my number sixes, knowing that her twos will profit in contrast. I have spent many useless hours waiting for her to try on shoes in various stores and cause commotion among the clerks who seldom have calls for her size and last, when she has no intention of buying at all if she can be fitted. That's just one of Cinderella's little tricks whereby she spreads the doctrine of her tiny "tootsies." It was the proverbial last straw the other day when she told me: "It isn't only on account of the looks that I pride myself on my small feet. There's more to it than that. You know, small feet are sort of an indication of patrician ancestry." F. A. S.

Misconstrued.

The waiter in the waffle house had been very attentive and deferential all through the meal, so I smiled and gave him a liberal tip. When he helped me on with my coat he whispered in my ear: "How about a little date tonight?" A. M.

She Admits It!

At school there is a girl liked by the seniors. The other day she said to me, "Well, I'll take you to the M. A. C. club dance. I know you will be glad to go with one of the school's prettiest girls." C. H.

INFORMALLY

Hollywood Admires Chicago's Sky-Line

By Genevieve Forbes Herrick

Movie Notables Work Hard for Publicity Here

ONE of the first lessons a Hollywood star learns, and certainly the last thing the press agent forgets, is that Chicago is a railroad center.

And cinema land is correspondingly in this city's debt. For it means that every time a lady of the screen leaves her California bungalow for her European villa and a possible divorce, she has several hours of leisure in Chicago.

Time to be photographed with the engineer of the train that carried her this far east; time to be interviewed at the depot where she arrives; time to get into a negligee, up in her suite at the hotel, there to be photographed and interviewed; time to buy a fresh bunch of orchids and be photographed and interviewed once more as the train pulls out for New York. And time, above all, to intone deep, throaty praises of "Chicago, there is really nothing like it; with its magnificent sky line."

DOUBLE ON CHICAGO

What works for the trip east goes double for the return trip west. For this same Chicago, still a railroad center, affords once more a purposeful loitering place where the film star, back from Europe with a French maid, twelve trunks full of clothes and, possibly, a titled husband, makes a stopover to praise old fashioned honeymoons, exhibit new fashioned jewels, and sing one more song in admiration of Chicago's lake, her boulevard system, even her smoky aura.

A Chicago interview with such a pilgrim starts either in California or in New York. As I have suggested, it's better when it starts in the east.

First of all, then, comes the telegram dispatched by the press agent in New York. It reads something like this:

"Vedette Salerno arrives in Chicago Tuesday. She will be in car 6; drawing room A [always drawing room A]. Miss Salerno is en route from southern Spain where she spent several weeks in getting local color for her coming interpretation of 'Carmen,' to Hollywood where she will begin work on her new picture immediately. Miss Salerno is accompanied by"—and here follows the roster of press representatives, film directors and assistants and assistant assistants, secretaries, maids, and, possibly, a bridegroom.

A CROWD GATHERS

With all this advance notice, it can hardly be an overwhelming surprise to Miss Vedette when she is met by the gentlemen of the press. But she usually goes through all the appropriate gestures of amazement, gentle dismay, pique, reluctant capitulation, and annoyed boredom at the proceeding.

But I'm getting ahead of the story. After the telegrams have arrived, the reporters and the cameramen go down to the railway station and gather around gate 6.

"Hey, who's comin' today?" queries a red cap.

"Pola Negri and her prince," somebody volunteers. Then the crowd gathers. Some are the casual travelers who chance to be near the gate. Others are especial fans of this particular star. And then there is the familiar fringe of people, most of them women, who meet trains for a thrill. There is one woman in town—I never did know who she was—who gets jostled and pushed about once a week, in her determined and successful attempts to get into drawing room and within speaking distance of the celebrity, whether it be film star, pugilist, African huntsman, or a prominent divorcee.

Elects to slip on a dressing gown.

But this woman's favorite is Gloria Swanson. Every time Gloria goes traveling this woman is on the job. She slithers past policemen; she jockeys for positions on train tracks. And when she gets near Gloria she goes into a rhetorical hysteria that resolves itself into a series of gasps interspersed with, "O, I think you're wonderful."

She's a terrible pest, but she's making a success of her avocation.

THE STAR ARRIVES

At last the train comes in. The crowd mills around car No. 6. For all the surprise that the traveling celebrity pretends to register, she, or he, is dressed for the part. Every hair is in place; every jewel is shining brightly; the dog or the monkey, or whatever animal is the vogue that instant, is all combed and perfumed. And the flowers are growing on the star's shoulder, at her waist, in baskets that her maid carries.

Sometimes the cinema queen dresses more for a movie than for a journey. Just the other day a cold, raw, March day it was, I met a widely known movie star. She stepped off the train into a blustering wind; gowned in white, with white shoes, a white hat, and a summer ermine wrap. If the little office girl in the big factory put on such a costume for a train journey everybody would smile pityingly and say how too bad it was that she didn't know any better. But this lady from Hollywood tripped away in inappropriate finery to her rose filled apartment, there to issue fashion dicta and other important statements.

If the arriving star is a man, he, too, has his makeup all assembled. The flower is in his button hole; his lemon colored gloves are faultlessly clean, and the Japanese valet follows six paces in the rear with the swank raincoat.

ORCHIDS, DOGS, ETC.

The local representatives of the film star's company cluster about; they bring more flowers, preferably orchids. There is a rush and a swirl and the celebrity makes a bluff at making off down the platform. She is too tired, too nervous, too busy, or too something, to be photographed. But let the cameraman take her at her word, and begin to pack up his grip, and the lady has a change of heart. She is coy, gracious, acquiescent.

She cuddles her dog; or if the dog is up forward in the baggage car she recollects that now is the time to make a terrible fuss over his whereabouts. Which she proceeds to do. The dog being absent, she clutches, often, some new gewgaw from Europe, a curious doll, a novelty handbag, a fancy cane.

But the best photographic accessory of all is a new husband. For Hollywood publicity seems to be swinging the pendulum over toward superdomesticity. A honeymoon the new theory is, rates higher than a divorce.

So Gloria and her marquis, and Pola and her prince, not to speak of others with less ancestral in-laws, do a Darby and Joan on the train steps.

NOW THE INTERVIEW

Then comes the interview, as the movie star hurries out to the taxi. The conversation is mostly about big cities

Gentlemen:

We have had such very definite results from our ad placed each week in your Metropolitan Section that we feel that you will be interested in hearing about them.

Because of an absolute check on the ad we know that it is not unusual for us to have as many as fifteen inquiries and to get ten or more orders for paint jobs from them.

The results have been gratifying to the extent that we contemplate continuing our ad in the Metropolitan Section each week.

Dear Sir:

It may be of some satisfaction for you to know that we are greatly pleased with the results obtained from the advertising carried in your Metropolitan section.

Just recently we have opened a new branch store at Seventy-First Street and South Shore Drive, and the business that we have enjoyed has been very gratifying. In fairness to you, we honestly believe that a large part of this success was due to the advertising placed in your medium.

Having been in the cleaning and dyeing business on the South Side for over a generation, it is a pleasant surprise to us to notice the many new accounts this publicity has given us.

Our firm is planning on an extensive expansion program, and we hope to use your columns more liberally in the future, being satisfied that it will pay us.

Thanking you and your staff for the co-operation extended us, we are,

WEST—"130 Prospects from One Small Ad"

CHICAGO OIL CO.
3051-59 North Kedzie Avenue

June 4, 1927

The Chicago Tribune,
Tribune Tower, Chicago

Gentlemen:

We heartily endorse the Metropolitan Section of the Sunday Tribune as a valuable advertising medium.

Having one of the most modern and up-to-date greasing and oiling stations in Chicago, we decided to tell our story to Tribune readers. We started with small copy in the first issue of the Sunday Metropolitan Section, and have been increasing the size of our advertising as the returns have been coming in. One coupon ad - 75x2 - brought us 130 direct replies.

We consider these results indicative of the Tribune's pulling power in outlying territories.

Very truly yours,
Wm. Mandell
Manager

TODAY three more advertisers add their testimony about the remarkable new sales force The Sunday Tribune has created in its Metropolitan Section for neighborhood advertisers. On the North Side an automobile refinishing firm nets ten paint jobs and more from one small ad. On the South Side the Metropolitan Section carried most of the load in making a new branch cleaning and dyeing establishment a success. On the West Side an oiling and greasing station gets 130 inquiries from one small ad.

And note from the letters that there was no uncertainty about these results. They were identified positively as the product of Metropolitan Section advertising.

Only one of the three has used over 1,000 lines to date. Yet all three businesses are showing mounting sales—and as they grow they can advertise more extensively and grow still faster.

This tested sales producing medium is equally available to others who want the same results. The Metropolitan Section offers outlying merchants the chance to buy Tribune circulation on their side of the city only, at a decidedly favorable rate. Any neighborhood merchant can now place the sales-producing power of The Tribune behind his business—the same power that has built many a million-dollar volume in Chicago and the Chicago territory. Send for a Tribune man and the facts today. See how easily you can place the proved power of The Sunday Tribune's new Metropolitan Section behind your business now!

THE SAY-SO OF HOLLERAN YELL

by WESTBROOK PEGLER

Wherein a Manager Ruins His Own Logical Contender

I taught him to say 'Want-um heap big weiner schnitzel' with a slight German accent."

I AM very cautious by nature and I try to keep my cue chalked at all times, but there are occasions when occurrences will come along and occur in an unexpected manner and make a sucker out of a gentleman when he thinks he has protected himself in every way.

It seems to me that a great many of our big men have adopted my policy, as I notice that if you walk up to some big man in public life and ask him if he will have a drink he will not give you a definite answer until he finds out whether you want him to have a drink or don't want him to. And I have known some politicians who would not condemn Judas Iscariot until they investigated popular opinion on the subject.

But I have been thinking of an occurrence that occurred when I was the proprietor of an Indian heavyweight by the name of Chief Pain-in-the-Face, which goes to show that, no matter how much you may chalk your cue, you are bound to tear a hole in the table some time.

THE LIEDERKRANZ TRIBE

The chief was a New York bum by the name of Julius Sulzburger, but he had a very dark complexion, so I got him an Indian hat with some turkey feathers on it at a masquerade store and my affectionate old lady sewed some beads on his tights, and whenever we had a fight I would illustrate him with pictures of reindeers and cowboys and such things to make him look like an Indian.

Although he was not a very good fighter, he was a fairly smart bum, and I easily taught him to say such Indian phrases as "Want-um heap big weiner schnitzel," or "Ugh! Ugh! Me want-um borrow five dollars," with a slight German accent.

All this made my stiff look very picturesque to the public, and to show you how smart he was I will assert that one day out west when some Indians at the ringside started to talk Indian to him he talked back to them in German, so I explained to these Indians that he belonged to a tribe of Indians way up in Canada called the Leiderkranz Indians, and did not speak anything but Leiderkranz.

MONKEY BUSINESS

The heavyweight champion at the time was a very terrible bum and he was afraid to fight anybody, so I challenged him on behalf of Chief Pain-in-the-Face, figuring that we would get a lot of work in the clubs around the country as the logical contenders. But, as I stated, my bum was not very good, either, and when I suggested this plan to him he stated to me:

"Well, my dear sir, I think that is a heap fine propostion, but if we do this I am liable to run into some tough bums some night and forget to duck already, so on the whole I think it would be better to hire a monkey."

I would like to explain that when you are taking a logical contender around the country you do not wish to have him chilled unexpectedly by some unknown bum without any reputation, as this would be a great indignity for a logical contender, so it is considered good business to hire some friend to go along and take the falls. This kind of bum is known as a monkey, and these monkeys can be of great assistance in building up a logical contender's reputation, especially if they bleed well, because the public then sees that your contender is a great puncher and a man killer.

A RIFT IN THE LOOT

The heavyweight champion of the world was so terrible that most of the experienced monkeys had retired from the monkey business to become logical contenders, and we had some difficulty finding a suitable monkey. But we finally engaged one by the name of Ball, who was called Rubber Ball because he used to rub the bums in the gymnasium, although some authorities asserted that he was called Rubber Ball because he spent so much time bouncing off the floor of the ring.

The first place we boxed we introduced Rubber Ball as Sergt. Tewksworthy, the champion of the English army, and the next place we introduced him as Ole Oleson, the Minnesota lumberjack, and he would state, "By jove, you old blasted blighter," or, "I bane tank so," or if we introduced him as the champion of Spain he would go around calling people "senorita," and this was very helpful as it perfected the illusion for the public.

I must state in justice to this bum that he was strictly honorable and sportsmanlike for about a month, and he would ask me before each fight, "Well, when do I take my dive?" and I would say, "We will put on the knockout in the eighth round this evening," or if we were catching a train or there was not much resources in the box office, I might state, "Let us have a sensational knockout in the second round tonight."

A BAD SITUATION

But one day when we were playing a game with dice on the train, Julius Plain-in-the-Face got into an argument with the monkey and the monkey called him a Dinkelspeil Indian and threatened to take a punch at him the next time they got into the ring. Such low ethics horrified me and my bum, because clean sport should be conducted strictly in a spirit of friendly rivalry, so I dismissed the monkey and he got off the train at the next station. This left us in a very bad position, because we had an engagement for Chief Pain-in-the-Face to lick the monkey under the name of Jeffrey Wentworth, the champion of Harvard, the next night.

As soon as we got to our town I told the promoter that Jeffrey Wentworth had to go back to Harvard to learn some more lessons and therefore we could not have any fight, but he said, "Oh, my dear sir, I have sold $2,500 worth of tickets and I have given $800 of the money away in presents to the chief of police and our state senator, so it would be a terrible blow to clean sport in this town if your bum does not fight anybody, as I could not refund this money to the subscribers."

"Well," I stated, "I certainly will not let him fight any of your local bums as he has a very sensitive nature and if he should happen to kill one of your citizens it would give the Indian race a bad name. But," I asserted, "I used to be a bum myself, and if you wish me to impersonate Jeffrey Wentworth I will do so and we will keep this matter a secret for the good of the game."

So that was our plan, and I thought it was a very fine thing for sport, but as I have stated, there are occasions when events will come along and occur with great unexpectedness, no matter how well a gentleman chalks his cue.

'RAY FOR HARVARD!

That night in the first round my bum hit me a paste in the back of the head that must have knocked me crazy, because I didn't come to until the middle of the fourth round, and when I did come to my bum was asleep on the floor and the spectators were cheering for Jeffrey Wentworth of Harvard, amid great confusion.

"What has happened?" I inquired, "and why is my logical contender lying down in the middle of the ring in this manner?"

"A regular Harvard cheer for Jeffrey Wentworth," the spectators shouted, and I then realized that while I was in this irresponsible condition due to the paste on the back of the head, I had chased my bum all over the ring and finally hit Chief Pain-in-the-Face a belt on the potato and knocked out my own logical contender.

Holleran Yell will tell us more of his trials and tribulations with his "stumblebums" in an early issue.

and little children. How splendid is Chicago, and what a dear little youngster that is standing there at the door! If the star has time she kisses the bewildered youngsters. Then on to the hotel.

If he or she is a topnotch star it's a de luxe suite, with a sitting room resembling the Coliseum. Lesser stars have to put up with smaller quarters.

Now comes the interview en masse. The star hurries to her apartment and does a quick change into a negligee. A man star often elects to slip into a brilliantly hued dressing gown. Sometimes the business suit does very well.

Sometimes there are conversational hurdles that the herons and heroines from Hollywood have to take neatly and quickly in order to avoid publicity that is not all golden. We can usually tell how near to an unpleasant event is the star's association by the general temper of the interview. If the traveler is in the midst of such an unpleasant episode he or she is pretty sure to be too fatigued to see any one. The interview will come through a maid or a secretary or a judicious press agent.

Then, as the dangerous publicity fades into the distance the star grows sweeter and sweeter.

MABEL'S PEANUTS

For instance, when officialdom was anxious to find out just why Mabel Normand ate peanuts in front of a certain home one eventful day, Miss Normand was exceedingly reticent on her Chicago stop-overs. But later, when the peanut chapter was closed, Miss Normand grew conversational, even chummy. She went so far that one morning, as ten of us sat in her apartment and asked her of this and that, she looked over at a hat one of the ladies with pencils was wearing. Not a prepossessing bonnet. In fact, so the girl told me afterward, a basement bargain.

But Mabel Normand, warming up to her rôle, beamed over at this chapeau and murmured, as if she really meant it:

"Oh, what a perfectly darling hat. I must get one like it!"

And Pola Negri, reticent to the point of sobs instead of words, when she went through Chicago on her way to Valentino's funeral, sought to nullify any bad impression she might then have made, by radiating warm adjectives when she came here, just the other day, with a new husband and an old, old silver cross.

SAME OLD STUFF

Of course there are some things you must never ask the stars about. Don't mention peanuts to Mabel Normand. Don't grow geographic to Gloria Swanson and ask her if she remembers the little house on Mohawk street where she was born. And don't talk to Pola Negri of her new sister-in-law. These are some of the fundamental rules of the game.

As a matter of fact the interview is usually so patterned that it could be prepared beforehand in the office. In a few instances the answers could be left blank and checked hurriedly. It's an inevitable prophecy that the Hollywood travelers will choose to say much of the coming picture, its magnitude, its difference from all previous pictures.

Then there'll be the old patterned eulogy of Chicago, and the "dear public."

Even Peggy Joyce, who makes her own patterns, has been known to pull a bromide about Chicago's weather. She once said she liked it, "because it's so invigorating; it makes me feel like working." But she said it as she stepped aboard a train going away from Chicago.

The west bound train arrives shortly before noon. What with pictures and talks, and cuddling the dog, it's high noon by the time the star reaches the de luxe suite of the hotel. Then comes the costume change, and the mass interview. Luncheon next, followed by a shopping tour. The star may have just returned from Paris with seventeen trunks, and may have collected ten more in New York, but she must go shopping in Chicago. A present for her mother, or some toys for somebody's "kiddies." That makes a new lead for the later editions of the papers. A lost dog isn't a bad item for the late afternoon. Another change of costume, and fresh flowers for the taxi-ride to the evening train for California, and once more drawing room A.

POLA AND NORMA

Sometimes the stars get a bad break. For competition isn't good for these Chicago stop-overs.

Why, just the other day Norma Talmadge got her schedule so confused that she came to town the same day that Pola Negri and Prince Serge Mdivani arrived. Worse than that, the two women stopped at the same hotel, Pola Negri had suite 108; Norma had a corresponding suite up eight floors. But since everything is relative, Norma, who can be ever so haughty, was able to get the solitude she often says she wants, while the newlyweds down in 108 posed for pictures.

It takes not only the engineer of a train but a florist, several press agents, a modiste, a maid, a book of poetry, a dog in a basket, and an essay on Chicago weather to get any Hollywood star through Chicago with credit.

And—but I must stop now. They just laid a telegram on my desk. It informs me that Lottie Pickford, Jack Pickford, Colleen Moore, and John McCormick are arriving here. I've got to go and meet them.

[Copyright: 1927: By The Chicago Tribune.]

(Another story in this series by Mrs. Herrick will appear in an early issue of the Metropolitan section.)

I WORRY

What's your pet worry? Tell it in a short and snappy jingle and we'll pay you $2 if we print it. Address Worries, Chicago Sunday Tribune.

On to Ontario!

I'm going to Ontario
To quench my awful thirst;
But what worries me is this:
What shall I order first?

Now, if two dollars you'll remit,
For this be-jangled rhyme,
I'll buy myself a permit,
And have a lovely time. J. D. S.

O, Well!

A little verse I'd like to type,
And send it to ye ed.
Perhaps 'twill help to light my pipe,
My thoughts seem dumb and dead.

I worry 'cause my head is dense,
Composed of i-vo-ry;
I worry—for there's lack of sense
In jingles "writ" by me. K. H.

Before Very Long.

While others are laughing gaily,
In a prison of care I'm walled;
And my worries increase daily,
For soon I shall be bald.

J. H.

Vacation Problems.

Now, where to spend vacation days
is what perplexes me;
I've pondered over booklets, a dozen
or two or three.
Sometimes I favor the countryside,
sometimes the sounding sea,
And then a camp in the cool, green
woods seems to beckon me.
O! friend of mine, in a similar fix,
do tell, which shall it be!

M. B.

Faith Sometimes Wavers.

When I start driving and am broke,
My worry's always growing,
Lest all the gas run out before
I reach the place I'm going! S. E.

I worry, worry, worry,
And my heart is full of fears,
For my husband hasn't kissed me

HISTORICAL AMERICA by CLIFFORD RAYMOND

Ticonderoga and the Great War Path

[Copyright; 1927; By The Chicago Tribune.]

FROM the broad water of the St. Lawrence at Sorel, some forty-five miles or so below Montreal, but north of it, a waterway with portages and carries goes to New York harbor. Sorel, still a French town with habitants bringing their produce of vegetables, meat and tobacco to the market in the city square, was the old French seignory of that name. The lord of the manor built a fort where the Richelieu river flows in from the south, and later it was known as Fort Richelieu, for the cardinal whose name the river bears and who did most of all men to make New France in Canada a failure for France, although in Quebec province it is French today with the idiom of the days of Richelieu.

The seignor of Sorel with his fort was the final defense of Montreal from direct Indian attack by water from the Iroquois country further south. The divide of the waterway is at the head of Lake George in New York state. From there is a sixteen mile carry to the Hudson. From the Hudson a party of warriors or traders or an army could go north by the carry to the head of Lake George and use its ordinarily placid waters to the portage at Ticonderoga into Lake Champlain.

The scene was and still is of great beauty. In the water descent from Lake George to Lake Champlain there is a fall at a time used for a mill. Hills and barely penetrable forest cupped the shores.

Invaded by Champlain.

Up at the foot of Lake Champlain is an island the French had named Isle aux Noix, which with an English tongue pronouncing it sounds strangely like Illinois. But it was only the isle of nuts, and the Illini were in their own language and day "men." There was a fortification on the island of which there are remains today. It was the last defense of the lakes from attack from the south.

Champlain was the leader of the first white men who saw this waterway. He yielded to the importunities of the St. Lawrence Algonquin Indians and to his own curiosity, and in 1609 he went with a war party of the northern Indians who wanted to see what effect his firearms would have on their military superiors, the Iroquois.

The spot where this curiosity was satisfied is now supposed to be in the neighborhood of the carry between Lake Champlain and Lake George, or between Ticonderoga and Crown Point. Champlain killed two Iroquois chiefs and the Algonquin Indians caught some prisoners and carried them back north for torture. Champlain wrote that the Iroquois sang plaintive songs.

This was the opening of the waterway for history. Soon the French along the St. Lawrence had to build their forts. The Iroquois recovered from their fear of firearms, and they started north for revenge. They were the Romans of the American aborigines. Their home was in the valley of the Mohawk in New York, with the Mohawk tribe to the east by the Hudson and the Senecas to the west at Niagara, five nations in all, until their kindred, the Tuscaroras, came up, after a losing war with the South Carolinian colonists, from the Cherokee mountain regions, and made the Five Nations the Six Nations.

Once an Indian Warpath.

Before our history this waterway had been an Indian warpath. These Romans of the primeval forests, the Iroquois, had military control of a vast area their war parties traveled. They had proconsuls on the Ohio, and fear of them was on the Ottawa in Canada and at Michillimackinac.

The shots Champlain fired in 1609 fixed in some Iroquois tribes and clans of the Long House, or general assembly of the nation, a bitterness toward the French which never died. This was true particularly of the Mohawks to the east. It was least true of the Senecas to the west, at Niagara. They were less stanch. They accommodated themselves to intrigue and persuasion, and let the French down the further western waterway of Lake Erie, French Creek, the Allegheny river, and the Ohio, while the Mohawks and the English were able to hold the Champlain route. And yet they only held at the extreme southern end for a long time.

The French had Fort Richelieu at Sorel, Fort Chambly at the rapids and basin of the Richelieu river at Chambly, the fort on the Isle aux Noix, Fort Frederick at Crown Point on Lake Champlain, and Fort Carillon at the carry between Lake Champlain and Lake George. It was later and is now Fort Ticonderoga, but Montcalm, the great, fine minded French soldier, greater even than his conqueror, Wolfe, had named it Carillon, for the waterfall which sounded in his ears at night as a chime of bells. He also said it was a bad fort, and would be "a trap in which an honest man would lose his reputation." This was most singularly proved to be true in 1777, when Burgoyne drove the American Gen. St. Clair out of it by mounting a few cannon on a higher hill which commanded it, and in doing so nearly broke the heart of the American revolution.

Benedict Arnold.

No other waterway on the North American continent has seen such military action as has this stretch of river, lake, and portage between the harbors of Montreal and New York.

The first American navy fought and lost its battle off Valcour Island in Lake Champlain under that most remarkable man, hero and traitor, Benedict Arnold. That was when the American invasion of Canada, undertaken before the Declaration of Independence and while Boston was besieged, had proved a heroic winter failure [to be reverted to in these articles], and when in the retreat of 1776 it seemed impossible for the sick and dispirited troops of the colonies to cover their withdrawal from Canada and to hold the lakes.

The British won at Valcour Island, but winning, they did not dare come farther south than Crown Point. The Americans took refuge at Ticonderoga, where they held their ground. Carleton, the British commander, went back to Canada, and it was a year later that Burgoyne came down the same route to be defeated at Saratoga.

This route is where Abercrombie was defeated by Montcalm in a greater disaster than that of Braddock at Fort Duquesne at the forks of the Ohio. It is where Gen. Dieskau was captured by the colonials and British. It is where the massacre of Fort William Henry took place. It is the real dark and bloody ground of prehistoric and historic America. It has been the jugular vein of America. Its recorded contests began when Champlain fired his arquebuses. Its last great fight was near Plattsburg, when the gallant MacDonough won a great naval battle in 1814, one harder to win than Perry's in Lake Erie and one in which defeat would have been more serious.

Historic Memories.

This waterway has the story of Jane McCrea, the story of the brilliant and beloved Englishman, Lord Howe, killed in a skirmish which lost a battle with Montcalm, and it has one of the world's greatest ghost stories in the death of Maj. Duncan Campbell of the Black Watch, the Scotch Highlanders whom George II. recruited from the border marches.

At Ticonderoga the waterway gave Ethan Allen, the Green Mountain boy, his fame for American school boys, who know him for his "great Jehovah and the Continental Congress." At Ticonderoga the waterway saw the ruin of the British Gen. Abercrombie in the French war and the near ruin of the American Gen. St. Clair in the revolution. Farther down, near the Hudson, it saw Burgoyne's army enclosed and taken by American patriots who might have lost their war if they had not won at Bennington and Saratoga.

It is a present day wonderland for the traveler and tourist and its ruins and monuments preserve its past.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

Bands in the Summer Style Parade Are Many and Play a Gay Melody of Chic.

By Bettina Bedwell.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—No parade is worth much without at least one band, and fashion's parade, acting on the principle that if a little is good, a lot is much better, runs largely to bands, this season. Almost every daytime dress, however simple, has its coterie of bands, and the manner in which these bands are arranged makes ut a large part of simple summer chic. Naturally, they have rhythm, and whether this rhythm is of the jazz variety or the more classic depends on whether the model, coat, dress or cape, is designed for debutante or grande dame.

When in doubt about trimming your summer frock a duet, trio or quartet of bands will make the melody of chic a sure thing. Of course, Paris has a way with bands, and there are rules and tempo and all of that. Bands often supply the contrast in color to a one tone frock, or they may, again, follow the single tone and be equally fashionable. Bands, whether of the home town Saturday night concert kind, or the crêpe and mousseline bands of your dress, require a lot of hard work to achieve harmonious results.

They are, as worn in Paris on the models of the grands couturiers, hand made, with a lot of infinitesimal stitches making them march in straight or curved lines. Paris has an antipathy to the sewing machine for anything but inside seams that form the major construction lines of a garment. Anything that shows must be fait à la main if it is to have the grand chic. Making by hand gets an exquisite effect, although we Americans often object to the fragility of it and the tendency to come apart when we indulge in our youthful, often strenuous pastimes. You can resort to the machine, if it means peace of mind, and have all of your bands stitched fast so there is no danger of disruption, but Paris will continue to go out in hand stitched ones, even if that means a restriction of personal activity. Anyway, I will tell you something about the why and the wherefore of the band in summer styles, and you can settle this question between hand and machine labor to suit your own selves.

One of the favored ways of using bands in Paris is to tie together two contrasting materials into one frock. This has its advantages, not only in resulting chic, but in enabling one to produce a smart frock from two remnants of material neither of them of sufficient yardage to produce a frock all alone.

Our first model is a Worth dress that uses printed and plain material, about two yards of each. Although M. Jean Charles Worth probably wasn't thinking at all of economy, but only of getting a beautiful effect, when he made at, it none the less can serve very well economical purposes.

The blouse of this frock is navy and white printed crêpe georgette, and the skirt is plain navy. The manipulation of the bands is masterly, and achieves the purpose of making this two material dress one charming unit. On the sleeves, which are modified bishop, are three diagonal bands of plain dark blue georgette, and the collar is a band of dark blue tied in a bow on the left shoulder. On the skirt, which has four box plaits across the front, are placed bands of the printed material, while the triple bands that make the girdle are printed georgette veiled in plain blue. The down curve of this girdle is a point of design that is extremely clever, and that in itself presents a line which is most becoming.

In the second model sketched by Miss Pickering the use of contrasting bands is shown in the approved Paris manner. The color scheme is a favorite here—black and white. Beer, whose model this is, uses black satin for the straight slip beneath the frock, which is made of white georgette. As you can see, this over dress is banded with black georgette. The straight bodice has a simulated gilet of white, edged with a band of black georgette, which in turn is edged on both sides by exquisite drawn work bands.

The bishop sleeves are trimmed with drawn work motifs. The skirt is split at the center front to show the black satin slip beneath, and is banded also in black georgette and in double work bands. Over the hips which are slightly shirred, are placed drawn work motifs, these being repeated on the waist under the arms.

This is the type of frock that the fashionable woman wears a great deal in Paris for all kinds of afternoon affairs and for the informal dinner in the Bois. Bands on such frocks generally afford a rather striking contrast to the dress itself, and are usually set in the gown with the more elaborate and intricate kinds of hand work, such as drawn work and hemstitching in contrast to the simple stitches which are used to attach bands on daytime and sports dresses.

It looks, now, as if printed crêpes and chiffons will have, if anything, a more important place in styles than in former seasons. And these, too, are often treated to a bit of jazzing up by means of bands. Where a printed dress is worn with a plain coat, the band does the necessary office of uniting the two differing fabrics, and for the single frock, bands of plain material are also employed to advantage.

Our third model, created by Premet, who is a master of the single frock that goes by its wild lone without any sort of wrap being necessary, makes use of band trimming in a modified way. This dress is made of black chiffon, printed with shaded flowers and leaves of green. The dress is cut in a straight line, with long tight sleeves, and on the left side of the skirt is set a circular panel, which crosses the front of the skirt in a diagonal line and meets a long scarf which forms the collar and drapery.

This scarf of green georgette is banded along the edge on the right side with a band of black chiffon, which extends just up to the square neckline. The scarf itself passes around the neck and falls to the waist on the left side in front. The sleeves have wide fitted cuffs of black. A more gracious or more slender line than that of this frock is hard to imagine.

About the cleverest use of bands that Paris is offering is shown on our fourth model, which is the summer coat dress, light enough in weight for a hot day and giving the effect of a coat and dress. It's the kind of frock to wear in town when you want to look trim and tailored without being prostrated by the weight of a coat. Philippe et Gaston, whose model this is, have used navy blue crêpe romaine to make it.

Analyzed, the frock is a straight slip with long semi-fitted sleeves, and a clever V cut at the center front of the hemline. Over this are placed two straight half coats with curved edges. The edges are all edged with bands of dull silver and so are the cuffs and the collar. Over the collar of dark blue is placed a smaller collar of gray georgette.

Printed and plain georgette in navy blue and white make this Worth dress, sketched at the extreme left. Bands of plain material appear on the printed blouse, and of printed fabric on the plain skirt.

Next, white crepe georgette is banded with black georgette in this smart afternoon frock from Beer. Drawnwork bands and motifs edge the georgette. It is worn over a black satin slip.

Third, black and green printed chiffon and bands of black make a charming summer harmony in this Premet afternoon dress.

Lastly, dark blue crepe romaine banded with silver forms a stunning coat dress for hot weather. Designed by Philippe et Gaston.

HOW TO USE THE PATTERNS

A JUMPER frock is both useful and attractive looking, and pattern No. 706 is interesting and not difficult to handle. The jumper is sleeveless and collarless, both these parts being furnished by the blouse worn with it. Several blouses could be made, some of them of sheer white batiste, dimity, or linen; while a couple of others could be made of washable crêpe de chine in any desired color.

The jumper will look well made of kasha, one of the heavier crêpes, or linen, or silk broadcloth. It is cut in two pieces, and in the front is a deep "V" opening. After the seams have been finished, finish the neck and armholes with an inside or outside fitted facing or binding, hem it by hand across the bottom, and set in the pockets. It is a good way, in making these pockets, to baste a straight strip of the material over the basting, marking the slash and then marking the strip with the basting for the slash, also. Stitch close to this basting on both sides, and across the ends, and then cut through both thicknesses exactly on the basting.

Make tiny clips at the end so that the strip may be turned to the wrong side of the dress without puckering. Let the strip show as a binding on the right side, baste down all around and press well. Sew one of the pocket pieces to the upper edge of the strip, and one to the bottom edge. Then sew the pocket together in a seam down the sides and across the bottom. Overcast the pocket opening together in loose, large stitches and leave them in until the dress is finished.

The fullness on the shoulders is a becoming feature and prevents that "drawn" look over the bust one sometimes sees.

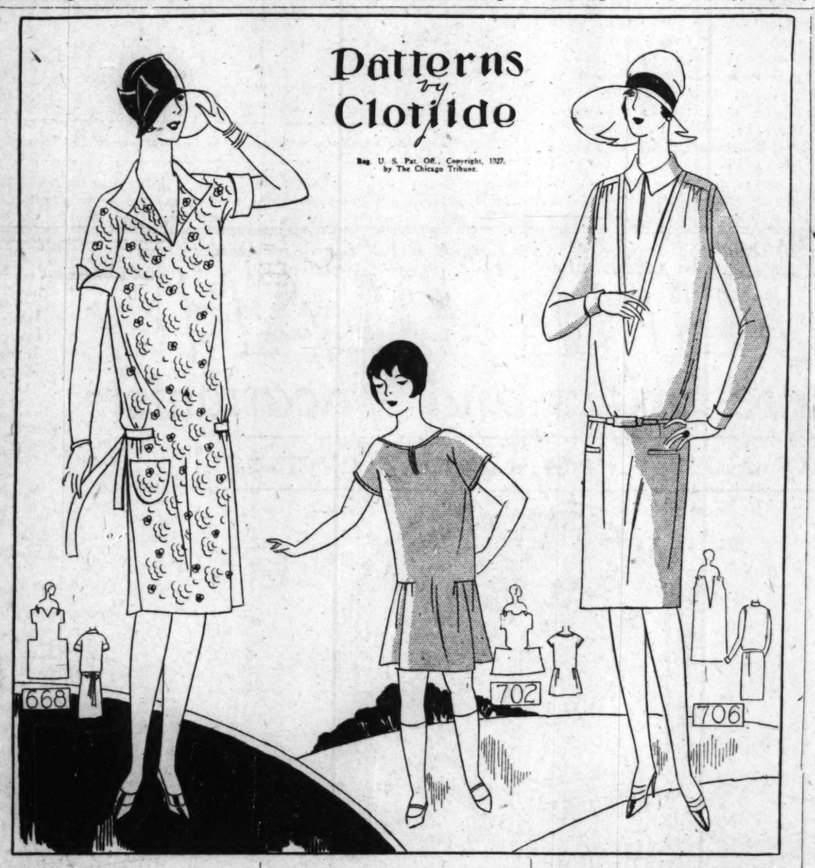
The blouse is finished across the bottom with a casing for elastic, and at the neck in the front it is slashed, and the edges bound. This slashed place makes it possible to slip over the head.

Pattern No. 702 is for a pretty dress for a young girl. Taffeta, crêpe, challis or most wash materials will be suitable and the bottom of the dress and sleeves may be picoted, bound or faced, as fancy dictates. Both front and back are slashed at the sides at the hip line, and the lower slashed edge gathered and stitched to the upper slashed edge. This gives the needed fullness to the skirt. The drop shoulders form the short sleeves, and the neck and slashed opening are finished with a binding.

The seams where the dress is slashed at the sides could be covered with some small embroidery design in cross stitch or in the laid work, and the same design could be used each side of the slashed opening at the neck.

Patterns by Clotilde

Reg. U. S. Pat. Off. Copyright, 1927, by The Chicago Tribune.



668—Woman's dress. Sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3¾ yards of 36 inch material.

702—Girl's dress. Size 4, 6, 8, and 10 years. Size 10 requires 2 yards of 36 inch material.

706—Woman's or miss' jumper dress. Sizes 16, 18, and 20 years, and 34, 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 5⅝ yards of 36 or 40 inch material for the jumper and 2⅛ yards for the blouse.

Pattern No. 668 is for just the sort of dress that will be nice to wear at home many afternoons or mornings, depending on the material used, to a great extent. It is cut in two pieces—front and back—and at a low waist line the material extends out a way. Inverted plaits are formed on both sides, bringing the extended parts back so that a straight line will be made from armhole to hem. This also gives a graceful fullness when walking, without destroying the straight line effect.

Be sure that in laying the plaits you keep the under fold as straight and smooth as the upper. Baste each one from top to bottom and don't remove the bastings until the final pressing is given to the finished dress.

A string belt or sash of the dress material is attached to the front on each side and is tied in a bow in the back.

The dress is slashed down from the neck in the center front, underfaced and joined to the collar. It is pretty to pipe or finish the shoulder seams with a narrow band. In these short kimono sleeves, Prettily shaped turned back cuffs finish the sleeves, and a rather large patch pocket is stitched to the right side of the dress.

COSMETICS DRIVE AWAY THE BLUES

As Effective as Philosophy or Medicine Are the Good Old Standbys: Powder, Rouge and Lipstick.

by Antoinette Donnelly

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—An efficient business woman of my acquaintance tells me that when she becomes particularly harassed about her work and the worries of making useful citizens out of three small sons, she doesn't pick up any book on philosophy, nor does she sit down in an attempt to readjust her mental outlook by a forced change of her own thoughts. She has tried that, and while on occasions she has found it helpful, there is a quicker way out of her depressions, a ridiculously feminine way, she admits. But maybe it isn't so ridiculous, since it is a known fact that no woman ever committed suicide on the way to buy a hat.

My business friend's secret is to dash over to her favorite masseuse's, have her face caressed by soft unguents, stroked by skillful hands—and eyes, cheeks, and mouth made up with the most effective cosmetics. She is willing to give the credit that is due the young woman for the restful massage she arranges, but the thing that is balm to her soul and which she wishes to put on record as the prescription par excellence for a rejuvenating effect on the spirit is a makeup job well done.

This supports the contention of Mme. Helene Rubinstein, one of the deans of the professional beautifying game. In a conversation I had with her recently she reported how, in her years of experience with thousands of women, she had seen this happy mental reaction to a face artfully embellished by cosmetic ruse. Not all the powers of philosophy impart quite that radiance of expression that one detects in the woman whose face has undergone clever cosmetic treatment.

Best Cure for the Blues.

"If a woman is feeling down in the mouth," says Mme. Rubinstein, "you cannot do her a greater kindness than to make her get her hair done, her nails, get a Turkish bath if she likes them, renew herself from every obvious angle of personal improvement, and add the finishing touch of cheering color on cheek and lips. Collette, 'the famous French writer, goes so far as to recommend 'a dash of rouge for a broken heart.'"

If we women were made of sterner stuff this advice might be set down as pure tommyrot. But until we are able to eliminate the motive of vanity which has been thousands of years in the making, we might just as well prescribe to the advantages of the moment, n'est ce pas?

And the moment is overflowing with advantages of the nature we are discussing. There are rouges and lipsticks for every type. There are color mixtures in powders, should the raw shade not conform harmoniously with the general color scheme.

Just any old dash of rouge dabbed any old way on the face we would not recommend for an ailing heart, much less for a face that needed cheering. This cosmetic cure for what ails you isn't the novice's game. It requires a good deal of perfection in the art of laying it on to lift the face into an evangelist of the philosophy we are preaching today.

Not all women are lucky enough to be able to afford the advantages of a professional craftsman, but there are certain rules about applying makeup that every woman may adapt with no expense and great advantage to her face—and her spirit.

A Happy Illusion.

To let you in on a bit of beauty parlor gossip, there is a certain young woman, famed for her pulchritudinous fascination, who isn't a beauty at all. She has a standing daily appointment with a beauty parlor operator who knows her makeup game to the last drop on the eyelash. There are hundreds of women who call in these skilled makeup artists to give them the finishing touches for dinner, supper-dance and ball.

Those of us who have to do our own handpainting needn't be discouraged, however, if we are willing to accept advice from those in a position to give it. Chiefly, women go wrong on makeup because of the light they operate under. Crowded living conditions frequently land the dressing table in the worst corner of the room, farthest from the window or from the electric light.

For day wear the only way to make up properly is to stand immediately in front of a window facing the strong daylight and to use a hand mirror close up. This is the only way you can achieve a correct idea of the color you are applying or of the manner in which you are applying it. The shadow from electric lights or from draped windows is too tricky to gamble with for honest outdoor effect.

Another important item when you are facing this strong light is: Do not be content with a front view, solely. A profile study of the rouge application may reveal a round patch on the cheek, sharply outlined, so that one sees exactly where the rouge begins and ends. And a successful rouging job requires, above all things, a blending of the color into the skin, with no trace of where the red begins and ends.

Rouge Under Powder.

A third mistake commonly made is to apply powder before the makeup. Countless times I have observed women powdering the whole face and then rubbing rouge on top of the powdered cheek in circles of varying size. The rouge goes on under the powder—not on top of it. And there is a whole set of rules about how to lay the rouge on in paths rather than in circles to reduce cheeks, or make them appear fuller, to avoid calling attention to hollow cheeks and to minimize length and breadth, generally.

The contour of the face should be studied with a view to improving it, where necessary, with the help of rouge. If the face, say, is broad, either fat or with large cheek and jaw bones, it can be narrowed by laying the most brilliant path of rouge near the nose. If the cheek bones are naturally prominent the eye is attracted to them unmercifully if they are further highlighted with red splotches. If the face is thin, narrow and long it can be made to appear less so by keeping the most brilliant rouge well back on the cheek and blending forward.

One can get a better blending effect when the fingers are used instead of the rouge pad. Before rouge is used at all, you understand that a creaming of the face is essential. Just a light creaming followed by a wiping off, so that the skin is simply flexible. And rouge put on in dots makes the blending with the fingers easier.

Rouge should not be allowed to go low on the cheeks, as this gives a sagging, aged and drawndown look.

Painting the Lips.

Grease paint foundations are advised against for any but the professional because movements of the facial muscles tend to cause cracks such as actors and actresses find on their faces at the end of a performance. On the stage it is not noticeable, but on the street or under more intimate night surroundings it is.

In painting the lips the effect should be to have the curves even, and to achieve this find exactly where the center of the upper one is located and work from there to each outer edge. Though your mouth may not be designed for a Cupid's bow effect, the fullest color must come in the center, anyway.

If the lower lip is too full, rouge it lightly, and if you wish to reduce the size of a large mouth, stop the paint above the extreme edge of the lip and tone down at the corners so it blends into the natural color.

ROMANCE AFTER MARRIAGE

It's Not the Daily Spatting Over Trivialities That Takes the Joy Out of Wedded Life—It's the Lack of Romance. Here Are Ways to Keep the Precious Quality Alive.

by Doris Blake

S the power to conserve romance after marriage vested in the woman more than in the man?

Is it more often the wife's own fault than masculine fickleness or promiscuity when another woman steals her husband?

Not long ago one of our well known domestic court judges gave out the unqualified statement that a woman loses her husband to another woman solely through her own fault. But that does not take into account the born philanderer whose amatory proclivities could not be suppressed were he married to the greatest paragon of all the charms and virtues accredited to the art of holding a husband. True, this class of male appears in a limited edition when you consider the great army of husbands who have a natural desire to remain loyal to the women they wed.

One thing we do know is that a certain amount of romance has to be conserved in marriage or discontent and unhappiness is bred. It isn't the bickerings over the meat bills, nor the personal habits or mannerisms that get on the nerves of married people half so much as the feeling that romance is escaping, or has already passed them by. The fact that women do most of the divorce petitioning in this country may be interpreted to mean that they are more avid to recover the old glow that made their dreams at one time so rose tinted.

Give in Order to Receive.

On the face of the divorce plea other reasons may be advanced for the separation, but in countless numbers of cases is it not the bleak unromanticism of the marriage that makes it unbearable? Give an average woman a dash of romance and her humblest household duty may not become a privilege, but it certainly is robbed of ugliness. Give an average woman a man of ordinary attainments, yet so long as she is permitted to retain faith in his inherent fineness, goodness, and ultimate achievements she takes up her daily tasks with good heart.

Women need more romance in their lives than men. Needing it more then, let us go on the assumption that, like other virtues that contribute to the welfare of the world, the more you give of yourself the more you get in return. There is nothing to be gained from arguing that the romance in married life should be a fifty-fifty proposition, that a husband is entitled to no more of it than he gives. Fifty-fifty arrangements are not serviceable in marriage contracts, however well they serve in purely commercial arrangements. An entirely different set of emotions are brought into marriage which can inspire interest and love from the opposite sex, must express in some degree health, cleanliness, refinement. Intelligence, adaptability, unselfishness, and sincerity she needs likewise, but to be the magnet of attraction this purely physical thing of looks is vital.

While much of the mystery of the sweetheart is dissipated in the intimacy of marriage, the woman who wants romance in her life should strive to maintain some semblance of it in her own personal conduct. This can be accomplished to some extent by modesty of person, by avoiding the cheapness of overfamiliarity and by upholding a nice feminine reserve and privacy in the intimate affairs of her life. Many a man has been shocked out of romance by coarseness and vulgarity.

Then there is the element of tact in handling a man, or finesse we might better call it. Anyway, it is the graciousness that tells a woman just what to do, when and when not to do it. With this quality, wounds, irritations and resentment do not stifle the man's longing to bestow a love expression. A too blatant frankness, though the criticism may be just enough, will instantly snuff out tenderness. A little of the old rosy deceit that was practiced in those premarriage days when some correction was deemed advisable, had rather be employed. No girl before marriage would threaten her romance with the hammer and tongs of homely truths.

Of course, no one is always agreeable, always magnetic, always inspiring. We all have out faults, our moods and our mannerisms. But in those courtship days the unattractive side was concealed fairly well—and romance prospered. The innocent camouflage kept up after marriage, that is, the suppressing of your disagreeable impulses, rather than the practicing of deceit builds up the habit of agreeableness which makes others happy and in turn brings happiness back into your own life.

Aids to Romance.

On the contrary, as first aid we should place a high standard of personal attractiveness. If women succeed in this their husbands are inspired to maintain a similar degree of attractiveness. This is a highly important need to the continuation of romance after marriage, since in the early attraction of the now united pair this element of personal appearance had a large share. When a husband wanders off in the direction of other women he often does it merely because he finds in them, or thinks he does, the attraction his wife formerly had.

A woman's task as a wife is harder than that of sweetheart because she has to be both. Much of the mystery of the sweetheart is gone from her, which makes it more imperative that her physical attractiveness be continued. Married or single, the inspiration for emotions of love is beauty. It may not mean in either man or woman regularity of feature or any special height, build, or coloring. Nevertheless, it is a physical ideal that is pleasing. When this ideal degenerates through shiftlessness or carelessness of person there is no inspiration for romance to feed upon.

Personal Traits.

A woman, to possess attraction

Answers to Love Queries

Why Continue?

"Dear Miss Blake: I go out with a certain boy once in a while. If I happen to mention meeting a new boy or being out, he starts to rave. I tell him he is only jealous, but he says not.

"I dislike going out with him for that reason, as it spoils the whole day. I go out with him because he has given me a gift. SHORTY."

It isn't necessary to go out with a boy who makes himself objectionable because of unreasonableness, Shorty. 'Twould be better to return the gift if you feel obligated because of it. We all like our friends to be pleasant and agreeable.

Harps on Single Blessedness.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 24 and have been keeping company with a fellow three years my senior for six months. I love him and he shows an interest in me, and no fellow could treat a girl better. There is one thing he says to me which hurts and that is, 'It is foolish to get married; I am going to be a bachelor.'

"Do you advise me to give him up? "EVELYN."

He may not mean what he says, but you have your tip and should act accordingly, Evelyn. It isn't necessary to give up seeing him, but 'twould be wise to cultivate some other friends, as well. It may cause him to change his mind.

FOR PERFECT PERMANENT WAVING

One Circuline for each curl—in clear, fresh water.

The Charm of Wavy Hair with Perfect Safety

Mr. Charles Nessler, the original inventor of permanent waving, states that "Circuline represents the highest possible achievement in permanent waving, because it treats each head of hair according to its individual requirements." That is why Circuline, unlike any other method of permanent waving, assures you of a wave just as tight or as loose as desired—as beautifully flowing as though Nature herself had waved it.

And not only is Circuline gentle, sure, absolutely free from any injurious chemicals such as lye, ammonia, potash, but it requires actually 100 degrees less heat than is necessary for a marcel wave.

But you are only sure of a Circuline Wave when your hairdresser uses authentic Circulines. You will recognize them as she immerses one for each curl in clear, fresh water. Each is individually wrapped, and stamped with the name "Nestle Circuline"—your assurance of a genuine Circuline Wave!

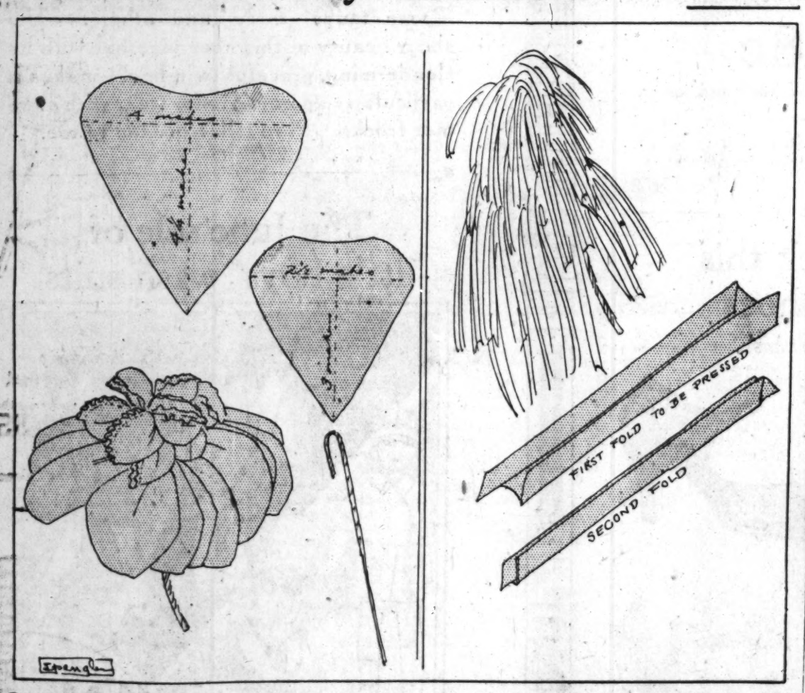
Practical and Fancy Needlework . . . By Clotilde



Georgette Flowers Add a Touch of Smartness to the New Summer Gowns

What is your sewing problem? Do you have trouble in following a pattern? Do you find difficulty in making a skirt hang evenly or making a sleeve that doesn't twist? If there is anything you would like to know about these or other problems of needlework write to Clotilde, The Tribune, Chicago, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope, if a personal reply is desired.

THE large flowers worn on the shoulder of dresses this season are made from all colors of georgette. Number one flower, shown today, is made of black georgette. One half of a yard is required either on the straight or bias of the material. The petals are left raw edged. There are sixteen of the large petals that measure four and one-fourth inches from top to point and four inches across the top of each petal.

Curve in the top of the petal, as in a rose. The next row of petals is three inches long and two and one-half inches across the top of each petal. There are fifteen petals in this group.

The third row has the same amount of petals as the second and the same measurements.

To begin to make the flower, take a piece of soft lace wire six inches long, double the top down one inch, put several thicknesses of the georgette over this wire to make the padded center of the flower. Put the last fifteen petals described up around the covered wire center. Lap the petals very closely and sew on firmly.

Next, add the fifteen petals on the second row and then add the sixteen large ones. Use a fine needle with a double silk thread the color of the georgette used.

Shir up the top of the first row of petals. Pull up the thread until it is tight. Either tie or give it a firm stitch. Hold those shirred petals over a steaming tea kettle until thoroughly saturated with steam. After it is dry, pull out the shirring threads and you will have a row of crinkled petals. The silk thread is used instead of the cotton thread for shirring or basting on soft materials, as when it is pulled out it does not leave a mark. A narrow bias strip of the georgette is wound tightly around the stem and finished off under the petals. A few stitches will help to hold it from getting loose.

Number two is called the carpet rag flower. It is made of bias cut strips, two and one-half inches wide on the selvage edge of the bias material used. Turn in both edges to the center. Press this well with a hot iron. Fold together again and press this well, also.

Make the center for the flower the same as in number one. Cut the first row of strips three inches long. Make ten of those strips and sew on to the stem. Cut the next row five inches long and make fifteen of those. Sew those next to the first row on the stem. Now cut the next row six inches long. Make twenty of those. Lap those strips closely together.

Cut the ends on a slant or straight across. Finish off the stem as in number one. The colors chosen for these flowers are black, jonquil, and butter yellow, and the soft shades of orchid.

HORSEMANSHIP

by CAPT. FENTON S. JACOBS 11TH U. S. CAVALRY

This Article Discusses the Aid by Which the Rider Conveys His Commands to the Horse.

IN previous installments, of which this is the fifth, the rider has been placed in the saddle, at the halt, in a position that it is believed will best favor the use of the aids. Of course, it is understood that not being mechanical no two horses are identically the same, any more than we could expect any two people to be identical. For this reason no two riders will ride the same horse in exactly the same way. Notwithstanding, there are many fundamental principles which will apply to all horses and riders; it being largely a question of correct and proportionate application in order to produce the same results. The most important of these are the aids.

The aids are the different means employed by the rider to convey his desires or intentions to the horse. The aids, principally, may be divided into natural and artificial groups. The natural aids are the legs, hands and weight. The artificial aids are the spur, the whip, the voice, the pat, the martingale, the longe, and all the other means of domination created by the industry and ingenuity of man to prolong, strengthen, or take the place of his natural aids.

The legs, generally speaking, control the lateral movement of the hind quarters and give the horse the forward impulse. It is obviously necessary to produce movement before movement can be directed and controlled. The legs should be fixed—that is to say, close to and in light contact with the horse. They should be free from all involuntary motion and very steady in their actions.

Avoiding Confusion.

The fault opposed to fixity is swinging, which confuses the horse. When the pressure of both legs equally is increased the effect should be to move the horse forward; of producing the movement which the reins should direct. When one leg acts alone, for example, the right, immediately in rear of the girth, it should have the result, while provoking the forward movement, of pushing the croup to the left. The horse gives away from leg pressure. If he hesitates to obey, act by little taps of the calf and cease as soon as he obeys.

To teach a horse to respond to the legs: Dismounted, stand opposite the girth on the left side, hold the near snaffle rein and with the thumb prod him immediately in rear of the girth, increasing the intensity until he moves his hind quarters a step or two to his right. Then reward him with a pat on the neck and a handful of oats. Then mount, and producing slight tension on the reins, press the calf in rear of the girth in a similar manner as the thumb prod.

At first this should be attempted only a few times daily. Repeat the exercise on both sides. The importance of keeping the legs to the rear, as described in the third installment, cannot be overestimated. They are the logical rudders for the horse as they control practically all of his body in rear of the forehand. They drive his hind legs up under him and assist him to start, back, stop, turn or jump.

How to Use the Hands.

The hands control the lateral movement of the forehand and check, halt, or back the horse. The hands through the reins and bits, act on the horse's mouth, head, neck and shoulders, and like the legs, they may act, resist or give way. They may even act, indirectly, on the hindquarters by giving the shoulders such a position that his haunches are obliged to change direction. This is called opposing the shoulders to the haunches. For exact effects the reins must remain adjusted and stretched during work; if they were flapping, the indications of the hand would not reach the horse, or if they did they would arrive confused or in the form of awkward jerks.

Two adjusted reins acting rearward together, equally should have the effect of slowing, stopping, or backing the horse. They are called direct reins. This action should be produced by fixing the hands and closing the fingers; the elbows and hands should move the least possible to the rear. When one rein acts alone it has the effect, while provoking a retarding movement, of displacing the forehand, head, or neck or all, as indicated in the accompanying sketch.

Accord of the Aids.

Before seeking to regulate or reënforce the action of one rein or one leg by the other, one must be sure they do not contradict each other. If the right hand or leg acts, the left at first should give way to allow the right to produce its full effect; it resists if it is necessary to regulate the movement. With the reins held in one hand with the bearing rein alone acting, the direct rein alone hangs loose at the moment of action. If the two reins then are not in accord, at least they do not contradict each other.

The action of the hands and legs are opposed to each other in effect, therefore, when the legs act to increase speed the hands should give way—likewise, when the reins act to slow the gait the legs give way, then resist when it is necessary to limit the movement. This is called the accord of the aids.

The qualities of a good hand are steadiness, lightness, softness and firmness. A steady hand is one free from useless movement. A light hand maintains the merest contact with the horse's mouth. A soft hand gives support. A firm hand gives a frank decided bearing. Under no circumstances should reins ever be jerked. The curb reins should be used the least possible.

The hands should be independent with respect to the movement of the body and legs. If the hands are well placed, separated as they should be, the nails face each other, the elbows come against the body naturally; in consequence, the shoulders fall back, the chest is free, and the head is easily raised.

On the other hand, if the nails are down, the elbows have a tendency to fly out, the shoulders come forward, and close on the chest; the head follows the movement of the shoulders, the eyes are lowered, while the buttocks tend to slide to the rear.

How to Use Weight.

The weight (or balance) is used to supplement the action of the legs and hands. The weight of the body, by inclining the portion above the hips in the direction of desired movement acts to facilitate the obedience of the horse, and should be in accord with the effects produced by the legs and hands. The body inclination, by anticipating the sudden movement of the horse, also, enables the rider to retain his balance.

The aids should always be applied intermittently; must be distinct and not confused; thus, being at the halt to move forward at the walk: Gather the horse (slight tension on reins and slight pressure of legs—as a signal to attract his attention and to prepare him to respond promptly), then slightly relax the fingers of the hand and use the legs and weight in combination as previously described, with quickly repeated applications until the horse moves forward.

Being at the walk to halt: Gather the horse and use direct reins intermittently and weight, until the horse stops.

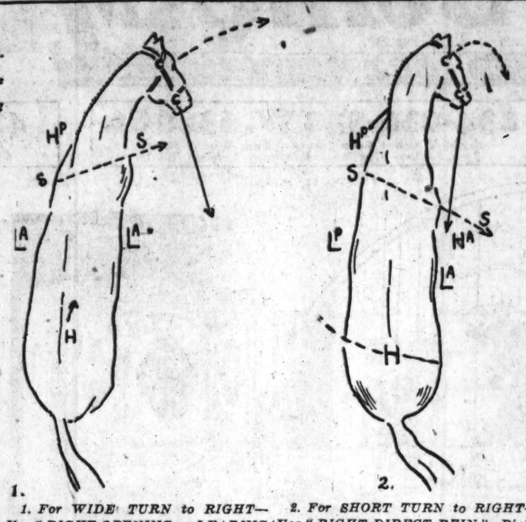
Illustrating the five principal effects of one (right) Rein. Also the direction produced by supporting legs, as indicated.

LEGEND.

Ha—Rider's hand active.
Hp—Rider's hand passive.
La—Rider's leg active.
Lp—Rider's leg passive.
S—Horse's shoulders.
H—Horse's haunches.

Upper arrows indicate direction produced by hands with leg support. Legs also control haunch displacement. For action of left rein reverse diagram. Note that reins held in one hand act in accord. Both reins carried to right will move horse to right.



1.

1. For WIDE TURN to RIGHT—Use "RIGHT OPENING or LEADING REIN," having first produced forward movement by active legs. Always used in training young horses.

2.

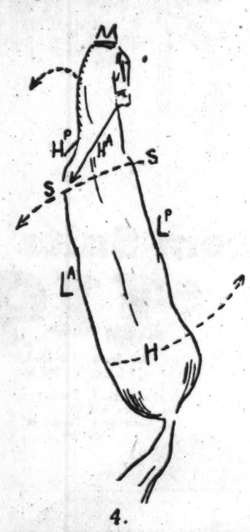
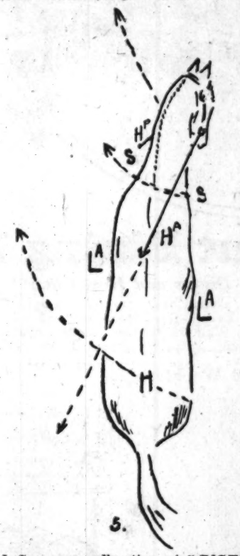
3.

3. For WIDE TURN to LEFT—Use "RIGHT BEARING REIN." Both legs active. The direction produced is the opposite of that in No. 1, although same rein is used.



4.

4. For SHORT TURN to LEFT—Use "RIGHT INDIRECT REIN IN FRONT OF WITHERS." Left leg active. This effect is opposed to No. 2, using the same rein.



5.

5. See arrow direction of "RIGHT INDIRECT REIN IN REAR OF WITHERS." Active legs will produce movement to the left oblique.

This study of the five effects of reins with supporting legs indicates their theoretical effects only. Intermediate effects can be produced by increasing or decreasing the intensity with which aids are used to overcome resistance of horse. Remember, ALWAYS DECREASE INTENSITY AS SOON AS HORSE RESPONDS.

The TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

Fruity Nectars Are a Pleasant Diversion for the Warm Days of Approaching Summer

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

By Jane Eddington.

WHY the up to your health and the down to your disaster was so enormously rich in sentiments and sayings, in equipment and accessory, is hard to say, but it was. Mad mischief an the courting of disaster has seemingly inspired men to the most capital exercise of wit and brilliancy, while perhaps an Emerson was telling folk that they should live on so low a plane that air would excite them and they could get intoxicated on water, and Plato some 2,000 years earlier also made remarks cousin to this.

It is not that it could not be done—we have nothing to show that the immortally famous nectar of the gods was alcoholic—it simply has not been, or at any rate to the notable extent that strong drinks have been praised and thought necessary to stimulate wit, friendship and love. The history of the wine cup alone from pocula to stein—we are using wine figuratively, and know that it was Gambrinus who invented the liquid for the stein—what a vocabulary it takes to understand it! If specimens of the glasses alone could be had from the days when Rome from her throne of beauty ruled the world, perhaps with some of the other accompaniments, they would fill a museum.

At any rate we have some of the Roman words used. A crater was a large vessel in which to mix the wine with water, from which it was dipped with a cyathus, "a small vessel containing not quite two ounces." The poculum, plural pocula, was the general drinking cup. The beaker or goblet was a calix—did the flower calix come from it, or it from the flower? And there was the expensive patera and another which was a great tankard. We say imbibe where the Roman said "bibere" or "potare" [we get our potation here], while potor was the drinker until he got fuddled, and then he was the "potator." By the way, one of the Roman drinking vessels was without foot or handle, and was used by two people, "conbibos."

But to take a leap across time, we may come to the "little brown jug" beer was made of barley and the of the Yankee hay field. It contained "switchel," which was nothing but a mixture of ginger, molasses and sometimes vinegar, well diluted with water to taste, workingmen even to this day having an idea that plain water is not good for them. An ice man who was thirsty, when given a drink of water not long ago, said it was not good for him.

Entertaining Drinking Vessels.

Once at a dinner in an Italian home the sour wine, a cup of it, was served in what we would call pitchers of majolica. Each of these had on them words of invitation like "Bevi Cara" [drink, dear], "Bevi Poco" [drink a little], "Bevi Zio" [drink, uncle], and "Bevi Zia" [drink, aunt]. Perfect replicas of these could be purchased in the "Eternal City," which do not hold half a teaspoon but reflect a pleasant sentiment just the same.

Of course, many a mischievous legend has been put upon drinking cups. Perhaps you have seen those curious things with a neck full of holes which has the inscription: "To drink and not to spill will try the utmost of your skill." It will, but it is good fun to try.

Flavoring the Glass.

The last half of an ancient recipe for mint julep reads: "Epicures rub the lips of the tumbler with a piece of fresh pineapple, and the tumbler itself is very often incrusted outside with stalactites of ice. As the ice melts, you drink." An epicure might rub the rim of his tumbler, containing a minted lemonade, with the fresh pineapple. The ancient bartenders did a thing of this sort more delicate than hanging a slice or lobster shaped piece of lemon on a glass. A sugared and chilled and tender sprig of mint in a glass of lemonade—or sprigs—make one draw a long breath in order to get their full aroma.

Drinking Through a Straw.

It grows increasingly entertaining to an investigator of the eating habits of the ancients to find how there is little that is new under the sun—just new adaptations—in the ways of eating and drinking and getting food since the creation of man. Xenophon was born somewhere nearly 450 B. C., and it is a delight to read what he sets down about food in his writings. Among other things he says is that the Armenians lived in spacious underground houses in winter where they had abundant stores of wheat, barley, and vegetables, and where they kept also their sheep, goats, cattle, and poultry. But note this: They had beer in jars which they sucked through a reed when thirsty. This beer was made of barley and the grains were left in it. They drank the whole through a reed or straw so that they would not get these grains in their mouths. A straw today is most needed when a drink is partly solid. By the way, Xenophon's Ten Thousand seem to have found this drink rather strong, so they mixed it with water.

A Thin Sirup.

This is good flavored with fruit juice for the ice mushes, which we may call sherbets or granites: One pound of sugar and one quart of water. Put over fire and stir until sugar is dissolved, then cook for fifteen minutes. If thoroughly cooked, this will keep for some time in summer without fermenting.

A Thicker Sirup for Beverages.

The reason the drinks of the soda fountain often seem more delicious than those home mixed is because they are made with sirups. A drink made with a sirup has more body than one sweetened with dry sugar. One way to illustrate the difference between sugar and sirup sweetening is to compare an ice cream sundae with a sirup over it to one sprinkled with sugar. The latter thing is not done and drinks are not really half as good when this is done to them. This makes a good beverage sirup and is a universal formula: Two cups sugar, two cups water or fruit juice. This is the proportion used for making raspberry shrub from the vinegar which has stood over raspberries. The sugar must be completely dissolved before the liquid boils to prevent early crystallization. Then boil to 220 degrees, or a bit higher.

Sipping Sherbets.

Fruit juices and water half frozen have been a summer drink for a long time. In the Italian slums to this day we find lemon juice diluted till no sweetening of it is required—and beyond even that—and frozen to a mush, and greatly appreciated because cold. It is sherbet of a sort, or a "granite."

In one of Lady Wortley Montagu's letters, dated 1717, she tells of being entertained by a Turkish woman who gave her a dinner of fifty dishes of meat which were placed on the table one at a time, with knives of gold and hafts set in diamonds. "The table cloth and napkins," she says, "were all of tiffany, which were spoiled with the using, although so costly." (You can buy something of the same sort to this day, if you are foolish enough to want to.)

Of the sherbet she says: "The sherbet, which is the liquor which they drink at meals, was served in china bowls, but the covers are salvers of massive gold." The editor of these letters also makes a few remarks on this subject, as follows: "The present sultan and most of the grandees have now another kind of sherbet in their houses, known in Europe under the unromantic name of brandy. Sherbet, however, is still habitually sipped in hot weather, and I often joined an old bey over a bowl of this very pleasant beverage."

Hot Sirup.

In making fruit punches containing pieces of fruit, in order to bring out the flavors in full, use the sirup hot over fruit. It may then be made of two cups of sugar and one of liquid. It blends different fruit juices, but there are other ways of getting blends and a mussy mixture of fruit is not worth while and is not economical.

The Lemon Sharpener.

Lemon juice often brings up the flavor of other fruits wonderfully, but at the same time it may replace all aromas with its own, which is not so good, so it must be used with great discretion in mixing fruit drinks, unless they are specifically lemonades, which are the more agreeable for having the lemon juice toned down. The action in all cases between lemon juice and the mild fruit juices is reciprocal. It does wonders, for instance, for raspberry juice, but when we want to get the first enjoyment of our drink through our nose, it is well to add lemon juice by drops only, and the skin not at all, for when manipulated it throws out the strongest smell of anything. And pineapple juice in some cases will do the same thing as lemon juice, and leave more of flower to the drink. By the way, the reason some people will not use lemon with tea is that it drowns the odor of the tea—the very flower of it.

The Ginger Stinger.

The mixing of odors and juices in drinks is a nice business, and I am fond of telling of this experiment tried on a willing taster. First, a cup of boiling water was poured over a dozen sprigs of mint, allowed to stand five minutes, and drained off. Then a little lime juice was added to part of it. It had the daintiest of aromas, but not much character, when it was sweetened to taste. To the other part was added orange juice and the mint flavor was almost lost, but when a few drops of lemon juice were added out came the mint flavor, stronger than in these others. So when your drink lacks character, no matter how fine the fruit juices and dainty the flavors, add some drops of lemon juice, but again we say be careful if you do not want to turn it into what may correctly be called a lemonade, because the lemon flavor leads all the others.

To call ginger a "stinger" is to adopt the name from an English "temperance drink" containing as much cayenne pepper as ginger, so that the latter was really the stinger, but there is something so clean and cool about the sharpness or sting of ginger that we like to use that characterization of it. The quite modern combination of ginger ale over ice cream, which is so highly appreciated—it is really a ginger ice cream soda to which a little sirup may be added, as well as the ice cream and ginger ale—owes its popularity to a slight sting. The old home made ginger beers were nothing but ginger teas sweetened and flavored, and the hayfield drink was often made of nothing but powdered ginger, molasses, and water.

The Hop Bitter.

The old "small beer" was nothing but hop tea. An old recipe for it was: "To twelve quarts of cold water add one and a half pints of strong hop tea and one and one-half pints of molasses. Mix well together and bottle it immediately. It will be fit for use the next day if the weather is warm." "Common beer" was just hop tea with spruce or some other flavor, leavened for one day only with yeast.

A Hop Tincture.

This is one tested out and found good with seltzer water, which it seems was invented for some medicinal use nearly 200 years ago. Add one tablespoon of ground ginger to one-half ounce of hops and boil these in a pint of water gently for one-half hour. The hop leaves swell so that only a cup of liquid is likely to be left at the end of the half hour. Strain this off and add one-fourth pound of brown sugar. Stir till dissolved and cook to sirup stage. When cool add to it one cup or a little more of cold water. This will make eight glasses, served by filling a glass one-fourth full of the sirup, then adding seltzer water till the foam reaches the top of the glass. To make it mild, add some cream to the sirup or even as much cream as sirup. If you like to put your nose into a foam, here you have it.

Sugar Water.

In Creole stories we have often seen how the people of New Orleans refreshed themselves with "eau sucre," and now we have found in a cook book of 1852 what amounts to a recipe for it, which reads: "Sweeten boiling water with sugar to your taste. This beverage is much used by French ladies. It is considered soporific and good for fatigued or weak nerves." It is not only in our Creole literature that we find mention of people using this but also in those of France, and in the eighteenth century the sucking of sugar cane seems to have been popular, but of late people seem to suffer from such an indulgence.

A FRIEND IN NEED
by Sally Joy Brown

Here Is a Wonderful Opportunity for Children to Learn the Piano

THE following letter tells of a wonderful opportunity for girls and boys who like music and would like to learn how to play the piano:

"Dear Miss Brown: This school gives a summer normal course for piano teachers, from June 27 to July 29. To demonstrate teaching, a small class of children, 6 or 7 years old, is used. The class meets downtown from 10 to 11 o'clock, three mornings a week. These children have, therefore, fifteen music lessons with no charge. There is, of course, no possible obligation about their future study. All we ask is regularity of attendance during the five weeks.

"We are wondering if among your readers there are some who would care to have their children in this group. They must be beginners, having had no lessons, and must have a piano at home. Only fundamental work is accomplished in fifteen lessons, but it is an astonishingly good foundation. We desire to give the lessons to children who are really musical in tendencies.

"There will be a tryout held on Saturday, June 18, at the school. We feel this is a worth while thing and are most appreciative of your coöperation and the use of your fine column.

"D. P."

Isn't that a splendid opportunity for some young girls and boys to get well started in music? If you know of any child who is willing to study and meet requirements of the school, I'll be happy to have their names and to arrange for the tryout. Remember they can't know anything about music—they just must want to learn!

And here's a splendid chance for some who are further along in their music:

"I am a moderately successful music teacher. I have a hobby of helping in a small way a few who are anxious to secure musical instruction but unable to pay for it. I have found, in this way, a great deal of high grade talent, and it is a source of much pleasure and satisfaction to know that through one's own efforts such talent has been found and given a chance.

"During the spring and summer months my business is at its lowest ebb. Consequently, I have some time open. I have decided to give this time in the manner of which I speak, and have organized classes for the study of musical theory. I might add that theory is the real backbone of a musical career, either as a preparation or supplement. S. M."

Send your name and address if you wish to take advantage of this generous offer of S. M.'s.

Now, just a word about some other music lovers. In Chicago are many who can play, some of them invalids, with little or no chance to amuse themselves, and they are barred from doing so by lack of instruments we know we'll never use. Why not, then, donate them and help spread happiness as the writers above are doing. Shall we make this music lovers' week and give any unused instrument?

Other Requests.

"Dear Miss Brown: May I tell you that I could make a little more money in giving piano lessons to beginners in the evening? I have three children waiting for me to give them lessons, but I have no piano and they have no piano. If I had one I could realize a little income and the children could come and do their practicing in the afternoon. Perhaps in time I could quit store work, which is so hard on me. Mrs. J. V."

"Dear Sally Joy Brown: Have any of your readers a saxophone no longer needed? I would like to join a band, but cannot afford to buy an instrument. J. M. B."

"Dear Miss Brown: I am a son of a poor family and take piano lessons from a woman who charges only a small amount for the lessons. I am in need of a music bag and a metronome. I wonder if one of your readers could give me these things. I am 14 years of age. J. B."

"Dear Miss Sally: Perhaps one of your readers has banjo parts to some of the popular songs which they have no further use for. I have just started playing and would greatly appreciate any banjo music I could get. "M. J. B."

"Dear Miss Brown: I am a patient at this sanitarium and I wonder if some of your readers has a ukelele he or she would like to give away. I certainly would enjoy having one to strum on. W. S."

ISN'T IT ODD
by William Atherton Du Puy

ISN'T it odd that man, by dint of using his head, should have found a way to make use of even so forbidding a child of nature as the prickly pear of the west!

That great stretch of desert country that reaches from San Antonio to Los Angeles favors this prickly pear above all plants. With its skin sealed airtight on the outside it can hold its moisture as can few others and live green and vigorous with little water. With its needle sharp thorns it scorns attack from browsing cattle or even the nibbling jackrabbit. It survives where most forms of life perish.

Cattlemen through the decades have seen their herds die of starvation while back of the thorn covering of the prickly pear was much nourishing food. It remained for men of science, sent into these parts by the department of agriculture, to work out a plan for utilizing the stock food that lay in this plant.

First they tried growing it under cultivation. This plant, which got along quite well where few others would live, grew to surprising size when the ground was plowed that the water might be let into the soil when the few rains of the years did come. Cultivated prickly pears grew ten times as fast as those that were not cultivated.

The crop was planted somewhat as is sugar cane—by laying the joints in a furrow. They took root and grew. They went right on growing summer and winter. They yielded from 20 to 50 tons of cattle food to the acre.

There remained but the problem of how it was to be used. Then some one thought of a novel scheme—that of using a blowpipe and burning the thorns off. This scheme was tried. It was found that it worked well. After the flame of the blowpipe was passed over the thorns of a plant those thorns had disappeared. The cattle soon discovered the miracle and fell on the singed plants and devoured them.

So was a way found for growing a new forage crop, or at least for making use in an emergency of nature's crop here in the southwest. The prickly pear grows year after year. If it is needed it can be singed and thus fed to the cattle. If it is not needed it remains green and keeps growing. If it is not used for ten years none of its growth will be wasted. It is stored fodder, but it needs no barn. Finally the time of need comes. The ranchman goes out with his torch and burns the thorns off of one row of prickly pears. That is the ration for his stock for the day. They fall to and eat up that row.

But the reserve food supply they cannot touch. On the morrow more thorns are singed. It is easier thus to give the stock what food they are to have than it would be if they were being fed hay which must be pitched down from the stack and hauled out to them. The prickly pear, in fact, has certain advantages over even red clover as a food for cattle.

A LOYAL SON

The Strange Adventures of Young Robinson Grewso

By KEMBLE

His Ma called him Robin, his Dad called him Son.
He grew like a weed and thought it great fun.
So he called himself Robinson Grewso.

"CHIN CHIN, you certainly did save me from bein' a slave to dem no account pirates." Sundae grinned from ear to ear as he patted the old bird.

"I sure thought they was drowned and I would be jailed for bumping them overboard. I didn't mean to do it."

"You did it, all the same," came a voice from somewhere.

Robin and Chin Chin looked around in dismay.

Robin and Chin Chin looked around in dismay. They could not see a soul. Sundae grinned.

"Dar she is, Robin, dat little fish gal, leanin' on dat floatin' island." And, sure enough, there she was—the tiny mermaid, bobbing her pretty head and showing her pearly teeth.

"Those pirates, you know, are very dear friends of mine, and I think you were very rude to them."

Robin laughed outright. "Rude to pirates! That's a good one. How would you behave if pirates came on board your boat and began jabbing you with swords? Just what would you do?"

The little mermaid opened her eyes very wide.

"Seeing as I have no boat and have never been jabbed with swords, I really do not know, but Sundae had no right to push them in the water and then not try to save them."

Sundae looked surprised. "Really, Miss Fish Lady, I did try to save 'em. I leaned over de boat just like dis——"

And in trying to show how he did it, splash—overboard he went! And down, down, down he kept going. It seemed that he never would come up.

Robin and Chin Chin grew frantic at the thought of losing their little cannibal friend.

Crabby does a few jazz steps.

"Can't you do something?" Robin cried to the mermaid girl.

"Don't be so impatient, Robin," she answered. "My lifesaver will bring him up."

No sooner had she said it than the claws of a gigantic crab appeared above the surface and, clinging to the claws, hung the sputtering Sundae.

"He is the most kindhearted crab that ever lived," smiled the mermaid. "He just loves to help those who have sunk so low. He's a regular diving bell crab."

"What's that, a dumbbell crab?" screeched Chin Chin. "I knew it, I knew it."

The mermaid's eyes snapped. "You think he's a dumbbell, do you? I'll show you. Crabby!" she called out, "just get up on the side of the boat and sing that little song you composed."

Sundae grabbed one of his rescuer's claws and helped him on board. There the old fellow sat beating time with his many legs and out of a funny mouth that looked for all the world like a cruller came this simple ditty:

I live 'way down in the bottom of the lake
Where it's very, very dark, but I'm very wide awake;
If some poor critic comes a-sprawling down
I bump him up, for I cannot let him drown.

Robin and Chin Chin clapped their hands as Crabby finished his song. Then the sweet singer stood up on his hind legs and declared that he would show them a few jazz steps.

"O, yes," said he, "we have some gay times down below. We dance and the fiddler crabs play for us, the lantern fish light up the place for us, and twice a year we have a grand affair—a regular fish ball. Roll down some time and see us," grinned the old fellow. "We get along swimmingly," and with that he made a funny bow and splashed into the water. He dove and disappeared.

"You did it, all the same."

I was in my garden one morning when a sweet little voice in the garden next door said: "How do you do."

There stood a quaint little maid of about 5. I said, "Hello, what is your name and who are you?" for I had never seen her in my friend's garden before.

In a prim, dignified voice she replied: "I am one of my grandmother's grandchildren." U. M. W.

Billy was keeping the whole family waiting because he must put away his toys before they went for a ride.

"Hurry, Billy," called his mother. "hurry just as fast as you can."

"I is mother," he answered breathlessly, "I'se hurrying faster'n I can." A. K. A.

With the Extra Spoon.

The other evening in a dining car while I was having my dinner, I believe I experienced the most embarrassing moment of my life. At the beginning of the meal I noticed that I had an extra soup spoon, but paid no further attention to it. Now, I am absent minded at times and was more so at this particular time.

I heard the waiter cough discreetly a few times, but I didn't think there was anything amiss until I saw a young woman sitting across from me looking highly amused. I looked around and discovered myself trying to eat soup out of the finger bowl with my extra soup spoon. Needless to say, I made a rather hurried exit.

K. K. N.

Her Own Things.

I accompanied a friend of mine when she went to call on a friend of hers. My friend had told me some time before that Mrs. Smith lived in light housekeeping rooms, but had failed to tell me about her moving.

Everything was going nicely when furnishing a home came up for discussion. I gave a long talk about different tastes in furnishings and finished with, "Now, take your rooms, for example, Mrs. Smith. I don't see how any landlady can furnish rooms with such furniture and expect people to live happily in them."

But—horrors! Something was wrong. I fully realized what it was when Mrs. Smith icily informed me that she had no landlady to furnish her rooms for her.

N. Y.

Absent Minded.

At our high school some of the girls instead of buying their lunch bring it to school. Usually it is in the form of sandwiches. One day, having bought and eaten my lunch I still felt rather hungry. The girl sitting across from me had a whole box of sandwiches, and noting my hungry look, offered me the box. She then became absorbed in conversation with the girl on her left.

My thoughts left the food I was eating and wandered to the approaching baseball game. I mentally saw myself pitching with two down, the bases full, and the count two and three, etc., etc., and surrounded myself with a halo of glory.

With a shock my thoughts came back from their journey to the sharp voice of my friend. At first I did not grasp what she was saying, and I looked stupidly at the box in front of me. There I saw the cause of the trouble.

The box was empty! I had eaten all the sandwiches. You may believe I beat a hasty retreat. Embarrassed? Not much!

A Head of Cabbage.

While taking cooking in grammar school, the teacher, who noticed that my girl friend and I were through our work ahead of the rest of the class, sent us out to get some groceries and a head of cabbage. When we came to the store, I was able to remember everything except the cabbage, and I couldn't think what it was that I had forgotten.

The clerk who waited on us had light, curly hair. He stooped under the counter for something and when he stood up I suddenly remembered what it was that I had forgotten and pointing to his head, I said, "O, now I know what it was I wanted—a head of cabbage." Then was I embarrassed? I'll say so.

E. M.

A New One on Him.

My most embarrassing moment was when we were invited out to dinner and took our young son. I was secretly congratulating myself on how well he was behaving, when the dessert was brought in—lemon pie with meringue.

Sonny tasted it and made a terrible face. Our hostess asked him what was the matter and he quickly replied, "My mother doesn't put soapsuds on her pies."

Was I embarrassed.

Free Examination.

My husband is an insurance agent. Recently a woman made application for insurance. After the usual routine of application, medical examination, etc., the policy came through from the home office and my husband took it to her, only to be informed that she did not want the policy, and that the only reason she had made application was because she was worried about her health and wanted an examination to see if it was anything serious! She got the examination free of charge by the insurance company's doctor, under the pretense that she wanted to be insured. Some cheek!

Mrs. H. M.

"Our" Cauliflowers.

When you plan your garden this spring you had better get down on your knees and pray that none of your neighbors will try the trick one of ours worked on us last year.

One day last spring, when our back yard had been newly spaded, along came this neighbor with a penny package of cauliflower seeds, which she offered with as much ceremony as if the gift had been a string of pearls.

All summer long I slaved over those cauliflowers. I kept the weeds from choking them while they were young; hoed the ground about them whenever it became parched, and revived the plants with water when the hot spell threatened to snuff out their lives.

Our neighbor was solicitous about the welfare of the cauliflowers. Every once in a while she would lean over the back fence and say: "Those cauliflowers of mine are getting along nicely." At the time I failed to get the point of her remark.

Came a day in the fall. The cauliflowers were now very plump. A week before they had been tied up for blanching; that day many of them were temptingly white. I was looking proudly over my crop when my neighbor appeared with an empty bushel basket under her arm.

"Well," she said, setting the basket down and taking a knife from the bottom of it, "I see our cauliflowers are ready to eat."

E. O'R.

Laying Down the Law.

It was a habit of my father-in-law to come around to our house perhaps two or three mornings a week to take me for a short drive with my little boy and girl. He often stopped places on errands and then ended with a spin on a country road.

One morning we stopped at his daughter's home. Before he could reach the house she was out on the steps, laying down the law, telling him she never had the car, etc., etc.

I could hear almost everything that was said, and since that day, which was months ago, my babies and myself have had no more pleasant morning rides.

Mrs. E. H.

Corns Lift Off

You'll laugh, really! It is so easy and doesn't hurt one bit!

Drop "Freezone" on that old, bothersome corn. Instantly it stops aching; then shortly you lift that sore, touchy corn right off with your fingers. It works like a charm, every time.

A tiny bottle of "Freezone" costs only a few cents at any drug store, sufficient to remove every hard corn, soft corn, corn between the toes and calluses—try it!

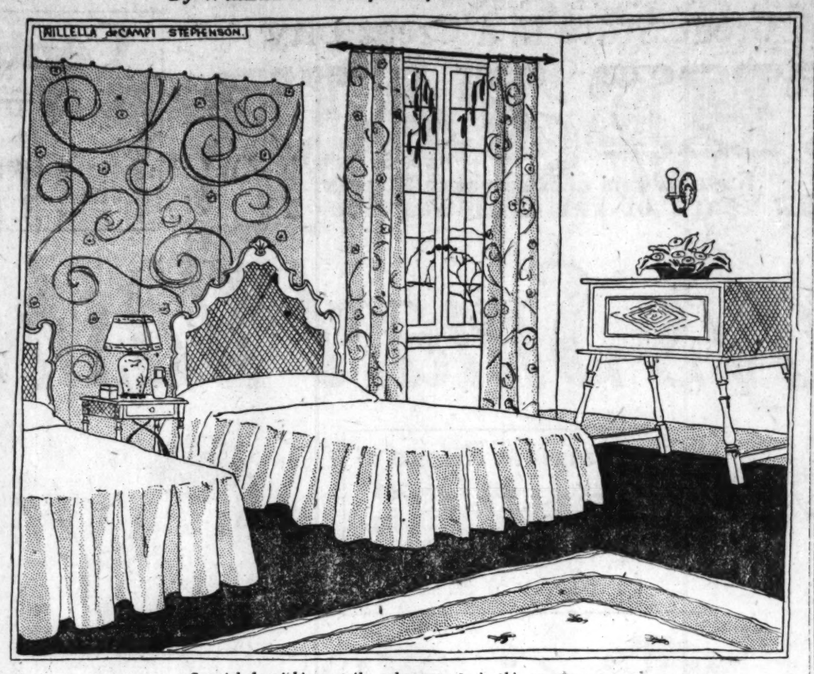
The HOME HARMONIOUS

By WillElla De Campi Stephenson.

In a Small Apartment or House, Where There Is but One Guest Room, It Should Be Neither Feminine Nor Masculine in Treatment, but a Happy Combination of the Two.

WillElla de Campi Stephenson will be glad to assist the homemaker in any problems pertaining to home building and home furnishing. Address your letter to Anita de Campi, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.



Spanish furnishings strike a happy note in this guest room.

IN furnishing the guest room there are several essential points to be remembered. In the house or apartment where there is only one guest room, that one room should not be definitely masculine nor feminine in character. The general tendency is to make the guest room frivolously feminine. The occasional men who occupy it must feel ridiculously out of place.

Simple furnishings of dignified character are most suitable. The room should contain twin beds, and, if possible, a day bed or chaise longue, so the guest may have a little rest and privacy during the day. Another essential provision for this room is that of a desk. This should be fitted with all of the necessary equipment: stationery, calendar, pens, ink, blotters, stamps, and a dictionary. A waste basket should be conveniently placed.

Spanish furnishings strike a happy note in the guest room illustrated today. Modern ideas of comfort are combined with the austerity of the Spanish style. The plaster walls are tinted a warm, pinkish orange. Woodwork is stained walnut. At the windows are hangings of block printed linen, in a distinguished floral pattern on a soft green ground. No glass curtains are used. The wide expanse of plaster wall at the head of the beds is broken by a hanging of the same block linen. Between the beds is a little night table holding a lamp made of a Spanish pottery jar with a parchment shade decorated to match. Bed covers are made of a soft green striped material, piped with orange.

A small Spanish desk is accompanied by a chair with seat and back covered in a basket weave material, in mauve, green and blue. A large, comfortable arm chair is upholstered in a striped linen with fine lines of black, green and old gold on a henna colored ground. Above a sturdy walnut chest hangs a mirror in a plain walnut frame. Lighting fixtures are of wrought iron, and wrought iron poles are used for hanging the window draperies. Two colorful Spanish rugs are used on the deep green floor.

Pleasingly restful with its quiet simplicity is a guest room furnished with Sheraton pieces. A lattice paper of slender, mauve colored leaves on an ivory ground covers the walls. Woodwork is painted ivory. At the windows are ivory point d'esprit glass curtains. Draperies are made of a soft old blue taffeta, finished with narrow mauve ruffles. On the twin beds of Sheraton design are covers of the blue taffeta, piped with mauve and finished with mauve ruffles.

A mirror in an oval frame hangs above a small commode which stands between the beds. On the commode is a poreclain lamp with flowered silk shade which lights up most effectively. A pair of little Sheraton side chairs at the sides of the beds have seats upholstered in old blue satin, brocaded with small flowers.

Placed near a window is a luxurious chaise longue done in deep mauve damask. It is accompanied by a graceful end table holding a blue glass lamp with a mauve shade and a set of smoking accessories. Above a little flat topped desk is a set of hanging shelves on which are placed a group of reference books and a few interesting novels. The dressing table has a glass top under which a piece of blue brocade is stretched. Wool chenille rugs in deep mauve are used.

American colonial furniture is used in another charming guest room. Pale jade pink paper with white polka dots covers the walls. The woodwork is painted white. At the windows are pink net glass curtains dotted with white so that they match the wall paper. Draperies are made of gayly flowered semi-glazed chintz on a jade pink ground. They are finished with ruffles and deep rose rep. Covers on the twin four post beds are made of the rep, with deep flounces of the covered flowered chintz at the sides. Beside each bed is a night stand holding an old fashioned glass lamp, with an accordion plaited chintz shade.

A large comfortable wing chair with a butterfly table beside it is upholstered in the chintz. Placed beside one of the windows, so that the light falls on it from the left, is a delightful little spinet desk with a ladder-back rush bottom chair. A lowboy, with a mirror hanging above it, makes the dressing table. All of the furniture is maple. Colorful hooked rugs enliven the floor, which is painted a deep taupe.

Amusingly different is a guest room done in the modernist manner. The walls are French gray, decorated with large solid circles of gold and jade green. Woodwork is painted black, with a fine line of green to match the furniture. At the windows are long draw curtains of jade green sunfast, lined with French gray and finished with a narrow black binding. Covers on the low twin beds match the draperies. A chaise longue and an arm chair are upholstered in black, piped with jade green. Small extra cushions, in many bright colors, look like a great chaise longue. A brass desk set and brass smoking accessories on a low table fit admirably into the general scheme of the room. Several gray fur rugs are used on the glossy black floor.

Painted furniture may be used appropriately in the guest room. One lovely room I have seen has a set painted antiqued turquoise. It is decorated in the Venetian manner, with touches of gold and floral motifs. In the room in which this set is placed the walls are a pale mauve and the woodwork is a deep violet with a line of turquoise. At the windows are glass curtains of pale mauve silk gauze with overcurtains of the same material in dull turquoise. The overcurtains are caught back by gold cords. Covers for the beds are made of a two-toned striped moire in mauve. A small sofa, placed between two windows, is upholstered in the same moiré. Pale lemon yellow silk makes lamp shades and shields.

More Puzzlers in Etiquette - - - - - - - by Persis Standish

HERE is the third of the etiquette quizzes and the questions are growing more difficult. Witness the first two. If you get these right and live up to them you may count yourself perfect.

1. What is a snob?
2. What is an aristocrat?
3. What should govern manners in public?
4. What should govern conversation in public places?
5. On which side of a man does a woman sit in a motor or a carriage?
6. Where does a woman sit in her own motor, if not driving it?
7. Does the husband or male relation receive with his wife at a reception?
8. Should a man ask if he may make a first call on a girl?
9. Where does a woman receive men who call upon her in an hotel?
10. Do brides and bridesmaids wear gloves at the wedding?
11. If the officiating clergyman is married, is his wife asked to the wedding?
12. If a widow remarries how many bridesmaids should she have?
13. Is there any tradition about congratulating the bride?
14. Can a woman refuse to dance with any one who asks her?
15. What sort of clothes should one wear in public?
16. Should a woman smoke in a public place?
17. Is it important for the business woman to have good manners?
18. Is it good form for a business woman to come to the office dressed for the "date" of the coming evening?

Answers.

1. A snob is the lowest form of animal life. It resembles the elephant and the rhinoceros in that it is a pachyderm. Its ambition is to obtain nods from those whom it deems distinguished. It is usually wrong.
2. An aristocrat is one who values intelligence more than gold and character more than intelligence, who practices kindness and humility, who recognizes his own kind dressed for a levee or in blue jeans. An aristocrat always has taste and a sense of humor. Therefore, his manners are perfect at all times.
3. Consideration of others and a desire to be inconspicuous.
4. Conversation in public should be conducted in low tones and should never contain reference to one's own or other people's private affairs.
5. She should sit on the right side unless some unforseen circumstance makes it impossible.
6. In her own motor she also sits on the right side.
7. No. He should be nearby in case there is anything she wishes him to do, but he should not be "in line."
8. No. It is a girl's privilege to ask the men she prefers to call upon her, as man is presuming if he asks to call the first time.
9. Unless she has a private sitting room a woman receives male guests in the hotel lobby or parlors.
10. If they wish they do, but modern fashion dictates that women may dispense with gloves and so the bride and the bridesmaids may take advantage of this, if they so wish.
11. Always. Even if the wife of the clergyman is unknown to the bride's family it is none the less courteous to invite her to the wedding.
12. A widow who remarries should have no attendants.
13. Yes, it is not done. All congratulations are given the bridegroom because tradition says a woman honors a man when she marries him.
14. Yes, she can, but she must not be seen dancing with any one else that dance unless she says that she has it engaged. For a woman to refuse to dance with one man on a trumped up excuse and then appear on the floor with another is an affront to her hostess as well as the man.
15. Quiet clothes. Only persons who have no other social life dress elaborately in public.
16. It all depends on the place. If it is customary for women to smoke in certain cafes or restaurants, any woman who smokes may do so there without being conspicuous, but a nice woman will not be the only one present who is smoking.
17. It is important for the business woman to have good manners, not only for her own honor but for the honor of her employer as well.
18. No, a business woman should wear only simple tailored clothes to the office.

Bring Out the Hidden Beauty

Do you know that just beneath that soiled, disordered, faded or wrinkled complexion is one fair to look upon? Mercolized Wax will gradually and gently peel off the devitalized surface skin, revealing a new, fresh, white, beautiful skin underneath. The new complexion is a perfectly natural one, therefore in no way to be compared with a make-up. The wax leaves no trace but that of increased loveliness.

A New Skin—Your Own!—at small expense and effort. Simply apply Mercolized Wax at bedtime as you apply cold cream; wash it off in the morning. Fine, almost invisible, skin particles are flicked off with the wax. No harm possible. No detention indoors. The lively, young, healthy underskin is brought gradually to view—you have the exquisite complexion of robust girlhood—and every one will tell you.

You Look Years Younger—Assist Nature if she needs your help. Obtain an ounce of Mercolized Wax from your druggist or department store, use as directed—and you will bless the day that you made the acquaintance of this wonder working product.

HISTORICAL AMERICA by CLIFFORD RAYMOND

Ticonderoga and the Great War Path

[Copyright: 1927: By The Chicago Tribune.]

FROM the broad water of the St. Lawrence at Sorel, some forty-five miles or so below Montreal, but north of it, a waterway with portages and carries goes to New York harbor. Sorel, still a French town with habitants bringing their produce of vegetables, meat and tobacco to the market in the city square, was the old French seignory of that name. The lord of the manor built a fort where the Richelieu river flows in from the south, and later it was known as Fort Richelieu, for the cardinal whose name the river bears and who did most of all men to make New France in Canada a failure for France, although in Quebec province it is French today with the idiom of of the days of Richelieu.

The seignor of Sorel with his fort was the final defense of Montreal from direct Indian attack by water from the Iroquois country further south. The divide of the waterway is at the head of Lake George in New York state. From there is a sixteen mile carry to the Hudson. From the Hudson a party of warriors or traders or an army could go north by the carry to the head of Lake George and use its ordinarily placid waters to the portage at Ticonderoga into Lake Champlain.

The scene was and still is of great beauty. In the water descent from Lake George to Lake Champlain there is a fall at a time used for a mill. Hills and barely penetrable forest cupped the shores.

Invaded by Champlain.

Up at the foot of Lake Champlain is an island the French had named Isle aux Noix, which with an English tongue pronouncing it sounds strangely like Illinois. But it was only the isle of nuts, and the Illini were in their own language and day "men." There was a fortification on the island of which there are remains today. It was the last defense of the lakes from attack from the south.

Champlain was the leader of the first white men who saw this waterway. He yielded to the importunities of the St. Lawrence Algonquin Indians and to his own curiosity, and in 1609 he went with a war party of the northern Indians who wanted to see what effect his firearms would have on their military superiors, the Iroquois.

The spot where this curiosity was satisfied is now supposed to be in the neighborhood of the carry between Lake Champlain and Lake George, or between Ticonderoga and Crown Point. Champlain killed two Iroquois chiefs and the Algonquin Indians caught some prisoners and carried them back north for torture. Champlain wrote that the Iroquois sang plaintive songs.

This was the opening of the waterway for history. Soon the French along the St. Lawrence had to build their forts. The Iroquois recovered from their fear of firearms, and they started north for revenge. They were the Romans of the American aborigines. Their home was in the valley of the Mohawk in New York, with the Mohawk tribe to the east by the Hudson and the Senecas to the west at Niagara, five nations in all, until their kindred, the Tuscaroras, came up, after a losing war with the South Carolinian colonists, from the Cherokee mountain regions, and made the Five Nations the Six Nations.

Once an Indian Warpath.

Before our history this waterway had been an Indian warpath. These Romans of the primeval forests, the Iroquois, had military control of a vast area their war parties traveled. They had proconsuls on the Ohio, and fear of them was on the Ottawa in Canada and at Michillimackinac.

The shots Champlain fired in 1609 fixed in some Iroquois tribes and clans of the Long House, or general assembly of the nation, a bitterness toward the French which never died. This was true particularly of the Mohawks to the east. It was least true of the Senecas to the west, at Niagara. They were less stanch. They accommodated themselves to intrigue and persuasion, and let the French down the further western waterway of Lake Erie, French Creek, the Allegheny river, and the Ohio, while the Mohawks and the English were able to hold the Champlain route. And yet they only held at the extreme southern end for a long time.

The French had Fort Richelieu at

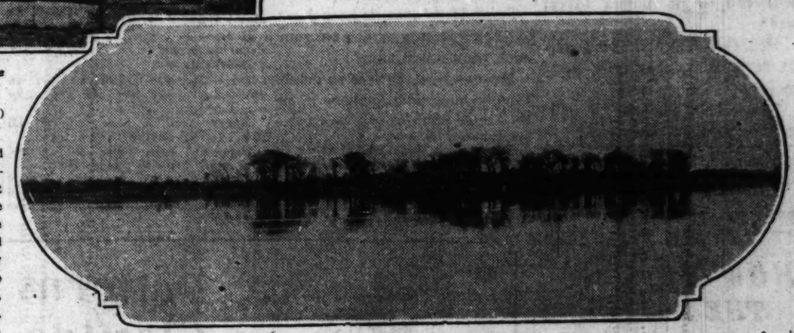
Sorel, Fort Chambly at the rapids and basin of the Richelieu river at Chambly, the fort on the Isle aux Noix, Fort Frederick at Crown Point on Lake Champlain, and Fort Carillon at the carry between Lake Champlain and Lake George. It was later and is now Fort Ticonderoga, but Montcalm, the great, fine minded French soldier, greater even than his conqueror, Wolfe, had named it Carillon, for the waterfall which sounded in his ears at night as a chime of bells. He also said it was a bad fort, and would be "a trap in which an honest man would lose his reputation." This was most singularly proved to be true in 1777, when Burgoyne drove the American Gen. St. Clair out of it by mounting a few cannon on a higher hill which commanded it, and in doing so nearly broke the heart of the American revolution.



The Isle aux Noix, which was the last defense of the lakes from attack from the south.

Benedict Arnold.

No other waterway on the North American continent has seen such military action as has this stretch of river, lake, and portage between the harbors of Montreal and New York.

The first American navy fought and lost its battle off Valcour Island in Lake Champlain under that most remarkable man, hero and traitor, Benedict Arnold. That was when the American invasion of Canada, undertaken before the Declaration of Independence and while Boston was besieged, had proved a heroic winter failure [to be reverted to in these articles], and when in the retreat of 1776 it seemed impossible for the sick and dispirited troops of the colonies to cover their withdrawal from Canada and to hold the lakes.

The British won at Valcour Island, but winning, they did not dare come farther south than Crown Point. The Americans took refuge at Ticonderoga, where they held their ground. Carleton, the British commander, went back to Canada, and it was a year later that Burgoyne came down the same route to be defeated at Saratoga.

This route is where Abercrombie was defeated by Montcalm in a greater disaster than that of Braddock at Fort Duquesne at the forks of the Ohio. It is where Gen. Dieskau was captured by the colonials and British. It is where the massacre of Fort William Henry took place. It is the real dark and bloody ground of prehistoric and historic America. It has been the jugular vein of America. Its recorded contests began when Champlain fired his arquebuses. Its last great fight was near Plattsburg, when the gallant MacDonough won a great naval battle in 1814, one harder to win than Perry's in Lake Erie and one in which defeat would have been more serious.

Historic Memories.

This waterway has the story of Jane McCrea, the story of the brilliant and beloved Englishman, Lord Howe, killed in a skirmish which lost a battle with Montcalm, and it has one of the world's greatest ghost stories in the death of Maj. Duncan Campbell of the Black Watch, the Scotch Highlanders whom George II. recruited from the border marches.

At Ticonderoga the waterway gave Ethan Allen, the Green Mountain boy, his fame for American school boys who know him for his "great Jehovah and the Continental Congress." At Ticonderoga the waterway saw the ruin of the British Gen. Abercrombie in the French war and the near ruin of the American Gen. St. Clair in the revolution. Farther down, near the Hudson, it saw Burgoyne's army enclosed and taken by American patriots who might have lost their war if they had not won at Bennington and Saratoga.

It is a present day wonderland for the traveler and tourist and its ruins and monuments preserve its past.

SAM 'N' HENRY By Correll & Gosden

The Boys Are Broke and Things Look Mighty, Mighty Dark

[In trying to move a small safe Sam injured his foot, and we find the boys spending an evening in their room.]

SAM — Henry, I think my foot's goin' be a'right by tomorrow, an' I kin git back on de job.

Henry—If yo' is countin' on mashin' yo' foot ev'vy time yo' move sumpin', yo' betteh git some iron shoes or sumpin'.

Sam—Well, dat was yo' fault, Henry, 'cause yo' let de safe slide down out o' yo' hand on my feet. Anotheh thing, I can't move no safe by myself.

Henry — Don' argue wid me now. I'se busy.

(Henry has been sitting at a table in the room, writing on a piece of cardboard.)

Sam—Whut is yo' figgerin' out dere, Henry?

Henry—I is de president of de comp'ny, an' I'se figgerin' up how much money we'd made today if we'd worked an' hauled a trunk ev'vy hour.

Sam — How much would we made, Henry?

Henry—Dat's a matteh dat we gotta take up at a open meetin'.

Sam—Well, tell me dis, Henry. How is we goin' git some money tomorrow to git sumpin' to eat wid?

Henry—I'se thinkin' 'bout goin' to de bank an' borrowin' some money.

Sam—Well, whut is yo' goin' give de bank fo' cor-rat-ral?

THINKIN' IS HARD WORK

Henry—Give 'em Gram'pa, de hoss, for cor-rat-ral. Dat'll let 'em know dat we mean bizness.

Sam—If yo' take de hoss down to de bank, Henry, how is we goin' haul trunks wid him?

Henry—Now, don' be so dumb. I ain't goin' take de hoss in de bank in de man's office. We'll put a mor'gage on de hoss.

Sam—I don' think he kin carry no more, Henry. He got all de harness on him an' he got a great big collar. He's pullin' enough.

Henry (heaving a sigh of disgust at Sam's ignorance)—Dere yo' go. Listen, yo' is de advertisin' manager, ain't yo'?

Sam—Yeh, I'se de advertisin' manager. Whut about it, Henry?

Henry—Well, tend to de advertisin' department an' don' mess wid de president no mo'.

Sam—De only thing, Henry, we gotta figger out how we kin make some money.

Henry—Well, I been figgerin' all day. I been thinkin' and thinkin'.

Sam—Yo' been asleep fo' de las' four hours heah on de bed, Henry.

Henry—Dere yo' go agin. I done tol' yo' dat's when I do my thinkin'—when I'se layin' down wid my eyes closed.

Sam—I thought yo' was asleep, Henry.

Henry—Sometimes when I'se thinkin' I think so hard dat it sorta kill my brain fo' a minute an' I sorta drop off to sleep.

Sam—Well, keep on thinkin', Henry, 'cause we gotta make some money heah.

(There is a knock at the door.)

Henry (fearing trouble) — O, O. Dere's somebody at de door. I hope it ain't de lan'lord 'cause we owes him enough.

Sam—Whut is yo' goin' tell him, Henry?

"Special Delivery for Sam Smith."

A LETTEH FROM LIZA

Henry—You is de treasurer. You handle de mattah. (Calls to door.) Come in.

(The door opens and a special delivery carrier walks in.)

Sam (speechless at not seeing the landlord)—Awa—awa—awa——.

Man (interrupting)—Special delivery for Sam Smith.

Sam—Dat's me, mistah. Han' it to me heah. I got a bad foot. I can't git on it much, mistah.

Henry—If dat's from Liza, I hope she's sendin' you some money, dat's all.

Sam—Mus' I sign on dis line heah, mistah?

Man—No, no, sign on this line down at the bottom.

Henry—Is yo' done writ to Liza lately?

Sam (signing) — Wait a minute, Henry. S-m-i-t-h—dere you is, mistah. (As the carrier leaves.) Close de door when yo' go out, will yo' please?

Henry—Does Liza know you'se broke?

Sam—I fo'got to tell yo', Henry I writ her a lettah de otheh day an' tol' her dat we done started in de transfer bizness right now. I ain't said nothin' 'bout bein' broke.

Henry—Yo' betteh start thinkin' 'bout it cause we is flat, an' we ain't got no oats fo' de hoss. (Sam is nervous over his letter.) Stop shakin' dere an' open up de letteh.

Sam—Ev'vy time I git a lettah from Liza, Henry, it makes my heart jump right up in my throat, yo' know it? Umm—umm, I LOVES dat gal. Soon as I git on my feet an' git some money I goin' marry her too.

Henry—Read de letteh, read de letteh. Whut do she say?

Sam (as he gets the letter unfolded) —Umm—umm, listen to dis, Henry, listen to dis!

0-0-0!

Henry—I know. I kin tell by dat smile on yo' face. She's callin' yo' lollypop dere, or sweet geranium or sompin'. Shake de letteh an' see if dere's any money in it.

Sam—Ain't no money in it, Henry, but listen to dis. (Reads.) "My darlin' angel, little baby-face——" (to Henry) Umm—umm, ain't dat sumpin'?

Henry—Read de lettah now, read de lettah. Don' git de president mad.

Sam (reading)—"I'se jus' received yo' wonderful lettah an' I want you to know dat yo' little baby is waitin' fo' yo'." (To Henry) Doggone, Henry, dere's a sweet gal, now dere's a sweet gal.

Henry—Yo' must-a tol' her dat yo' was comin' back home to eat or sumpin'.

Sam—No I didn't, Henry. I jus' tol' her dat I'se gittin' 'long a'right. Tol' her we done gone in de transfer bizness an' we was goin' be big men.

Henry—Whut else do she say?

Sam—She say heah—"I joves you mo' an' mo' each day, an' when I thinks of you up in Chicago wid all de otheh big bizness men, I is proudeh an' proudeh of my little baby face."

Henry (disgusted)—O, O. If dere's any mo' stuff in dere like dat, skip dat.

Sam—Den she say heah—"I was tellin' gram'pa whut a big success you is makin' in de transfer bizness an' 'bout all de money dat you is makin' an' he tol' me to tell you——"

Henry (interrupting)—Whut is you done tol' dat gal?

Sam—I jus' tol' her dat we done bought a hoss an' wagon an' gone into de transfer bizness an' we was gonna git some mo' hosses soon.

Henry — Well, read what Liza's gram'pa say den. Let's hear it.

Sam—She say, "My gram'pa tol' me to tell you to be careful whut yo' do wid yo' money. Gram'pa talked to a friend o' his an' he tol' me to tell you to buy g-o-v-e-r-n-m-e-n-t——" (To Henry) Dat's gov'ment, ain't it, Henry?

Henry—Dat's right.

MORE ADVICE

Sam (reading)—Tol' me to tell you to buy gov'ment bonds an' be careful not to put too much money in one place.

Henry—O—O. If each one of us jus' had fifty cents we'd both take it oveh to de res'trant, I know dat.

Sam—Listen heah, Henry (readc)—"Gram'pa say to git two or three pieces of good real estate now an' hol' on to it."

Henry—De only way we goin' git any real estate is to steal it, dat's all.

Sam—Den she say heah (reads): "Gram'pa say dat real estate bonds is good, too, an' when you buy yo' hosses, buy 'em from some man dat knows his bizness."

Henry—We ain't got 'nuf money to buy a piece o' roast beef, much less any hoss meat.

Sam—Den she say heah on de nex' line: "Gram'pa say if you is makin' big money, you could send fifty or seventy-five dollahs each week to de bank down heah in Bummin'ham."

Henry—Dat man mus' think you is a millionaire, don' he? I don' know which is got less sense, Liza's gram'pa or our hoss, Gram'pa.

Sam—Liza's all mixed up, Henry. She mus' think we got money.

Henry—Read on—whut do she say dere?

Sam (reading)—"Gram'pa jus' tol' me to tell you not to throw yo' money away, but to hol' on to it now while you is got plen'y 'cause some day you might need all de money you is got now.

(There is a knock on the door.)

THE LANDLORD CALLS

Henry—Come in, come in.

(The landlord enters.)

Sam—Well, I be doggoned, heah's de lan'lord, Henry.

Henry (realizing the landlord's mission)—O, O. (To landlord) Good evenin', lan'lord. (Gets up to get his hat.) I was jus' gittin' ready to leave. I got a 'pointment down de street wid a gent'man. Yo' know I is de president of de transfer comp'ny.

Landlord—Now listen, boys, I done waited long 'nuf fo' dat rent. I is sorry to tell yo' but de time is up——

Henry (interrupting)—Jus' a minute, brotheh, jus' a minute heah. I'se gotta git down de street dere to see dis man fo' a few minutes, 'cause it means two—three hund'ed dollahs to me. Sam heah is treasurer an' he will handle dat matteh. I'll see yo' later. (To Sam) —Sam, you take care o' de gent'man heah. So long, I'll see yo' later. (Henry leaves.)

Landlord (to Sam as Sam puts on hat)—Just a minute, Sam, where is yo' goin'?

Sam (leaving)—I is de gent'man dat Henry is got de 'pointment wid.

HOW TO USE THE PATTERNS

A JUMPER frock is both useful and attractive looking, and pattern No. 706 is interesting and not difficult to handle. The jumper is sleeveless and collarless, both these parts being furnished by the blouse worn with it. Several blouses could be made, some of them of sheer white batiste, dimity, or linen; while a couple of others could be made of washable crêpe de chine in any desired color.

The jumper will look well made of kasha, one of the heavier crêpes, or linen, or silk broadcloth. It is cut in two pieces, and in the front is a deep "V" opening. After the seams have been finished, finish the neck and armholes with an inside or outside fitted facing or binding, hem it by hand across the bottom, and set in the pockets. It is a good way, in making these pockets, to baste a straight strip of the material over the basting, marking the slash and then marking the strip with the basting for the slash, also. Stitch close to this basting on both sides, and across the ends, and then cut through both thicknesses exactly on the basting.

Make tiny clips at the end so that the strip may be turned to the wrong side of the dress without puckering. Let the strip show as a binding on the right side, baste down all around and press well. Sew one of the pocket pieces to the upper edge of the strip, and one to the bottom edge. Then sew the pocket together in a seam down the sides and across the bottom. Overcast the pocket opening together in loose, large stitches and leave them in until the dress is finished.

The fullness on the shoulders is a becoming feature and prevents that "drawn" look over the bust one sometimes sees.

The blouse is finished across the bottom with a casing for elastic, and at the neck in the front it is slashed, and the edges bound. This slashed place makes it possible to slip over the head.

Pattern No. 702 is for a pretty dress for a young girl, Taffeta, crêpe, challis or most wash materials will be suitable and the bottom of the dress and sleeves may be picoted, bound or faced, as fancy dictates. Both front and back are slashed at the sides at the hip line, and the lower slashed edge gathered and stitched to the upper slashed edge. This gives the needed fullness to the skirt. The drop shoulders form the short sleeves, and the neck and slashed opening are finished with a binding.

The seams where the dress is slashed at the sides could be covered with some small embroidery design in cross stitch or in the laid work, and the same design could be used each side of the slashed opening at the neck.

Patterns by Clotilde

Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.; Copyright, 1927, by The Chicago Tribune.

668—Woman's dress. Sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3¾ yards of 36 inch material.

702—Girl's dress. Size 4, 6, 8, and 10 years. Size 10 requires 2 yards of 36 inch material.

706—Woman's or miss' jumper dress. Sizes 16, 18, and 20 years, and 34, 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 5⅛ yards of 36 or 40 inch material for the jumper and 2⅛ yards for the blouse.

Pattern No. 668 is for just the sort of dress that will be nice to wear at home many afternoons or mornings, depending on the material used, to a great extent. It is cut in two pieces—front and back—and at a low waist line the material extends out a way. Inverted plaits are formed on both sides, bringing the extended parts back so that a straight line will be made from armhole to hem. This also gives a graceful fullness when walking, without destroying the straight line effect.

Be sure that in laying the plaits you keep the under fold as straight and smooth as the upper. Baste each one from top to bottom and don't remove the bastings until the final pressing is given to the finished dress.

A string belt or sash of the dress material is attached to the front on each side and is tied in a bow in the back.

The dress is slashed down from the neck in the center front, underfaced and joined to the collar. It is pretty to pipe or finish the shoulder seams with a narrow band. In these short kimono sleeves. Prettily shaped turned back cuffs finish the sleeves, and a rather large patch pocket is stitched to the right side of the dress.

COSMETICS DRIVE AWAY THE BLUES

As Effective as Philosophy or Medicine Are the Good Old Standbys: Powder, Rouge and Lipstick.

by Dorothy Ordinaire

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—An efficient business woman of my acquaintance tells me that when she becomes particularly harassed about her work and the worries of making useful citizens out of three small sons, she doesn't pick up any book on philosophy, nor does she sit down in an attempt to readjust her mental outlook by a forced change of her own thoughts. She has tried that, and while on occasions she has found it helpful, there is a quicker way out of her depressions, a ridiculously feminine way, she admits. But maybe it isn't so ridiculous, since it is a known fact that no woman ever committed suicide on the way to buy a hat.

My business friend's secret is to dash over to her favorite masseuse's, have her face caressed by soft unguents, stroked by skillful hands—and eyes, cheeks, and mouth made up with the most effective cosmetics. She is willing to give the credit that is due the young woman for the restful massage she arranges, but the thing that is balm to her soul and which she wishes to put on record as the prescription par excellence for a rejuvenating effect on the spirit is a makeup job well done.

This supports the contention of Mme. Helene Rubinstein, one of the deans of the professional beautifying game. In a conversation I had with her recently she reported how, in her years of experience with thousands of women, she had seen this happy mental reaction to a face artfully embellished by cosmetic ruse. Not all the powers of philosophy impart quite that radiance of expression that one detects in the woman whose face has undergone clever cosmetic treatment.

Best Cure for the Blues.

"If a woman is feeling down in the mouth," says Mme. Rubinstein, "you cannot do her a greater kindness than to make her get her hair done, her nails, get a Turkish bath if she likes them, renew herself from every obvious angle of personal improvement, and add the finishing touch of cheering color on cheek and lips. Collette, the famous French writer, goes so far as to recommend 'a dash of rouge for a broken heart.'"

If we women were made of sterner stuff this advice might be set down as pure tommyrot. But until we are able to eliminate the motive of vanity which has been thousands of years in the making, we might just as well prescribe to the advantages of the moment, n'est ce pas?

And the moment is overflowing with advantages of the nature we are discussing. There are rouges and lipsticks for every type. There are color mixtures in powders, should the raw shade not conform harmoniously with the general color scheme.

Just any old dash of rouge dabbed any old way on the face we would not recommend for an ailing heart, much less for a face that needed cheering. This cosmetic cure for what ails you isn't the novice's game. It requires a good deal of perfection in the art of laying it on to lift the face into an evangelist of the philosophy we are preaching today.

Not all women are lucky enough to be able to afford the advantages of a professional craftsman, but there are certain rules about applying makeup that every woman may adapt with no expense and great advantage to her face—and her spirit.

A Happy Illusion.

To let you in on a bit of beauty parlor gossip, there is a certain young woman, famed for her pulchritudinous fascination, who isn't a beauty at all. She has a standing daily appointment with a beauty parlor operator who knows her makeup game to the last drop on the eyelash. There are hundreds of women who call in these skilled makeup artists to give them the finishing touches for dinner, supper-dance and ball.

Those of us who have to do our own handpainting needn't be discouraged, however, if we are willing to accept advice from those in a position to give it. Chiefly, women go wrong on makeup because of the light they operate under. Crowded living conditions frequently land the dressing table in the worst corner of the room, farthest from the window or from the electric light.

For day wear the only way to make up properly is to stand immediately in front of a window facing the strong daylight and to use a hand mirror close up. This is the only way you can achieve a correct idea of the color you are applying or of the manner in which you are applying it. The shadow from electric lights or from draped windows is too tricky to gamble with for honest outdoor effect.

Another important item when you are facing this strong light is: Do not be content with a front view, solely. A profile study of the rouge application may reveal a round patch on the cheek, sharply outlined, so that one sees exactly where the rouge begins and ends. And a successful rouging job requires, above all things, a blending of the color into the skin, with no trace of where the red begins and ends.

Rouge Under Powder.

A third mistake commonly made is to apply powder before the makeup. Countless times I have observed women powdering the whole face and then rubbing rouge on top of the powdered cheek in circles of varying size. The rouge goes on under the powder—not on top of it. And there is a whole set of rules about how to lay the rouge on in paths rather than in circles to reduce cheeks, or make them appear fuller, to avoid calling attention to hollow cheeks and to minimize length and breadth, generally.

The contour of the face should be studied with a view to improving it, where necessary, with the help of rouge. If the face, say, is broad, either fat or with large cheek and jaw bones, it can be narrowed by laying the most brilliant path of rouge near the nose. If the cheek bones are naturally prominent the eye is attracted to them unmercifully if they are further highlighted with red splotches. If the face is thin, narrow and long it can be made to appear less so by keeping the most brilliant rouge well back on the cheek and blending forward.

One can get a better blending effect when the fingers are used instead of the rouge pad. Before rouge is used at all, you understand that a creaming of the face is essential. Just a light creaming followed by a wiping off, so that the skin is simply flexible. And rouge put on in dots makes the blending with the fingers easier.

Rouge should not be allowed to go low on the cheeks, as this gives a sagging, aged and drawndown look.

Painting the Lips.

Grease paint foundations are advised against for any but the professional because movements of the facial muscles tend to cause cracks such as actors and actresses find on their faces at the end of a performance. On the stage it is not noticeable, but on the street or under more intimate night surroundings it is.

In painting the lips the effect should be to have the curves even, and to achieve this find exactly where the center of the upper one is located and work from there to each outer edge. Though your mouth may not be designed for a Cupid's bow effect, the fullest color must come in the center, anyway.

If the lower lip is too full, rouge it lightly, and if you wish to reduce the size of a large mouth, stop the paint above the extreme edge of the lip and tone down at the corners so it blends into the natural color.

ROMANCE AFTER MARRIAGE

It's Not the Daily Spatting Over Trivialities That Takes the Joy Out of Wedded Life—It's the Lack of Romance. Here Are Ways to Keep the Precious Quality Alive.

by Doris Blake

Is the power to conserve romance after marriage vested in the woman more than in the man?

Is it more often the wife's own fault than masculine fickleness or promiscuity when another woman steals her husband?

Not long ago one of our well known domestic court judges gave out the unqualified statement that a woman loses her husband to another woman solely through her own fault. But that does not take into account the born philanderer whose amatory proclivities could not be suppressed were he married to the greatest paragon of all the charms and virtues accredited to the art of holding a husband. True, this class of male appears in a limited edition when you consider the great army of husbands who have a natural desire to remain loyal to the women they wed.

One thing we do know is that a certain amount of romance has to be conserved in marriage or discontent and unhappiness is bred. It isn't the bickerings over the meat bills, nor the personal habits or mannerisms that get on the nerves of married people half so much as the feeling that romance is escaping, or has already passed them by. The fact that women do most of the divorce petitioning in this country may be interpreted to mean that they are more avid to recover the old glow that made their dreams at one time so rose tinted.

Give in Order to Receive.

On the face of the divorce plea other reasons may be advanced for the separation, but in countless numbers of cases is it not the bleak unromanticism of the marriage that makes it unbearable? Give an average woman a dash of romance and her humblest household duty may not become a privilege, but it certainly is robbed of ugliness. Give an average woman a man of ordinary attainments, yet so long as she is permitted to retain faith in his inherent fineness, goodness, and ultimate achievements she takes up her daily tasks with good heart.

Women need more romance in their lives than men. Needing it more then, let us go on the assumption that, like other virtues that contribute to the welfare of the world, the more you give of yourself the more you get in return. There is nothing to be gained from arguing that the romance in married life should be a fifty-fifty proposition, that a husband is entitled to no more of it than he gives. Fifty-fifty arrangements are not serviceable in marriage contracts, however well they serve in purely commercial arrangements. An entirely different set of emotions are brought into marriage which can inspire interest and love from the opposite sex, must express in some degree health, cleanliness, refinement. Intelligence, adaptability, unselfishness, and sincerity she needs likewise, but to be the magnet of attraction this purely physical thing of looks is vital.

While much of the mystery of the sweetheart is dissipated in the intimacy of marriage, the woman who wants romance in her life should strive to maintain some semblance of it in her own personal conduct. This can be accomplished to some extent by modesty of person, by avoiding the cheapness of overfamiliarity and by upholding a nice feminine reserve and privacy in the intimate affairs of her life. Many a man has been shocked out of romance by coarseness and vulgarity.

Then there is the element of tact in handling a man, or finesse we might better call it. Anyway, it is the graciousness that tells a woman just what to do, when and when not to do it. With this quality, wounds, irritations and resentment do not stifle the man's longing to bestow a love expression. A too blatant frankness, though the criticism may be just enough, will instantly snuff out tenderness. A little of the old rosy deceit that was practiced in those premarriage days when some correction was deemed advisable, had rather be employed. No girl before marriage would threaten her romance with the hammer and tongs of homely truths.

Of course, no one is always agreeable, always magnetic, always inspiring. We all have out faults, our moods and our mannerisms. But in those courtship days the unattractive side was concealed fairly well—and romance prospered. The innocent camouflage kept up after marriage, that is, the suppressing of your disagreeable impulses, rather than the practicing of deceit builds up the habit of agreeableness which makes others happy and in turn brings happiness back into your own life.

Aids to Romance.

On the contrary, as first aid we should place a high standard of personal attractiveness. If women succeed in this their husbands are inspired to maintain a similar degree of attractiveness. This is a highly important need to the continuation of romance after marriage, since in the early attraction of the now united pair this element of personal appearance had a large share. When a husband wanders off in the direction of other women he often does it merely because he finds in them, or thinks he does, the attraction his wife formerly had.

A woman's task as a wife is harder than that of sweetheart because she has to be both. Much of the mystery of the sweetheart is gone from her, which makes it more imperative that her physical attractiveness be continued. Married or single, the inspiration for emotions of love is beauty. It may not mean in either man or woman regularity of feature or any special height, build, or coloring. Nevertheless, it is a physical ideal that is pleasing. When this ideal degenerates through shiftlessness or carelessness of person there is no inspiration for romance to feed upon.

Personal Traits.

A woman, to possess attraction combines. And women unquestionably do bring to marriage an omnivorous appetite for romance. That many of them do survive successfully the meager diets allotted them by their too, too practical consorts only goes to prove that they are a pretty amenable sex, after all.

Assuming, as we have suggested, that it is up to the woman to do most of the romance conservation work, what are some of the practical aids?

The women who succeed in getting the attentions that indicate a husband's keen romantic interest are not the drudges, nor the slaves, nor the doormat types. They are not the kind of women who slump off in personal attractiveness.

"Dear Miss Blake: I go out with a certain boy once in a while. If I happen to mention meeting a new boy or being out, he starts to rave. I tell him he is only jealous, but he says not.

"I dislike going out with him for that reason, as it spoils the whole day. I go out with him because he has given me a gift. SHORTY."

It isn't necessary to go out with a boy who makes himself objectionable because of unreasonableness, Shorty. 'Twould be better to return the gift if you feel obligated because of it. We all like our friends to be pleasant and agreeable.

Harps on Single Blessedness.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 24 and have been keeping company with a fellow three years my senior for six months. I love him and he shows an interest in me, and no fellow could treat a girl better. There is one thing he says to me which hurts and that is, 'It is foolish to get married; I am going to be a bachelor.'

"Do you advise me to give him up? "EVELYN."

He may not mean what he says, but you have your tip and should act accordingly, Evelyn. It isn't necessary to give up seeing him, but 'twould be wise to cultivate some other friends, as well. It may cause him to change his mind.

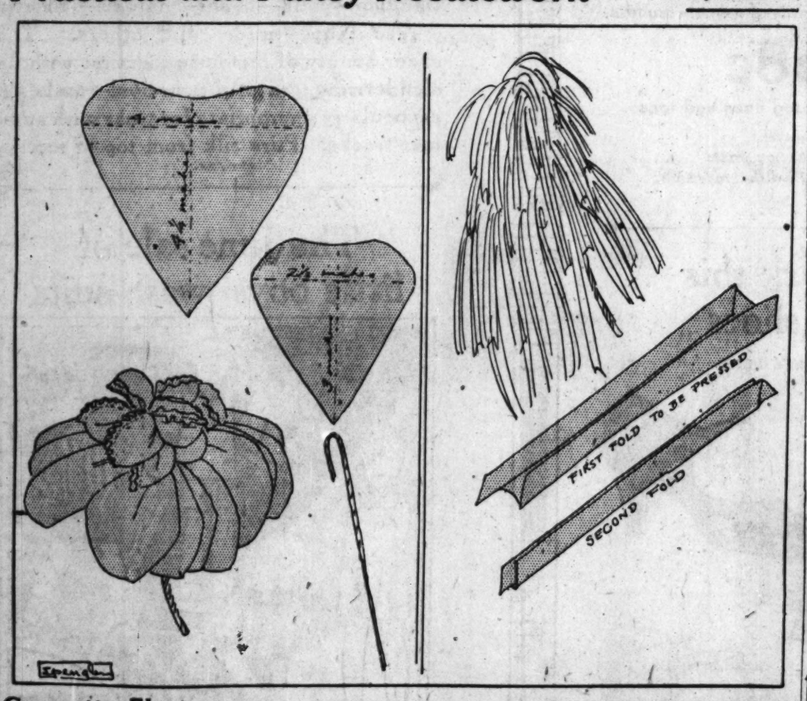
Practical and Fancy Needlework . . . By Clotilde



Georgette Flowers Add a Touch of Smartness to the New Summer Gowns

What is your sewing problem? Do you have trouble in following a pattern? Do you find difficulty in making a skirt hang evenly or making a sleeve that doesn't twist? If there is anything you would like to know about these or other problems of needlework write to Clotilde, The Tribune, Chicago, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope, if a personal reply is desired.

THE large flowers worn on the shoulder of dresses this season are made from all colors of georgette. Number one flower, shown today, is made of black georgette. One half of a yard is required either on the straight or bias of the material. The petals are left raw edged. There are sixteen of the large petals that measure four and one-fourth inches from top to point and four inches across the top of each petal.

Curve in the top of the petal, as in a rose. The next row of petals is three inches long and two and one-half inches across the top of each petal. There are fifteen petals in this group.

The third row has the same amount of petals as the second and the same measurements.

To begin to make the flower, take a piece of soft lace wire six inches long, double the top down one inch, put several thicknesses of the georgette over this wire to make the padded center of the flower. Put the last fifteen petals described up around the covered wire center. Lap the petals very closely and sew on firmly.

Next, add the fifteen petals on the second row and then add the sixteen large ones. Use a fine needle with a double silk thread the color of the georgette used.

Shir up the top of the first row of petals. Pull up the thread until it is tight. Either tie or give it a firm stitch. Hold those shirred petals over a steaming tea kettle until thoroughly saturated with steam. After it is dry, pull out the shirring threads and you will have a row of crinkled petals. The silk thread is used instead of the cotton thread for shirring or basting on soft materials, as when it is pulled out it does not leave a mark. A narrow bias strip of the georgette is wound tightly around the stem and finished off under the petals. A few stitches will help to hold it from getting loose.

Number two is called the carpet rag flower. It is made of bias cut strips, two and one-half inches wide on the selvage edge of the bias material used. Turn in both edges to the center. Press this well with a hot iron. Fold together again and press this well, also.

Make the center for the flower the same as in number one. Cut the first row of strips three inches long. Make ten of those strips and sew on to the stem. Cut the next row five inches long and make fifteen of those. Sew those next to the first row on the stem. Now cut the next row six inches long. Make twenty of those. Lap those strips closely together.

Cut the ends on a slant or straight across. Finish off the stem as in number one. The colors chosen for these flowers are black, jonquil, and butter yellow, and the soft shades of orchid.

FOR PERFECT PERMANENT WAVING

One Circuline for each curl—in clear, fresh water.

The Charm of Wavy Hair with Perfect Safety

Mr. Charles Nessler, the original inventor of permanent waving, states that "Circuline represents the highest possible achievement in permanent waving, because it treats each head of hair according to its individual requirements." That is why Circuline, unlike any other method of permanent waving, assures you of a wave just as tight or as loose as desired—as beautifully flowing as though Nature herself had waved it.

And not only is Circuline gentle, sure, absolutely free from any injurious chemicals such as lye, ammonia, potash, but it requires actually 100 degrees less heat than is necessary for a marcel wave.

But you are only sure of a Circuline Wave when your hairdresser uses authentic Circulines. You will recognize them as she immerses one for each curl in clear, fresh water. Each is individually wrapped, and stamped with the name "Nestle Circuline"—your assurance of a genuine Circuline Wave!

HORSEMANSHIP

By CAPT. FENTON S. JACOBS 11TH U.S. CAVALRY

This Article Discusses the Aid by Which the Rider Conveys His Commands to the Horse.

IN previous installments, of which this is the fifth, the rider has been placed in the saddle, at the halt, in a position that it is believed will best favor the use of the aids. Of course, it is understood that not being mechanical no two horses are identically the same, any more than we could expect any two people to be identical. For this reason no two riders will ride the same horse in exactly the same way. Notwithstanding, there are many fundamental principles which will apply to all horses and riders; it being largely a question of correct and proportionate application in order to produce the same results. The most important of these are the aids.

The aids are the different means employed by the rider to convey his desires or intentions to the horse. The aids, principally, may be divided into natural and artificial groups. The natural aids are the legs, hands and weight. The artificial aids are the spur, the whip, the voice, the pat, the martingale, the longe, and all the other means of domination created by the industry and ingenuity of man to prolong, strengthen, or take the place of his natural aids.

The legs, generally speaking, control the lateral movement of the hind quarters and give the horse the forward impulse. It is obviously necessary to produce movement before movement can be directed and controlled. The legs should be fixed—that is to say, close to and in light contact with the horse. They should be free from all involuntary motion and very steady in their actions.

Avoiding Confusion.

The fault opposed to fixity is swinging, which confuses the horse. When the pressure of both legs equally is increased the effect should be to move the horse forward; of producing the movement which the reins should direct. When one leg acts alone, for example, the right, immediately in rear of the girth, it should have the result, while provoking the forward movement, of pushing the croup to the left. The horse gives away from leg pressure. If he hesitates to obey, act by little taps of the calf and cease as soon as he obeys.

To teach a horse to respond to the legs: Dismounted, stand opposite the girth on the left side, hold the near snaffle rein and with the thumb prod him immediately in rear of the girth, increasing the intensity until he moves his hind quarters a step or two to his right. Then reward him with a pat on the neck and a handful of oats. Then mount, and producing slight tension on the reins, press the calf in rear of the girth in a similar manner as the thumb prod.

At first this should be attempted only a few times daily. Repeat the exercise on both sides. The importance of keeping the legs to the rear, as described in the third installment, cannot be overestimated. They are the logical rudders for the horse as they control practically all of his body in rear of the forehand. They drive his hind legs up under him and assist him to start, back, stop, turn or jump.

How to Use the Hands.

The hands control the lateral movement of the forehand and check, halt, or back the horse. The hands through the reins and bits, act on the horse's mouth, head, neck and shoulders, and like the legs, they may act, resist or give way. They may even act, indirectly, on the hindquarters by giving the shoulders such a position that his haunches are obliged to change direction. This is called opposing the shoulders to the haunches. For exact effects the reins must remain adjusted and stretched during work; if they were flapping, the indications of the hand would not reach the horse, or if they did they would arrive confused or in the form of awkward jerks.

Two adjusted reins acting rearward together, equally should have the effect of slowing, stopping, or backing the horse. They are called direct reins. This action should be produced by fixing the hands and closing the fingers; the elbows and hands should move the least possible to the rear. When one rein acts alone it has the effect, while provoking a retarding movement, of displacing the forehand, head, or neck or all, as indicated in the accompanying sketch.

Accord of the Aids.

Before seeking to regulate or reënforce the action of one rein or one leg by the other, one must be sure they do not contradict each other. If the right hand or leg acts, the left at first should give way to allow the right to produce its full effect; it resists if it is necessary to regulate the movement. With the reins held in one hand with the bearing rein alone acting, the direct rein alone hangs loose at the moment of action. If the two reins then are not in accord, at least they do not contradict each other.

The action of the hands and legs are opposed to each other in effect, therefore, when the legs act to increase speed the hands should give way—likewise, when the reins act to slow the gait the legs give way, then resist when it is necessary to limit the movement. This is called the accord of the aids.

The qualities of a good hand are steadiness, lightness, softness and firmness. A steady hand is one free from useless movement. A light hand maintains the merest contact with the horse's mouth. A soft hand gives support. A firm hand gives a frank decided bearing. Under no circumstances should reins ever be jerked. The curb reins should be used the least possible.

The hands should be independent with respect to the movement of the body and legs. If the hands are well placed, separated as they should be, the nails face each other, the elbows come against the body naturally; in consequence, the shoulders fall back, the chest is free, and the head is easily raised.

On the other hand, if the nails are down, the elbows have a tendency to fly out, the shoulders come forward, and close on the chest; the head follows the movement of the shoulders, the eyes are lowered, while the buttocks tend to slide to the rear.

How to Use Weight.

The weight (or balance) is used to supplement the action of the legs and hands. The weight of the body, by inclining the portion above the hips in the direction of desired movement acts to facilitate the obedience of the horse, and should be in accord with the effects produced by the legs and hands. The body inclination, by anticipating the sudden movement of the horse, also, enables the rider to retain his balance.

The aids should always be applied intermittently; must be distinct and not confused; thus, being at the halt to move forward at the walk: Gather the horse (slight tension on reins and slight pressure of legs—as a signal to attract his attention and to prepare him to respond promptly), then slightly relax the fingers of the hand and use the legs and weight in combination as previously described, with quickly repeated applications until the horse moves forward.

Being at the walk to halt: Gather the horse and use direct reins intermittently and weight, until the horse stops.

Illustrating the five principal effects of one (right) Rein. Also the direction produced by supporting legs, as indicated.

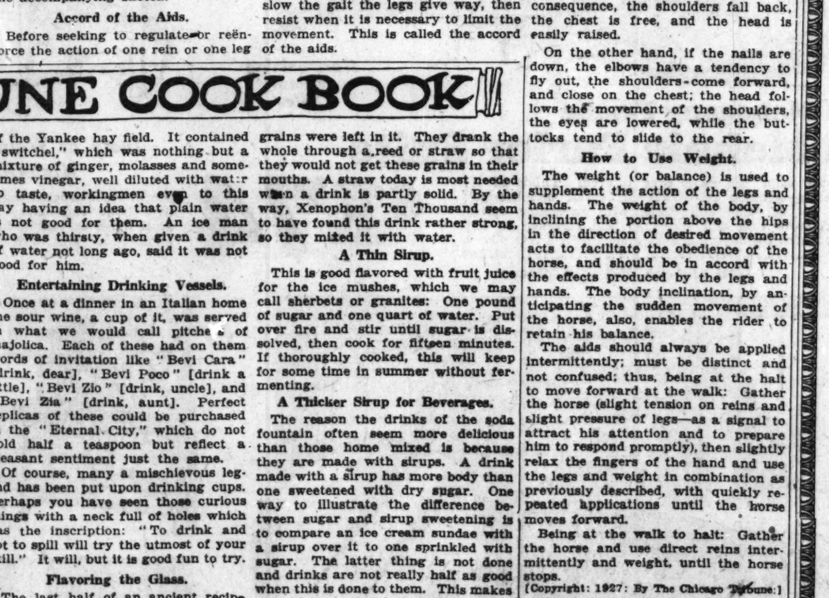
LEGEND.

Ha—Rider's hand active.
Hp—Rider's hand passive.
La—Rider's leg active.
Lp—Rider's leg passive.
S—Horse's shoulders.
H—Horse's haunches.

Upper arrows indicate direction produced by hands with leg support. Legs also control haunch displacement. For action of left rein reverse diagram. Note that reins held in one hand act in accord. Both reins carried to right will move horse to right.

1. For WIDE TURN to RIGHT—Use "RIGHT OPENING or LEADING REIN," having first produced forward movement by active legs. Always used in training young horses.

2. For SHORT TURN to RIGHT—Use "RIGHT DIRECT REIN." Right leg active in rear of girth. To widen turn, increase action of left leg, decrease action of right hand.



3. For WIDE TURN to LEFT—Use "RIGHT BEARING REIN." Both legs active. The direction produced is the opposite of that in No. 1, although same rein is used.

4. For SHORT TURN to LEFT—Use "RIGHT INDIRECT REIN IN FRONT OF WITHERS." Left leg active. This effect is opposed to No. 2, using the same rein.

5. See arrow direction of "RIGHT INDIRECT REIN IN REAR OF WITHERS." Active legs will produce movement to the left oblique.

This study of the five effects of reins with supporting legs indicates their theoretical effects only. Intermediate effects can be produced by increasing or decreasing the intensity with which aids are used to overcome resistance of horse. Remember, ALWAYS DECREASE INTENSITY AS SOON AS HORSE RESPONDS.

Fruity Nectars Are a Pleasant Diversion for the Warm Days of Approaching Summer

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

By Jane Eddington.

WHY the up to your health and the down to your disaster was so enormously rich in sentiments and sayings, in equipment and accessory, is hard to say, but it was. Mad mischief an the courting of disaster has seemingly inspired men to the most capital exercise of wit and brilliancy, while perhaps an Emerson was telling folk that they should live on so low a plane that air would excite them and they could get intoxicated on water, and Plato some 2,000 years earlier also made remarks cousin to this.

It is not that it could not be done—we have nothing to show that the immortally famous nectar of the gods was alcoholic—it simply has not been, or at any rate to the notable extent that strong drinks have been praised and thought necessary to stimulate wit, friendship and love. The history of the wine cup alone from pocula to stein—we are using wine figuratively, and know that it was Gambrinus who invented the liquid for the stein—what a vocabulary it takes to understand it! If specimens of the glasses alone could be had from the days when Rome from her throne of beauty ruled the world, perhaps with some of the other accompaniments, they would fill a museum.

At any rate we have some of the Roman words used. A crater was a large vessel in which to mix the wine with water, from which it was dipped with a cyathus, "a small vessel containing not quite two ounces." The poculum, plural pocula, was the general drinking cup. The beaker or goblet was a calix—did the flower calix come from it, or it from the flower? And there was the expensive patera and another which was a great tankard. We say imbibe where the Roman said "bibere" or "potare" [we get our potation here], while potor was the drinker until he got fuddled, and then he was the "potator." By the way, one of the Roman drinking vessels was without foot or handle, and was used by two people, "conibos."

But to take a leap across time, we may come to the "little brown jug" beer was made of barley and the of the Yankee hay field. It contained "switchel," which was nothing but a mixture of ginger, molasses and sometimes vinegar, well diluted with water to taste, workingmen even to this day having an idea that plain water is not good for them. An ice man who was thirsty, when given a drink of water not long ago, said it was not good for him.

Entertaining Drinking Vessels.

Once at a dinner in an Italian home the sour wine, a cup of it, was served in what we would call pitchers of majolica. Each of these had on them words of invitation like "Bevi Cara" [drink, dear], "Bevi Poco" [drink a little], "Bevi Zio" [drink, uncle], and "Bevi Zia" [drink, aunt]. Perfect replicas of these could be purchased in the "Eternal City," which do not hold half a teaspoon but reflect a pleasant sentiment just the same.

Of course, many a mischievous legend has been put upon drinking cups. Perhaps you have seen those curious things with a neck full of holes which has the inscription: "To drink and not to spill will try the utmost of your skill." It will, but it is good fun to try.

Flavoring the Glass.

The last half of an ancient recipe for mint julep reads: "Epicures rub the lips of the tumbler with a piece of fresh pineapple, and the tumbler itself is very often incrusted outside with stalactites of ice. As the ice melts, you drink." An epicure might rub the rim of his tumbler, containing a minted lemonade, with the fresh pineapple. The ancient bartenders did a thing of this sort more delicate than hanging a slice or lobster shaped piece of lemon on a glass. A sugared and chilled and tender sprig of mint in a glass of lemonade—or sprigs—make one draw a long breath in order to get their full aroma.

Drinking Through a Straw.

It grows increasingly entertaining to an investigator of the eating habits of the ancients to find how there is little that is new under the sun—just new adaptations—in the ways of eating and drinking and getting food since the creation of man. Xenophon was born somewhere nearly 450 B. C., and it is a delight to read what he sets down about food in his writings. Among other things he says is that the Armenians lived in spacious underground houses in winter where they had abundant stores of wheat, barley, and vegetables, and where they kept also their sheep, goats, cattle, and poultry. But note this: They had beer in jars which they sucked through a reed when thirsty. This grains were left in it. They drank the whole through a reed or straw so that they would not get these grains in their mouths. A straw today is most needed when a drink is partly solid. By the way, Xenophon's Ten Thousand seem to have found this drink rather strong, so they mixed it with water.

A Thin Sirup.

This is good flavored with fruit juice for the ice mushes, which we may call sherbets or granites: One pound of sugar and one quart of water. Put over fire and stir until sugar is dissolved, then cook for fifteen minutes. If thoroughly cooked, this will keep for some time in summer without fermenting.

A Thicker Sirup for Beverages.

The reason the drinks of the soda fountain often seem more delicious than those home mixed is because they are made with sirups. A drink made with a sirup has more body than one sweetened with dry sugar. One way to illustrate the difference between sugar and sirup sweetening is to compare an ice cream sundae with a sirup over it to one sprinkled with sugar. The latter thing is not done and drinks are not really half as good when this is done to them. This makes a good beverage sirup and is a universal formula: Two cups sugar, two cups water or fruit juice. This is the proportion used for making raspberry shrub from the vinegar which has stood over raspberries. The sugar must be completely dissolved before the liquid boils to prevent early crystalization. Then boil to 220 degrees, or a bit higher.

Sipping Sherbets.

Fruit juices and water half frozen have been a summer drink for a long time. In the Italian slums to this day we find lemon juice diluted till no sweetening of it is required—and beyond even that—and frozen to a mush, and greatly appreciated because cold. It is sherbet of a sort, or a "granite."

In one of Lady Wortley Montagu's letters, dated 1717, she tells of being entertained by a Turkish woman who gave her a dinner of fifty dishes of meat which were placed on the table one at a time, with knives of gold and hafts set in diamonds. "The table cloth and napkins," she says, "were all of tiffany, which were spoiled with the using, although so costly." (You can buy something of the same sort to this day, if you are foolish enough to want to.)

Of the sherbet she says: "The sherbet, which is the liquor which they drink at meals, was served in china bowls, but the covers are salvers of massive gold." The editor of these letters also makes a few remarks on this subject, as follows: "The present sultan and most of the grandees have now another kind of sherbet in their houses, known in Europe under the unromantic name of brandy. Sherbet, however, is still habitually sipped in hot weather, and I often joined an old boy over a bowl of this very pleasant beverage."

Hot Sirup.

In making fruit punches containing pieces of fruit, in order to bring out the flavors in full, use the sirup hot over fruit. It may then be made of two cups of sugar and one of liquid. It blends different fruit juices, but there are other ways of getting blends and a mussy mixture of fruit is not worth while and is not economical.

The Lemon Sharpener.

Lemon juice often brings up the flavor of other fruits wonderfully, but at the same time it may replace all aromas with its own, which is not so good, so it must be used with great discretion in mixing fruit drinks, unless they are specifically lemonades, which are the more agreeable for having the lemon juice toned down. The action in all cases between lemon juice and the mild fruit juices is reciprocal. It does wonders, for instance, for raspberry juice, but when we want to get the first enjoyment of our drink through our nose, it is well to add lemon juice by drops only, and the skin not at all, for when manipulated it throws out the strongest smell of anything. And pineapple juice in some cases will do the same thing as lemon juice, and leave more of flower to the drink. By the way, the reason some people will not use lemon with tea is that it drowns the odor of the tea—the very flower of it.

The Ginger Stinger.

The mixing of odors and juices in drinks is a nice business, and I am fond of telling of this experiment tried on a willing taster. First, a cup of boiling water was poured over a dozen sprigs of mint, allowed to stand five minutes, and drained off. Then a little lime juice was added to part of it. It had the daintiest of aromas, but not much character, when it was sweetened to taste. To the other part was added orange juice and the mint flavor was almost lost, but when a few drops of lemon juice were added out came the mint flavor, stronger than in these others. So when your drink lacks character, no matter how fine the fruit juices and dainty the flavors, add some drops of lemon juice, but again we say be careful if you do not want to turn it into what may correctly be called a lemonade, because the lemon flavor leads all the others.

To call ginger a "stinger" is to adopt the name from an English "temperance drink" containing as much cayenne pepper as ginger, so that the latter was really the stinger, but there is something so clean and cool about the sharpness or sting of ginger that we like to use that characterization of it. The quite modern combination of ginger ale over ice cream, which is so highly appreciated—it is really a ginger ice cream soda to which a little sirup may be added, as well as the ice cream and ginger ale—owes its popularity to a slight sting. The old home made ginger beers were nothing but ginger teas sweetened and flavored, and the hayfield drink was often made of nothing but powdered ginger, molasses, and water.

The Hop Bitter.

The old "small beer" was nothing but hop tea. An old recipe for it was: "To twelve quarts of cold water add one and a half pints of strong hop tea and one and one-half pints of molasses. Mix well together and bottle it immediately. It will be fit for use the next day if the weather is warm." "Common beer" was just hop tea with spruce or some other flavor, leavened for one day only with yeast.

A Hop Tincture.

This is one tested out and found good with seltzer water, which it seems was invented for some medicinal use nearly 200 years ago. Add one tablespoon of ground ginger to one-half ounce of hops and boil these in a pint of water gently for one-half hour. The hop leaves swell so that only a cup of liquid is likely to be left at the end of the half hour. Strain this off and add one-fourth pound of brown sugar. Stir till dissolved and cook to sirup stage. When cool add to it one cup or a little more of cold water. This will make eight glasses, served by filling a glass one-fourth full of the sirup, then adding seltzer water till the foam reaches the top of the glass. To make it mild, add some cream to the sirup or even as much cream as sirup. If you like to put your nose into a foam, here you have it.

Sugar Water.

In Creole stories we have often seen how the people of New Orleans refreshed themselves with "eau sucre," and now we have found in a cook book of 1852 what amounts to a recipe for it, which reads: "Sweeten boiling water with sugar to your taste. This beverage is much used by French ladies. It is considered soporific and good for fatigued or weak nerves." It is not only in our Creole literature that we find mention of people using this but also in those of France, and in the eighteenth century the sucking of sugar cane seems to have been popular, but of late people seem to suffer from such an indulgence.

A FRIEND IN NEED
by Sally Joy Brown

Here Is a Wonderful Opportunity for Children to Learn the Piano

THE following letter tells of a wonderful opportunity for girls and boys who like music and would like to learn how to play the piano:

"Dear Miss Brown: This school gives a summer normal course for piano teachers, from June 27 to July 29. To demonstrate teaching, a small class of children, 6 or 7 years old, is used. The class meets downtown from 10 to 11 o'clock, three mornings a week. These children have, therefore, fifteen music lessons with no charge. There is, of course, no possible obligation about their future study. All we ask is regularity of attendance during the five weeks.

"We are wondering if among your readers there are some who would care to have their children in this group. They must be beginners, having had no lessons, and must have a piano at home. Only fundamental work is accomplished in fifteen lessons, but it is an astonishingly good foundation. We desire to give the lessons to children who are really musical in tendencies.

"There will be a tryout held on Saturday, June 18, at the school. We feel this is a worth while thing and are most appreciative of your coöperation and the use of your fine column.

"D. P."

Isn't that a splendid opportunity for some young girls and boys to get well started in music? If you know of any child who is willing to study and meet requirements of the school, I'll be happy to have their names and to arrange for the tryout. Remember they can't know anything about music—they just must want to learn!

And here's a splendid chance for some who are further along in their music:

"I am a moderately successful music teacher. I have a hobby of helping in a small way a few who are anxious to secure musical instruction but unable to pay for it. I have found, in this way, a great deal of high grade talent, and it is a source of much pleasure and satisfaction to know that through one's own efforts such talent has been found and given a chance.

"During the spring and summer months my business is at its lowest ebb. Consequently, I have some time open. I have decided to give this time in the manner of which I speak, and have organized classes for the study of musical theory. I might add that theory is the real backbone of a musical career, either as a preparation or supplement.

S. M."

Send your name and address if you wish to take advantage of this generous offer of S. M.'s.

Now, just a word about some other music lovers. In Chicago are many who can play, some of them invalids, with little or no chance to amuse themselves, and they are barred from doing so by lack of instruments we know we'll never use. Why not, then, donate them and help spread happiness as the writers above are doing. Shall we make this music lovers' week and give any unused instrument?

Other Requests.

"Dear Miss Brown: May I tell you that I could make a little more money in giving piano lessons to beginners in the evening? I have three children waiting for me to give them lessons, but I have no piano and they have no piano. If I had one I could realize a little income and the children could come and do their practicing in the afternoon. Perhaps in time I could quit store work, which is so hard on me.

MRS. J. V."

"Dear Sally Joy Brown: Have any of your readers a saxophone no longer needed? I would like to join a band, but cannot afford to buy an instrument.

J. M. B."

"Dear Miss Brown: I am a son of a poor family and take piano lessons from a woman who charges only a small amount for the lessons. I am in need of a music bag and a metronome. I wonder if one of your readers could give me these things. I am 14 years of age.

J. B."

"Dear Miss Sally: Perhaps one of your readers has banjo parts to some of the popular songs which they have no further use for. I have just started playing and would greatly appreciate any banjo music I could get.

"M. J. B."

"Dear Miss Brown: I am a patient at this sanitarium and I wonder if some of your readers has a ukelele he or she would like to give away. I certainly would enjoy having one to strum on.

W. S."

ISN'T IT ODD
by William Atherton Du Puy

ISN'T it odd that man, by dint of using his head, should have found a way to make use of even so forbidding a child of nature as the prickly pear of the west!

That great stretch of desert country that reaches from San Antonio to Los Angeles favors this prickly pear above all plants. With its skin sealed airtight on the outside it can hold its moisture as can few others and live green and vigorous with little water. With its needle sharp thorns it scorns attack from browsing cattle or even the nibbling jackrabbit. It survives where most forms of life perish.

Cattlemen through the decades have seen their herds die of starvation while back of the thorn covering of the prickly pear was much nourishing food. It remained for men of science, sent into these parts by the department of agriculture, to work out a plan for utilizing the stock food that lay in this plant.

First they tried growing it under cultivation. This plant, which got along quite well where few others would live, grew to surprising size when the ground was plowed that the water might be let into the soil when the few rains of the years did come. Cultivated prickly pears grew ten times as fast as those that were not cultivated.

The crop was planted somewhat as if sugar cane—by laying the joints in a furrow. They took root and grew. They went right on growing summer and winter. They yielded from 20 to 50 tons of cattle food to the acre.

There remained but the problem of how it was to be used. Then some one thought of a novel scheme—that of using a blowpipe and burning the thorns off. This scheme was tried. It was found that it worked well. After the flame of the blowpipe was passed over the thorns of a plant those thorns had disappeared. The cattle soon discovered the miracle and fell on the singed plants and devoured them.

So was a way found for growing a new forage crop, or at least for making use in an emergency of nature's crop here in the southwest. The prickly pear grows year after year. If it is needed it can be singed and thus fed to the cattle. If it is not needed it remains green and keeps growing. If it is not used for ten years none of its growth will be wasted. It is stored fodder, but it needs no barn. Finally the time of need comes. The ranchman goes out with his torch and burns the thorns off of one row of prickly pears. That is the ration for his stock for the day. They fall to and eat up that row.

But the reserve food supply they cannot touch. On the morrow more thorns are singed. It is easier thus to give the stock what food they are to have than it would be if they were being fed hay which must be pitched down from the stack and hauled out to them. The prickly pear, in fact, has certain advantages over even red clover as a food for cattle.

A LOYAL SON

The Strange Adventures of Young Robinson Grewso

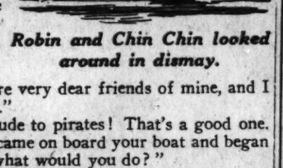
By KEMBLE

His Ma called him Robin, his Dad called him Son.
He grew like a weed and thought it great fun.
So he called himself Robinson Grewso.

"CHIN CHIN, you certainly did save me from bein' a slave to dem no account pirates." Sundae grinned from ear to ear as he patted the old bird.

"I sure thought they was drowned and I would be jailed for bumping them overboard. I didn't mean to do it."

"You did it, all the same," came a voice from somewhere.



Robin and Chin Chin looked around in dismay.

Robin and Chin Chin looked around in dismay. They could not see a soul. Sundae grinned.

"Dar she is, Robin, dat little fish gal, leanin' on dat floatin' island." And, sure enough, there she was—the tiny mermaid, bobbing her pretty head and showing her pearly teeth.

"Those pirates, you know, are very dear friends of mine, and I think you were very rude to them."

Robin laughed outright. "Rude to pirates! That's a good one. How would you behave if pirates came on board your boat and began jabbing you with swords? Just what would you do?"

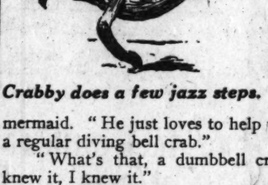
The little mermaid opened her eyes very wide.

"Seeing as I have no boat and have never been jabbed with swords, I really do not know, but Sundae had no right to push them in the water and then not try to save them."

Sundae looked surprised. "Really, Miss Fish Lady, I did try to save 'em. I leaned over de boat just like dis——"

And in trying to show how he did it, splash—overboard he went! And down, down, down he kept going. It seemed that he never would come up.

Robin and Chin Chin grew frantic at the thought of losing their little cannibal friend.



Crabby does a few jazz steps.

"Can't you do something?" Robin cried to the mermaid girl.

"Don't be so impatient, Robin," she answered. "My lifesaver will bring him up."

No sooner had she said it than the claws of a gigantic crab appeared above the surface and, clinging to the claws, hung the sputtering Sundae.

"He is the most kindhearted crab that ever lived," smiled the mermaid. "He just loves to help those who have sunk so low. He's a regular diving bell crab."

"What's that, a dumbbell crab?" screeched Chin Chin. "I knew it, I knew it."

The mermaid's eyes snapped. "You think he's a dumbbell, do you? I'll show you. Crabby!" she called out, "just get up on the side of the boat and sing that little song you composed."

Sundae grabbed one of his rescuer's claws and helped him on board. There the old fellow sat beating time with his many legs and out of a funny mouth that looked for all the world like a cruller came this simple ditty:

I live 'way down in the bottom of the lake
Where it's very, very dark, but I'm very wide awake;
If some poor critic comes a-sprawling down
I bump him up, for I cannot let him drown.

Robin and Chin Chin clapped their hands as Crabby finished his song. Then the sweet singer stood up on his hind legs and declared that he would show them a few jazz steps.

"O, yes," said he, "we have some gay times down below. We dance and the fiddler crabs play for us, the lantern fish light up the place for us, and twice a year we have a grand affair—a regular fish ball. Roll down some time and see us," grinned the old fellow. "We get along swimmingly," and with that he made a funny bow and splashed into the water. He dove and disappeared.

"You did it, all the same."

I was in my garden one morning when a sweet little voice in the garden next door said: "How do you do."

There stood a quaint little maid of about 5. I said, "Hello, what is your name and who are you?" for I had never seen her in my friend's garden before.

In a prim, dignified voice she replied: "I am one of my grandmother's grandchildren."

Billy was keeping the whole family waiting because he must put away his toys before they went for a ride.

"Hurry, Billy," called his mother. "hurry just as fast as you can."

"I is mother," he answered breathlessly, "I'se hurrying faster'n I can."

Embarrassing Moments

With the Extra Spoon.

The other evening in a dining car while I was having my dinner, I believe I experienced the most embarrassing moment of my life. At the beginning of the meal I noticed that I had an extra soup spoon, but paid no further attention to it. Now, I am absent minded at times and was more so at this particular time.

I heard the waiter cough discreetly a few times, but I didn't think there was anything amiss until I saw a young woman sitting across from me looking highly amused. I looked around and discovered myself trying to eat soup out of the finger bowl with my extra soup spoon. Needless to say, I made a rather hurried exit.

K. K. N.

Her Own Things.

I accompanied a friend of mine when she went to call on a friend of hers. My friend had told me some time before that Mrs. Smith lived in light housekeeping rooms, but had failed to tell me about her moving.

Everything was going nicely when furnishing a home came up for discussion. I gave a long talk about different tastes in furnishings and finished with, "Now, take your rooms, for example, Mrs. Smith. I don't see how any landlady can furnish rooms with such furniture and expect people to live happily in them."

But—horrors! Something was wrong. I fully realized what it was when Mrs. Smith icily informed me that she had no landlady to furnish her rooms for her.

N. Y.

Absent Minded.

At our high school some of the girls instead of buying their lunch bring it to school. Usually it is in the form of sandwiches. One day, having bought and eaten my lunch I still felt rather hungry. The girl sitting across from me had a whole box of sandwiches, and noting my hungry look, offered me the box. She then became absorbed in conversation with the girl on her left.

My thoughts left the food I was eating and wandered to the approaching baseball game. I mentally saw myself pitching with two down, the bases full, and the count two and three, etc., etc., and surrounded myself with a halo of glory.

With a shock my thoughts came back from their journey to the sharp voice of my friend. At first I did not grasp what she was saying, and I looked stupidly at the box in front of me. There I saw the cause of the trouble.

The box was empty! I had eaten all the sandwiches. You may believe I beat a hasty retreat. Embarrassed? Not much!

E. H.

A Head of Cabbage.

While taking cooking in grammar school, the teacher, who noticed that my girl friend and I were through our work ahead of the rest of the class, sent us out to get some groceries and a head of cabbage. When we came to the store, I was able to remember everything except the cabbage, and I couldn't think what it was that I had forgotten.

The clerk who waited on us had light, curly hair. He stooped under the counter for something and when he stood up I suddenly remembered what it was that I had forgotten and pointing to his head, I said, "O, now I know what it was I wanted—a head of cabbage." Then was I embarrassed? I'll say so.

E. M.

A New One on Him.

My most embarrassing moment was when we were invited out to dinner and took our young son. I was secretly congratulating myself on how well he was behaving, when the dessert was brought in—lemon pie with meringue.

Sonny tasted it and made a terrible face. Our hostess asked him what was the matter and he quickly replied, "My mother doesn't put soapsuds on her pies."

Was I embarrassed.

Free Examination.

My husband is an insurance agent. Recently a woman made application for insurance. After the usual routine of application, medical examination, etc., the policy came through from the home office and my husband took it to her, only to be informed that she did not want the policy, and that the only reason she had made application was because she was worried about her health and wanted an examination to see if it was anything serious! She got the examination free of charge by the insurance company's doctor, under the pretense that she wanted to be insured. Some cheek!

MRS. H. M.

"Our" Cauliflowers.

When you plan your garden this spring you had better get down on your knees and pray that none of your neighbors will try the trick one of ours worked on us last year.

One day last spring, when our back yard had been newly spaded, along came this neighbor with a penny package of cauliflower seeds, which she offered with as much ceremony as if the gift had been a string of pearls.

All summer long I slaved over those cauliflowers. I kept the weeds from choking them while they were young; hoed the ground about them whenever it became parched, and revived the plants with water when the hot spell threatened to snuff out their lives.

Our neighbor was solicitous about the welfare of the cauliflowers. Every once in a while she would lean over the back fence and say: "Those cauliflowers of mine are getting along nicely." At the time I failed to get the point of her remark.

Came a day in the fall. The cauliflowers were now very plump. A week before they had been tied up for blanching; that day many of them were temptingly white. I was looking proudly over my crop when my neighbor appeared with an empty bushel basket under her arm.

"Well," she said, setting the basket down and taking a knife from the bottom of it, "I see our cauliflowers are ready to eat."

E. O'R.

Laying Down the Law.

It was a habit of my father-in-law to come around to our house perhaps two or three mornings a week to take me for a short drive with my little boy and girl. He often stopped places on errands and then ended with a spin on a country road.

One morning we stopped at his daughter's home. Before he could reach the house she was out on the steps, laying down the law, telling him she never had the car, etc., etc.

I could hear almost everything that was said, and since that day, which was months ago, my babies and myself have had no more pleasant morning rides.

Corns Lift Off

You'll laugh, really! It is so easy and doesn't hurt one bit!

Drop "Freezone" on that old, bothersome corn. Instantly it stops aching; then shortly you lift that sore, touchy corn right off with your fingers. It works like a charm, every time.

A tiny bottle of "Freezone" costs only a few cents at any drug store, sufficient to remove every hard corn, soft corn, corn between the toes and calluses—try it!

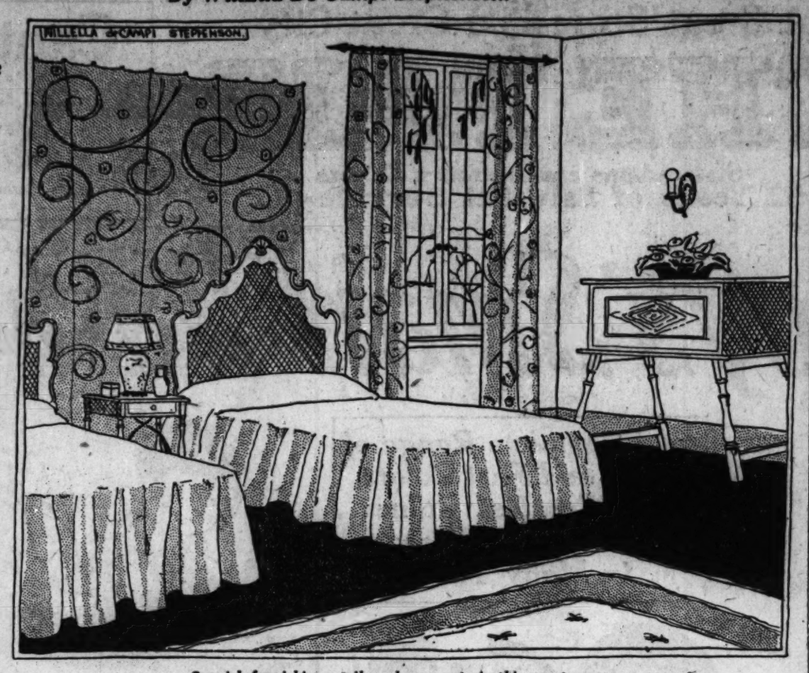
The HOME HARMONIOUS

By WillElla De Campi Stephenson.

In a Small Apartment or House, Where There Is but One Guest Room, It Should Be Neither Feminine Nor Masculine in Treatment, but a Happy Combination of the Two.

WillElla de Campi Stephenson will be glad to assist the homemaker in any problems pertaining to home building and home furnishing. Address your letter to Anita de Campi, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.



Spanish furnishings strike a happy note in this guest room.

IN furnishing the guest room there are several essential points to be remembered. In the house or apartment where there is only one guest room, that one room should not be definitely masculine nor feminine in character. The general tendency is to make the guest room frivolously feminine. The occasional men who occupy it must feel ridiculously out of place.

Simple furnishings of dignified character are most suitable. The room should contain twin beds, and, if possible, a day bed or chaise longue, so the guest may have a little rest and privacy during the day. Another essential provision for this room is that of a desk. This should be fitted with all of the necessary equipment: stationery, calendar, pens, ink, blotters, stamps, and a dictionary. A waste basket should be conveniently placed.

Spanish furnishings strike a happy note in the guest room illustrated today. Modern ideas of comfort are combined with the austerity of the Spanish style. The plaster walls are tinted a warm, pinkish orange. Woodwork is stained walnut. At the windows are hangings of block printed linen, in a distinguished floral pattern on a soft green ground. No glass curtains are used. The wide expanse of plaster wall at the head of the beds is broken by a hanging of the same block linen. Between the beds is a little night table holding a lamp made of a Spanish pottery jar with a parchment shade decorated to match. Bed covers are made of a soft green striped material, piped with orange.

A small Spanish desk is accompanied by a chair with seat and back covered in a basket weave material, in mauve, green and blue. A large, comfortable arm chair is upholstered in a striped linen with fine lines of black, green and old gold on a henna colored ground. Above a sturdy walnut chest hangs a mirror in a plain walnut frame. Lighting fixtures are of wrought iron, and wrought iron poles are used for hanging the window draperies. Two colorful Spanish rugs are used on the deep green floor.

Pleasingly restful with its quiet simplicity is a guest room furnished with Sheraton pieces. A lattice paper of slender, mauve colored leaves on an ivory ground covers the walls. Woodwork is painted ivory. At the windows are ivory point d'esprit glass curtains. Draperies are made of a soft old blue taffeta, finished with narrow mauve ruffles. On the twin beds of Sheraton design are covers of the blue taffeta, piped with mauve and finished with mauve ruffles.

A mirror in an oval frame hangs above a small commode which stands between the beds. On the commode is a poreclain lamp with flowered silk shade which lights up most effectively. A pair of little Sheraton side chairs at the sides of the beds have seats upholstered in old blue satin, brocaded with small flowers.

Placed near a window is a luxurious chaise longue done in deep mauve damask. It is accompanied by a graceful end table holding a blue glass lamp with a mauve shade and a set of smoking accessories. Above a little flat topped desk is a set of hanging shelves on which are placed a group of reference books and a few interesting novels. The dressing table has a glass top under which a piece of blue brocade is stretched. Wool chenille rugs in deep mauve are used.

American colonial furniture is used in another charming guest room. Pale jade pink paper with white polka dots covers the walls. The woodwork is painted white. At the windows are pink net glass curtains dotted with white so that they match the wall paper. Draperies are made of gayly flowered semi-glazed chintz on a jade pink ground. They are finished with ruffles and deep rose rep. Covers on the twin four post beds are made of the rep, with deep flounces of the covered flowered chintz at the sides. Beside each bed is a night stand holding an old fashioned glass lamp, with an accordion plaited chintz shade.

A large comfortable wing chair with a butterfly table beside it is upholstered in the chintz. Placed beside one of the windows, so that the light falls on it from the left, is a delightful little spinet desk with a ladder-back rush bottom chair. A lowboy, with a mirror hanging above it, makes the dressing table. All of the furniture is maple. Colorful hooked rugs enliven the floor, which is painted a deep taupe.

Amusingly different is a guest room done in the modernist manner. The walls are French gray, decorated with large solid circles of gold and jade green. Woodwork is painted black, with a fine line of green to match the furniture. At the windows are long draw curtains of jade green sunfast, lined with French gray and finished with a narrow black binding. Covers on the low twin beds match the draperies. A chaise longue and an arm chair are upholstered in black, piped with jade green. Small extra cushions, in many bright colors, look like a great chaise longue. A brass desk set and brass smoking accessories on a low table fit admirably into the general scheme of the room. Several gray fur rugs are used on the glossy black floor.

Painted furniture may be used appropriately in the guest room. One lovely room I have seen has a set painted antiqued turquoise. It is decorated in the Venetian manner, with touches of gold and floral motifs. In the room in which this set is placed the walls are a pale mauve and the woodwork is a deep violet with a line of turquoise. At the windows are glass curtains of pale mauve silk gauze with overcurtains of the same material in dull turquoise. The overcurtains are caught back by gold cords. Covers for the beds are made of a two-toned striped moire in mauve. A small sofa, placed between two windows, is upholstered in the same moiré. Pale lemon yellow silk makes lamp shades and shields.

More Puzzlers in Etiquette - - - - - - - by Persis Standish

HERE is the third of the etiquette quizzes and the questions are growing more difficult. Witness the first two. If you get these right and live up to them you may count yourself perfect.

1. What is a snob?
2. What is an aristocrat?
3. What should govern manners in public?
4. What should govern conversation in public places?
5. On which side of a man does a woman sit in a motor or a carriage?
6. Where does a woman sit in her own motor, if not driving it?
7. Does the husband or male relation receive with his wife at a reception?
8. Should a man ask if he may make a first call on a girl?
9. Where does a woman receive men who call upon her in an hotel?
10. Do brides and bridesmaids wear gloves at the wedding?
11. If the officiating clergyman is married, is his wife asked to the wedding?
12. If a widow remarries how many bridesmaids should she have?
13. Is there any tradition about congratulating the bride?
14. Can a woman refuse to dance with any one who asks her?
15. What sort of clothes should one wear in public?
16. Should a woman smoke in a public place?
17. Is it important for the business woman to have good manners?
18. Is it good form for a business woman to come to the office dressed for the "date" of the coming evening?

Answers.

1. A snob is the lowest form of animal life. It resembles the elephant and the rhinoceros in that it is a pachyderm. Its ambition is to obtain nods from those whom it deems distinguished. It is usually wrong.

2. An aristocrat is one who values intelligence more than gold and character more than intelligence, who practices kindness and humility, who recognizes his own kind dressed for a levee or in blue jeans. An aristocrat always has taste and a sense of humor. Therefore, his manners are perfect at all times.

3. Consideration of others and a desire to be inconspicuous.

4. Conversation in public should be conducted in low tones and should never contain reference to one's own or other people's private affairs.

5. She should sit on the right side unless some unforseen circumstance makes it impossible.

6. In her own motor she also sits on the right side.

7. No. He should be nearby in case there is anything she wishes him to do, but he should not be "in line."

8. No. It is a girl's privilege to ask the men she prefers to call upon her, as man is presuming if he asks to call the first time.

9. Unless she has a private sitting room a woman receives male guests in the hotel lobby or parlors.

10. If they wish they do, but modern fashion dictates that women may dispense with gloves and so the bride and the bridesmaids may take advantage of this, if they so wish.

11. Always. Even if the wife of the clergyman is unknown to the bride's family it is none the less courteous to invite her to the wedding.

12. A widow who remarries should have no attendants.

13. Yes, it is not done. All congratulations are given the bridegroom because tradition says a woman honors a man when she marries him.

14. Yes, she can, but she must not be seen dancing with any one else that dance unless she says that she has it engaged. For a woman to refuse to dance with one man on a trumped up excuse and then appear on the floor with another is an affront to her hostess as well as the man.

15. Quiet clothes. Only persons who have no other social life dress elaborately in public.

16. It all depends on the place. If it is customary for women to smoke in certain cafes or restaurants, any woman who smokes may do so there without being conspicuous, but a nice woman will not be the only one present who is smoking.

17. It is important for the business woman to have good manners, not only for her own honor but for the honor of her employer as well.

18. No, a business woman should wear only simple tailored clothes to the office.

Bring Out the Hidden Beauty

Do you know that just beneath that soiled, disordered, faded or wrinkled complexion is one fair to look upon? Mercolized Wax will gradually and gently peel off the devitalized surface skin, revealing a new, fresh, white, beautiful skin underneath. The new complexion is a perfectly natural one, therefore in no way to be compared with a make-up. The wax leaves no trace but that of increased loveliness.

A New Skin—Your Own!—at small expense and effort. Simply apply Mercolized Wax at bedtime as you apply cold cream; wash it off in the morning. Fine, almost invisible, skin particles are flicked off with the wax. No harm possible. No detention indoors. The lively, young, healthy underskin is brought gradually to view—you have the exquisite complexion of robust girlhood—and every one will tell you.

You Look Years Younger—Assist Nature if she needs your help. Obtain an ounce of Mercolized Wax from your druggist or department store, use as directed—and you will bless the day that you made the acquaintance of this wonder working product.

Italian Audiences Prove Tractable

By Edward Moore.

MILAN, Italy.—[Special Correspondence.]—They announced a performance of Boito's "Nerone" at La Scala the other night, but during the day green slips were pasted over the announcements in front of the theater saying the opera had been postponed and the theater would be dark that night. As not more than 200 of the audience saw the announcement, the other 2,000 came down that night, found they were to be disappointed, and turned around and went back home without saying a word.

ARTURO TOSCANINI rules La Scala with an iron hand. [International Photo.]

It would probably have started a young riot around the Auditorium, but here they knew their tickets would be made good some time later, so they calmly waited for that time. They are docile over such things, whatever they may be if the performance does not suit them; but it was a disappointment to us, for "Nerone" has been talked about as one of the things La Scala really does when it tries to spread itself on a scenic production.

The newspapers next day said the postponement was due to the indisposition of the baritone, Celestino Sarobe, but gossip around the streets puts a somewhat different angle on the story. According to the verbal account, Sarobe came here to sing the part, having sung it about 300 times in other Italian opera houses. He went to rehearsal and met with the prompt disapproval of Toscanini, who expressed himself pithily, not to say pungently. They tell me Toscanini, who was most gracious and charming when I was introduced to him a few nights ago, is in full command of a tongue warranted to strip the hide off the luckless person who makes the same mistake more than once in rehearsal.

Hiding from Toscanini's Wrath.

Wherefore, the next day, which was the day of the performance, the stage book of La Scala was sent to Sarobe, who signed it, as is the custom, thereby indicating that he was in good voice and able to appear that night. A few hours later he was summoned on a matter of costumes, and was not to be found, nor has he been seen since. Apparently he got panicky when he remembered what Toscanini had said to him, and quietly disappeared, without saying anything to anybody. No other baritone could be located at short notice to take his place, and so the performance was canceled. Of course, this means that Sarobe is through for the rest of his life as far as La Scala is concerned.

During a performance of "Tosca"—not the one we saw, but one a few nights before—some one on the stage got tangled in his signals and lowered the curtain too soon in the second act, just about the time that Tosca was placing the candles around the recently deceased Scarpia. As soon as he could leave the orchestra, Toscanini, blazing with wrath, started for the back of the stage, but by the time he got there that particular curtain man had left the theater; and he, too, has not been seen around Milan since. At last accounts he was down in the heel of Italy and prepared to swim further south across the Mediterranean if necessary—anything as long as he can avoid personal contact with Toscanini.

Evidently it is the iron hand and at times not too much of the velvet glove that makes La Scala what it is—that and the attitude of the patrons, who like that sort of thing and would not be satisfied with anything else.

Apart from opera, there is not much music in Milan. Apparently there is only one symphony orchestra in all Italy, the Augusteo of Rome, conducted by Molinari. Occasionally Toscanini gives a concert on a special occasion with the orchestra of La Scala, but he has not done so since I have been here, and there is no present indication that he plans such a thing—though, as the announcements seldom go up more than two days in advance, something of the sort might happen at almost any time. There are a few occasional recitals here and there, but they seem to try to keep themselves as secret as possible.

Italy Has a Fondness for Jazz.

In the two years since my former visit, however, Italy has retained its fondness for jazz, and has begun to solve some of its secrets, though not all of them. The orchestra in this hotel is probably one of the worst in the history of all music when it comes to popular tunes, but I have met with a few American pianos equipped with American automatic playing devices and American jazz records—new ones—and at a restaurant about a block away there is an orchestra that plays jazz rather well, and where some of the patrons shake a rather mean charleston. It does well—that is, except when the leader tried to sing an American song through a megaphone. What he was trying to say the other night must forever remain a mystery, and it was then that I decided the message of Paul Whiteman had not been fully explained to the world.

Speaking generally, opera is the favorite Italian sport, and the person who is not ready to discuss his favorite singer at length or hum his favorite aria is not considered to know, in a manner of speaking, his operatic onions. There are some athletics, quite a bit of bicycling, principally for purposes of transportation; some automobiling, horse racing, both trotting and running, and, among the more progressive, professional pugilism. Also, we went to a game of soccer football between two professional teams, Milan and Turin, where the ground was the consistency of a thick soup, speedily transferring itself to the persons of all the players, and where the despair of the Milanese when their goalkeeper slipped and fell full length, thereby missing a perfectly good point, was something tragic, not to say spectacular. One of my Milanese friends did not recover for hours afterward.

But mostly they discuss opera. I have made the acquaintance of a man who used to be a locomotive engineer until his feet were cut off and is now the general superintendent of the country place owned by Giacomo Rimini and Rosa Raisa near Verona. Possibly he would not be able to read a single note from the pages of an operatic score, but I discovered that he knows practically the whole score of Puccini's "Turandot" by heart, words and music. And the lyric accomplishments of a certain taxi driver in Naples will not soon be forgotten.

A Wild Ride in Naples.

Our boat paused for a couple of hours in Naples on the way to Genoa, so we got out and chartered a taxi, with instructions to give us a drive around town. Apparently we selected one of the most insane drivers in all Italy, which is saying a great deal. In Milan they have police who enforce traffic regulations, and in Venice there are no autos, but elsewhere there are no rules. The customary procedure is to drive with one hand, honk the horn with the other, take corners on one wheel, and maintain a pace of from 80 to 100 kilometers an hour on the straightaway; and no one objects, with the single exception that it is not considered good form to kill off the populace.

But this driver put a few white hairs in the head of even Mr. Rimini, who can get as much out of a car as any one I ever saw. We grazed wheels of other vehicles, we missed foot passengers like a hawk swooping into a chicken yard, while the driver cursed the people who had just escaped with their lives, and then, without slackening speed, turned around to explain points of interest to us. Meanwhile he would announce, "See Naples and die," and

GOOD MORNING!

To see pictures like "Resurrection," "Beau Geste," "The Rough Riders," "The Big Parade," "Grass," "Chang," and all the brotherhood of fine, clean cut, ambitious, inspiring films that mean so much to the betterment and happiness of the race in its moments of relaxation, is to wonder on just what the croakers base their dour assertions.

DOLORES DEL RIO does some fine acting in "Resurrection."

"The movies are getting worse every day."

"The motion picture industry is just a money making proposition—everything's sacrificed to the almighty dollar!"

"The films are a pernicious influence——" and so on, glub, glub, ad infinitum.

It's mostly liver, I guess. Or the old inferiority complex bleating loudly of the shortcomings of the world at large to distract attention from its own unhealthy condition. And some of it's just plain, old fashioned jealousy and grouch, because, when the movies were young the crabs refused to risk on them the dollar that, today, would have shown itself multiplied by a million.

You DO get so sore at the knockers! Which is a foolish attitude—of course. None of them ever interfered with progress. They're always brushed aside into the discard by the determined hands of the men with their heads in the clouds and their sturdy, forward tramping feet on the ground. (The Lindberghs!)

It Seemed an Enormous Task.

The news that "Resurrection" was in the making didn't sound like such good news, at first. It seemed to me that Tolstoy's powerful story with its surging undercurrent of analysis; its keen ken of the upward urge and effort of all humanity, however deeply rooted in the mire, if stirred by a pure impulse, might, failing into ruthless hands, become merely a sex movie—with, heaven forbid! a stock in trade happy ending. It is in the adaptation of books, you know, that the screen people most often fall down. Necessary elimination becomes butchery and needed interpolations—sacrilege.

But this is not true of "Resurrection."

Here is a great novel adapted with honesty and skill by the director, Edwin Carewe, and the son of the author, Count Ilya Tolstoy, who went to Hollywood especially for the purpose of collaborating on the adaptation of his father's story and to take a minor rôle in the picture. Here is a picture that shows perfect teamwork of director and players, a picture where sincere effort has been put forth to make the author's intent live and glow. And, from the production standpoint—photography, costumes, lighting, sets, and the like—a splendid, atmospheric picture.

The Prince and the Peasant Girl.

A prince and a peasant girl are the principal characters.

Prince Dmitri Nekhludof, on a brief visit at the estate of his two maiden aunts, meets their peasant ward, the lovely Katusha Maslova. A clean, joyous romance blossoms and thrives for the few days the youth is there, and its fragrance lingers sweetly in the minds and hearts of the two when the prince goes back to St. Petersburg to enlist—for war has broken out. But——

"Ah, my boy," whispers the dissolute Major Schoenboch, "you are now to learn of the three greatest things in the world—war, wine, and women!"

Under the guidance of the major, Dmitri learns far too much of wine and women. On his way to war, to the Turkish-Russian front, his regiment bivouacs for the night just outside the village where live the aunts and Katusha.

Prince Dmitri again visits them, but this time it is not an honest eyed, reverent boy who kisses Katusha. It is a ruthless, dissipated youth bent hotly on despoliation.

He continues to the front. In time Katusha's unhappy plight is discovered and she is sent in disgrace from the only home she knows.

But just now Katusha learns that Dmitri is to pass through the village that night on his return from the field of battle. Katusha experiences frantic relief and joy. She will meet his train, tell him all, and Dmitri, of course, will take her to his heart and the world will be all right again.

Her Last Hope Dies.

The train pulls into the station in a drenching rain and stops for its allotted two or three minutes. Katusha, speeding from lighted window to lighted window, at last sees Dmitri.

But what a Dmitri! Flushed, ribald, drinking, and with another woman in his arms!

Crazily, Katusha pounds at the window and is spied by another lieutenant, who, looking out, remarks carelessly, "Just a beggar woman," and pulls down the shades. The train moves away into the flooding darkness.

Katusha's baby is born and dies. Katusha becomes a public woman.

When Dmitri next sees her she is in court, charged with the poisoning and robbing of a rich merchant—and he is one of the jurors who must try her.

Realization of the wreck of a life his unbridled passion of an idle hour has caused comes to him with staggering force. He and he alone is responsible for the tragedy he reads in the hard eyes of the sodden creature before him.

He covers his now bearded face with a shaking hand and the trial goes on to its close without his being recognized by Katusha.

In the juryroom he puts forth all the eloquence at his command to save her, but is unsuccessful. Katusha is sentenced to Siberia. Dmitri goes with her. Settles his estates on the poor and unfortunate and goes with her.

You'll Enjoy This Picture.

Perhaps you don't know the rest of the story and so I'm not going to say any more about it here. But I do hope you will see the picture. It is so beautifully done!

Rod La Rocque as Prince Dmitri again gives unmistakable signs of genius. He has the power of concentrating on a character, of immersing his own personality in that of the one he portrays—and so, it seems to me, the author of "Resurrection," were he alive, would be most delighted with the Dmitri of the screen.

Dolores del Rio's Katusha couldn't have been more realistic. She charms you and breaks your heart.

O, as far as the acting goes—find fault, if you can!

As far as anything concerned with the picture goes, find fault—if you can.

You'll sure have to work harder than I cared to, if you do.

See you tomorrow!

Advice to Young Authors

By H. L. Mencken.

THE superstition that some sort of pull or drag is necessary in order to get into print in our great country—this superstition still flourishes east, west, north and south, despite the massive and obvious proofs of its unsoundness. In every mail I get letters from aspirants in the hinterland asking me to read their MSS. and recommend them to publishers. I can imagine no more unlikely way to crash the literary gates. The fact is that publishers are immensely suspicious of the recommendations of critics, and seldom follow them. My own publisher should certainly be well aware by this time that I am a highly sagacious fellow; nevertheless, of the last dozen MSS. that I have urged upon him, often with voluptuous eloquence, he has actually accepted but two.

The reason is not far to seek. Every publisher knows, by long and bitter experience, that the books which critics praise commonly lose him money. This, of course, is not because they are incompetent to distinguish sound literature from bad: as a matter of fact, the critics of the United States, taking one with another, show quite as much professional competence as the osteopaths, the psychical researchers, or the investment bankers. The trouble is that sound literature, as such fanciers understand it, is not often very profitable—that a publisher who confined himself to it would quickly end in bankruptcy. In order to print enough of it to salve his conscience he must also do a great deal of less juicy and worthy stuff. This less juicy and worthy stuff is what he seeks and longs for. Of sound literature there is always a plenty.

Thus publishers are somewhat wary of the advice of critics, who tend inevitably to forget printers' and advertising bills in their enthusiasm for new literary delicatessen. No sensible publisher ever hires a critic as his literary adviser. If he did so his list of publications would look like the table of contents of the Dial. No; he hires a Rotarian, and preferably one with experience in the automobile supplies business. Thus he becomes highly solvent and even rich, and is able, when a Cabell or Hergesheimer comes along, to take a chance.

But it is one thing to say all this, and quite another thing to argue that the new author of genuine merit is barred out—that the gates of the publishers are closed to him. They are actually wide open—so long as he doesn't handicap himself by approaching them with letters from critics in his pocket. The publishers' readers are practical and horny-handed men, but there is a touch of wild romance in every one of them. It is the discovery of honest trade goods that pays their salaries and preserves their jobs, but it is the discovery of masterpieces that thrills them. They dream nightly of the pearl of great price. When one of them unearths such a pearl, news of it flies all over the publishing world in half an hour, as news of the arrival of a rum ship spreads among booticians.

Thus the young author need not fear that he will be neglected—so long, to repeat, as he does not raise up a prejudice against his masterpiece by engaging a critic to commend it. It will be examined with care, and if it shows any honest merit at all, it will be read to the end. If it is not, it will not be because publishers' readers are recreant to their trust, but simply because they have skill at their trade, and are quite able to detect a bad egg without eating all of it.

The signs of a bad MS., indeed, are almost as plain as those of a bad egg. There is something about its general appearance that instantly alarms the experienced reader—something hard to describe, but nevertheless quite real. So he reads the first page: it is, as he expected, flabby stuff. The second: it is worse. The last: it is horrible. He looks for corroborations, and they are always there. First, a florid letter from the author, detailing his triumphs at high school. Second, a letter from the city editor of the Bingville Bugle, certifying that he is the best reporter ever heard of between Cincinnati and Columbus. Third, the inevitable encomium from the critic of the Jackass [Miss.] Daily News, the Tri-State Confectioner, or the Greenwich Village Libido. The MS. goes back at once, charges collect.

Magazine editors, like publishers' readers, are sorely beset by such communications and encomiums, and spend a great deal of time damning them. Here the main reason is that they greatly multiply the writing of polite but useless letters—an endless curse in every magazine office. An unaccompanied MS. from a stranger, if it turns out to be unavailable, may be returned with a rejection slip: a somewhat arctic politeness, but still enough. When, however, it comes in with a letter from some eminent critic, or from the editor of another magazine, or from one of the editor's private friends, it must have a personal letter—and writing such personal letters is extremely exhausting, not only to the intellect but also to the temper.

Naturally enough, no sane editor likes to write them, and so it is no wonder that every editor, when he encounters a MS. accompanied by encomiums, is instantly prejudiced against it. There is, indeed, no surer way for a young author to get his MS. rejected and himself disliked. If its normal chances of rejection are 100 to 1—as they are in most magazine offices—then a letter from a critic, especially if it be long or handwritten, increases them to at least 1,000 to 1. In the course of many years spent in magazine offices, in fact, I have never heard of such a MS. getting into print. To expect it to be accepted is to ask far too much of human nature.

But the most fatal of all letters is one from another editor. Many editors write such letters in order to get rid of applicants otherwise hard to dispose of—relatives, say, of their wives, pastors, or bootleggers. "It lies outside the field of my own magazine," they say, "but Mr. Blank of the Boil, will undoubtedly be glad to have it." Such letters are sometimes written as practical jokes on friends in the craft; more often, perhaps, they are employed to pay off grudges. In either case the poor author is the goat. His MS. goes back to him at once, unread, and his name goes on the office blacklist, along with those of the lady authors who perfume their MSS.

Well, then, how is a young author to reach editors? By the simplest of devices. Let him type his MS. on sound white paper, thick enough to conceal the page below, let him have a well inked ribbon on his typewriter, let him write his name and address plainly at the top of the first page, and then let him send his MS. to the editor he has chosen, without any accompanying letter of any sort, his own or another's. The editor is not wholly idiotic: he will know instantly why it was sent in. And he will read it diligently and at once, for whenever he confronts a pile of MSS. he always picks out for his first reading those that are shipshape and workmanlike, and will put the least burden upon his time, his temper and his eyes.

It is astounding how many MSS. that come into magazine offices—and into publishers' offices—are wholly unreadable, in the literal physical sense. Many are upon such thin paper that, attempting to read them, one sees the lines of two, three or even four pages at once. Many others are typed so faintly that it is ruinous to the eyes to try to make them out. Yet others are single spaced—an almost incredible fact, but still a fact. Is it any wonder that the editor concludes quickly that no one guilty of such imbecilities could conceivably write anything worth printing?

The prudent young author puts no such handicaps upon his merchandise. He avoids annoying and insulting editors with useless letters, and he avoids torturing them with illegible and unkempt MSS. His single aim, after he has composed his materpiece, is to ease the job of the hard worked man who must read it—often on a long and busy day, and with Katzenjammer riding him, or his old war wounds troubling. This aim is easily achieved: it costs nothing save a little common sense. The author who achieves it has gone a long way toward success: even immortality is nearer to him than it was. More, he is laying up stores in heaven. For the editor, grateful to him, will not fail, at prayer, to bring his virtues to the attention of the celestial secretariat.

Aristocrats of Stage Resurrect Caesar

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—The Players' is the aristocrat of the actor clubs of New York. But I suspect that each year when it stages its annual classic revival it has to borrow heavily from the Lambs' to get the necessary talent.

This spring "Julius Caesar" is the bill, and the cast, as usual, is heavy with names and resonant voices. A fine revival for the most part. I found but one weak spot in it. James Rennie is the Mark Antony, and James seemed to me altogether too sleek a sheik for the fighting friend of Caesar at the time of the assassination.

TYRONE POWER plays Brutus in the Players' presentation of "Julius Caesar." [Carpenter Photo.]

He spoke his piece well enough. He was modest, unruffled, and plainly conscious. He put on no actor airs, and he made the points he wanted to make naturally. It was his detachment from the other Romans that kept him out of the picture. I am hoping he washed the grease out of his hair and ruffled it a bit before the week ended.

Tyrone Power was the big man of the cast. He played Brutus, a favorite rôle of his, and earned the cheers of his first audience. Years ago Power was also the Brutus to William Faversham's Antony and Frank Keenan's Cassius. The years have added an impressive melancholy to his interpretation. He is a very tired senator now, but beautifully dignified and impressively eloquent.

Basil Rathbone, who learned his Shakespeare in England before he came over here, is a good Cassius and William Courtleigh the Cæsar.

Mary Young plays the loyal Portia, Marion Coakley the Calpurnia, and Mary Eaton the boy Lucius. Norman Bel Geddes manages to stage the houses of both Cæsar and Brutus and the forum with one set of movable pillars and a series of marble steps, set before a black velvet cyclorama, and make them all beautiful. Which is a trick not many can do.

A Wise Virgin and Others.

A late spring comedy that is not likely to last long past the early summer is one called "A Very Wise Virgin." It was written by the Sam Janney who wrote "Loose Ankles" last summer.

A wise virgin, according to the heroine, is one who knows her own boiling point. Thus safeguarded she is in a position to trifle with the emotions of any man with impunity. And does. At 20 she is the veteran of more campaigns than she is eager to talk about and boastful of her conquests. Life has given her innumerable kicks but nary a bruise.

Betty Brent is her name, and she is visiting her dear friend, Elise, when we meet her. Elise is expecting her Dan, a stalwart youth to whom she has been engaged for three years and hopes to marry soon. Foolishly she boasts to Betty of Dan's chastity and of his imperviousness to the charms of other girls.

Betty takes one good look at Dan, decides that he is the boy for her, also that all is fair in love and so forth, and proceeds to vamp the youth. In vamping her system is standard. She begs a light for her cigaret, leans heavily upon Dan's chest as he holds the match for her, blinks her violet eyes roguishly and sighs.

Leaning upon the chest on the stage may always be depended upon to arouse at least a man's curiosity, and by the time Betty's cigaret has been relighted a couple of times Dan has submitted to a lipstick crush and proposed marriage. The race is not to the swift, nor the battle to the strong, but the fast worker is pretty sure to command the situation at the end of the first act.

According to the Russian.

Comes then a Russian lady with what we assume to be the soviet idea of love and marriage. Quickly she observes Betty and her ways and the unfairness of them. She, too, has ideas where men are concerned. Men should be taken as they come and molded into characters worth while. Woman is the creator, and men are what she makes them; she the sculptor and they the clay.

Dan, he is weak and should be made to know it. He is weak because he has permit (the Russian lady employs a French accent whenever she remembers it) he has permit Bettee to take heem away from thees Elise. Alors! She, Narka Dianina, will now take thees Dan away from Bettee onless Bettee ees wil-ling to fight to keep him.

Whereupon Narka marches up to Dan's bedroom, walks in and closes the door. Betty is waiting hopefully for Dan to throw the intruder out as the curtain falls.

Next morning Dan is properly humiliated, Betty plainly disgusted, and Narka indifferent. Only Elise is happy. She has triumphed over all of them. Dan is her boy again and, despite his weaknesses, she is prepared to take him and make a man of him. What he needs is protection.

As for Betty, she decides that there may be something in the Russian idea. So she marries the family doctor, a good soul even if he is 43. If ever a character needed molding it's the doctor's, Betty decides, and as he has been calling her a little devil all evening she knows he loves her.

The company is not distinguished, but capable. Joan Bourdelle, who used to be Helen Weir before she changed her name, plays Betty. Joan Gordon, who was the mother in "My Son," is the Russian, and John Buckler the Dan.

Not as Merry as Expected.

The first of the summer revues—or the first revue planned for the summer—is one called "Merry-Go-Round," which Richard Herndon had some hope would prove a successor to his last summer's effort called "Americana." At the moment he is still possessed of the hope.

The story is told of "Merry-Go-Round" that when originally it was turned over by its authors it had as much form and humor as any of them. There was an opening scene on Ellis island with a boatload of attractive immigrants landing and being welcomed. In the background were the towers of New York and in the foreground the orchestra prepared to conduct the arrivals on a jolly tour of the city.

But in rehearsal things began to happen. This bit of satire and that bit of fluff were dropped and finally it was decided to make the thing over into just another revue.

The result is not particularly happy. One injection is that of William Collier. It is told that as late as noon of the day on which the production was made William was eating lunch at the Friars' club when he was urged to join the cast of "Merry-Go-Round" and help to save the show. They needed him awfully, they said, and what they got was much more awful than they anticipated.

The opening night Collier produced one new line. He referred to Lindbergh as the fly-by-night aviator who took advantage of the other boys while they were asleep.

For the rest he retold the old ones, and apparently could not remember any but the very oldest—the one, for example, about Stone and Wood who met the girl with the sheer hose and turned to rubber. Seems to me I heard something like this, too:

Collier (to his stage daughter)—Having a good time in New York?

Daughter—Great.

Collier—So's your old man.

Well, of course, you can't expect much of that kind of a Merry-go-Round. Among the girls is Marie Cahill, but Marie

This Thing and That Thing of the Theater

By Frederick Donaghey.

ALTHOUGH as yet no confirming word comes from the Erlanger, George White sends a bulletin formally to state that the Scandals will be put into that playhouse not later than July 10. . . . Miss Edith Arnold takes over tonight Miss Helen Flint's rôle—that of the snake-charmer who becomes an honest woman—in "The Barker." The incoming actress had a try-out in the rôle in Thursday's performance, and was good, according to Mr. Wappler, the judicial and truthful intendent of the Blackstone. He adds that Mr. Kenyon Nicholson's colorful piece about the lusty and lustful existence of those who live by the minor tent-shows continues to give out most of the evidences of popularity, including activity at the ticket-window. . . . Miss Gertrude Lawrence's management is at pains to make formal denial of a rumor that she would not be sent hither in "Oh, Kay!" owing to the indifference of this community to "Tip-Toes," last Autumn. I shall be delighted again to look at and listen to Miss Lawrence, here or elsewhere, whenever I have opportunity; but, as one who has the commercial good of all entrepreneurs at heart, I trust that "Oh, Kay!" is a better thing than was "Tip-Toes," whose sole appeal to me consisted of Miss Queenie Smith's being in the cast.

MISS MIRIAM SHARP She's funny in "The Wild Westcotts" as the young wife.

Mr. John S. Sumner, whose zeal in seeking to suppress vice in New-York is among the comic phenomena of life in America, bawls out the Drama in the current issue of the North-American Review, wherein, after saying that "the leisure brought to humanity by science has been ill employed," he tells us that the thrill-addict is responsible for most of the popular crimes and sins, and that "the theater is the residuary legatee of thrill-addiction, so far as the addicts can pay the price." Mr. Sumner thinks that the Drama would be purged of evil and of peril if we were to hearken to Mr. E. H. Sothern, who, it seems, is advocating the development of municipal theaters. This, too, is from Mr. Sumner's essay, although it reads as if written by a veteran theater-reporter who, thinking that he remembers how Booth and Barrett performed Shakspere, is indignant at the ways of Mr. Ziegfeld and those who counterfeit his products:

> "If the stage were controlled by serious artists, it would never have fallen to the low estate of a common brothel; but, unfortunately, there are butter-and-egg men and those of other environment who see in the theater nothing more than a money-making industry."

Letter About a Heated Sabbatarian.

> SIR: I met me, the other day, an earnest and frowning actor whb hates, or says he hates, Chicago. He said all the old things about the city, including "the sewer of the inland seas," and gave me to believe that he suffers to the outer edge of endurance whenever called upon to perform here at, I'm told, $500 a week "and the extra eighth," whatever that may mean. When I pressed him for reasons for his hatred, he stressed the fact that theatrical performances are given Sunday, and bitterly read to me a newspaper-clipping telling of the death in Springfield of one of those day-of-rest, six-days-a-week laws designed to hold on to pay for seven days.
> "Why," he asked, "are we, that we may hold employment, made to labor on the day set aside since the Creation for rest for not only man, but for the very beasts of the field, also?"
>
> The question was, I knew, rhetorical; so, instead of explaining why, which would have been easy, I asked him, in deadly seriousness, what he would do in a Chicago engagement that did not call for Sunday appearance. He said, afore the God I believe in:
>
> "Well, for one thing, Sunday off would give me a chance to see some of the other shows."
> GABBY LA BRUNE.

> Chicago: June 7, 1927.

Miscellany.

Signs on the Harris and the Selwyn imply that both will soon be relighted; and as to neither theater is there aught that is specific in the items of when and with what. . . . The Selwyn has a new resident-manager in Mr. William Roche, who since the opening of the Harris, late in 1922, has given to the community a complete and satisfying demonstration of how a first-class theater in a community of 3,000,000 should be conducted. He is an eccentric in that he regards the persons who buy tickets as a factor in the successful operation of the business. The Colonel, as he is known for a reason not yet made clear to me, is to continue as the resident-manager of the Harris, also; and this seems to mean that two lovely playhouses instead of one will hereafter have the benefit of his sagacity, experience, and special fitness for his task.

Recent necrology includes Mrs. Sam Morton, known to three generations of variety-goers as the Kitty of Sam and Kitty Morton. They in later seasons have headed the "act" of the Four Mortons, with their daughter, Clara, and their son, Paul. . . . Another celebrity of old-time variety, Eddie Leonard, thinks that the thing for him to do next season is to continue to black-up before each performance, but to have assistants without burnt-cork.

More Miscellany.

Ernest Truex, whose decision to tarry a while longar in London I explained some days ago, is to have a new piece by the humorous P. G. Wodehouse. . . . And Miss Phyllis Povah, who classifies here as just a so-so actress, adds her soprano to the chorus of those American players in London who say they'll never, never again act in this United States.

Although the famous Neighborhood Playhouse of New-York has been abandoned for the present by its wealthy almoners, the Misses Lewissohn, the 1927 issue of the Grand-Street Follies, which was the final offering in the theater, has been moved into a Broadway house, and is, I'm told, packing 'em in and standing 'em up. The critics say it is the best of the revues yet put together by the Neighborhood corps; and, if this be so, it must be more than merely immense: as I've said before, those of 1924 and 1925, respectively, were the raciest and wittiest revues I have seen anywhere.

Miss Clare Eames, who has been acting for months in her husband's play of "Ned McCobb's Daughter," is to take part in the London performances of his other play of last season, "The Silver Cord." Her rôle in the latter is that acted in New-York by Miss Laura Hope Crews and to be acted in some other cities, I believe, by Miss Grace George.

"My Maryland," the operetta with a libretto based on Clyde Fitch's "Barbara Frietchie," has been twenty weeks in Philadelphia, and isn't through. . . . Among the tunes Sigmund Romberg has composed for it are those named "The Star-Spangled Banner," "My Country, 'Tis of Thee," and "Dixie."

Taylor Holmes, quite prevalent in Chicago for some seasons, is performing in Los Angeles in a piece named "The Great Necker"—a title meant, I should say, to be subtly topical. . . . William Courtleigh, acting the title-rôle, is reported to have put a laugh into one of last week's performances by the Players of "Julius Cæsar" in New-York by jumping to his feet from the bier part-way through Mark Antony's oration.

All Roads Lead to Ravinia Opera

REPARATIONS are practically complete for the notable season of grand opera that is to start at Ravinia Saturday evening, June 25. Inquiries that have been received by Louis Eckstein appear to indicate that an unusually large proportion of out of town visitors will journey to the "opera house in the woods" this year. For their benefit, as well as for those who may have forgotten the way, the following information has been gathered together.

Ravinia is twenty-one miles north of Chicago on the Chicago and North Western railway, and on the Chicago, North Shore and Milwaukee railroad. It is likewise a resort for motorists, being reached either by Sheridan road or the Green Bay road. For the benefit of motorists the Ravinia management maintains two extensive parking spaces, situated at both the Sheridan road and the Green Bay road entrances to the grounds.

Opera Special.

Those who prefer to make the trip to Ravinia by train will find that both the Chicago and North Western railway and the Chicago, North Shore and Milwaukee railroad have arranged their schedules so that they will meet demands of Ravinia patrons. The Chicago and North Western railway will operate a regular schedule of suburban trains daily and Sunday at frequent intervals, and in addition there will be a Ravinia Opera special, which will leave the Chicago and North Western terminal at Madison and Canal streets at 7:20 p. m., Chicago daylight saving time, and will arrive at Ravinia at 8:09 p. m. This train will leave Ravinia immediately after the performance.

The Chicago, North Shore and Milwaukee railroad offers a wide choice of trains through the day, and in the evening there is an opera special which starts at Woodlawn, leaving the Dorchester avenue station at 6:50 p. m., Chicago daylight saving time. It leaves the Adams and Wabash station at 7:15 and Wilson avenue at 7:23. A rapid run is made to Ravinia, the special arriving in plenty of time for the beginning of the performance. This special leaves Ravinia in two sections, the first of which makes the trip to Chicago without stopping until Howard street is reached. The second section makes the stops at the suburbs between Ravinia and Evanston.

Reserving Seats.

Then comes the question of reserving seats for each performance. The general admission at the gate is $1, but coupon books are sold at $18 for twenty coupons. Reserved seats for the opening night are $3 and $4. On all other opera nights the reserved seats sell at $1.50, $1.75, $2.25, $2.75, and $3. On Monday concert nights there is no charge for reserved seats.

The boxoffice at Ravinia will open for the sale of tickets Saturday morning, June 18, at 9:30 o'clock. Mail orders will be received in the meantime and prospective purchasers who desire to make reservations by mail at this time should address the Ravinia company, 36 South State street, Chicago. For the opening performance June 25, the guarantors have the first call for tickets. A special telephone line from Chicago, having the number, Rogers Park 9112, provides telephone service for patrons ordering seats from Chicago, without toll charges. Residents of the north shore towns from Evanston to Milwaukee will call Highland Park 2727 on and after June 18. Seats so reserved, however, must be taken up by 10:30 o'clock the following morning.

Concerts and Recitals

Cave Thompson, blind pianist, will be heard in recital at the Playhouse this afternoon. His program will be made up of compositions by Schumann, Chopin, and modern Russians, concluding with the eighth rhapsody by Liszt.

The class concerts and graduating exercises of the Columbia School of Music, including the conferring of degrees and diplomas, are to take place June 14 to 18.

The thirty-second annual concert and commencement of the Sherwood Music school is to take place Saturday evening in the Auditorium. The symphony orchestra of the school and a number of pupil soloists will furnish the program. The award of degrees, diplomas and certificates will take place during the evening.

Pupils of the Smith and Wright School of Music are to give a piano and organ recital this afternoon in Masonic Temple, 32 W. Randolph street.

Norman Kling, baritone, and Harold Van Horne, pianist, will appear in joint recital at the Hotels Windermere this evening at 8:15 o'clock under the direction of Mrs. Charles Orchard.

An interesting personnel, both on the stage and in the audience at the Auditorium theater on Tuesday, June 21, will attest the city's interest in opera in English, and at the same time its concerted efforts on behalf of flood sufferers, for which a benefit concert and opera program is planned.

Chicago musicians, a Chicago composer and prominent Chicago women will join forces for the success of an all-American musical event on that date, which will add materially to Mayor Thompson's fund for the needy in the flood area.

"I' Pagliacci," the English version by Henry Meltzer, will be given under the direction of Arthur Dunham, with a chorus directed by Daniel Protheroe and with the costumes and stage settings of the Chicago Civic Opera company to add luster. The Nedda of the cast will be sung by Eugenia Vanderveer [Mrs. Harold Strotz of Chicago]; the Canio, Henry Hobart; Tonio, Hugh Dickerson, and Silvio, George Hans.

The prefatory concert program under the baton of Glenn Dillard Gunn, will have Sara Levee, Grace Nelson, and Howard Bartle, pianists; Maria Broniarczyk, soprano; and Arthur Buckley, baritone. With fifty members of the Symphony orchestra, Dr. Gunn will use Leo Sowerby's overture "Comes Autumn Time" to open the all-American program.

Many of the regular opera boxholders will be in their places. The list includes Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick, Mrs. Arthur Meeker, Mrs. Jacob Baur, Mrs. Edward Hines, Mrs. William Westerlund, Mrs. George E. Brennan, Mrs. Samuel Insull, Mrs. Louis Eckstein, Mrs. Rudolph Menn, Mrs. William Hale Thompson, and Mrs. Edward F. Swift.

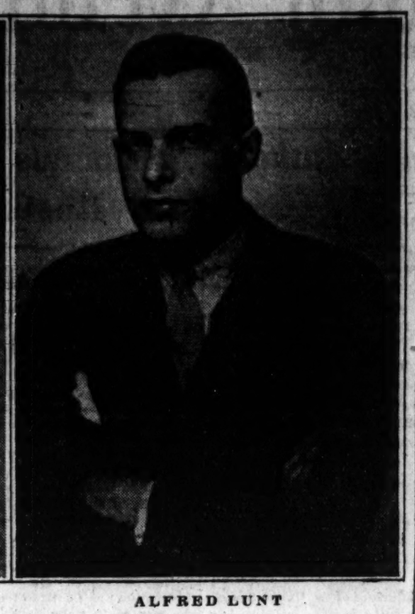
MISS LYNN FONTANNE



ALFRED LUNT

WHEN, in the impending September, the Theater Guild of New-York puts a cast for three plays into the Studebaker, Miss Fontanne (who is Mrs. Lunt off-stage) and Mr. Lunt will return to Chicago, it is said. He hasn't been here since, early in 1922, he acted in Powers' with Miss Billie Burke in Booth Tarkington's "Intimate Strangers." Miss Fontanne was last here late in 1923 in the La Salle in Vincent Lawrence's "In Love with Love." . . . The Lunts do not invariably "play opposite" in the Theater Guild's performances in New-York: she is at times in one cast while he is in another; but it is held to be likely that they will be seen together here in Molnar's "The Guardsman," wherein they spent virtually all the season of 1924-'25.

Odds-and-Ends of Stage-News

MANHATTAN'S new week is slim in the matter of something new: there is but one novelty bulletined, and that a holdover from last week's list—"Talk About Girls!" . . . Miss Anglin is to revive, with two dollars as the price of the best seat, "A Woman of Bronze" (or it may be "The Woman of Bronze"), in which she acted with prosperity, in Chicago and elsewhere, when the decade was younger. The piece is based on a Belgian original. Ralph Morgan, here for some weeks in "The Noose," and Pedro de Cordoba, who hasn't been here in a long time, are to be with her in her contribution to a venture that has so far resulted in a fairly successful revival of "Kemby," with all or nearly all the Nugents, and an unsuccessful revival of "Lombardi Limited," with Leo Carrillo.

Miss Eva Le Gallienne, who charged a dollar-fifty for her season of repertoire in New-York, took her troupe on tour for five weeks, and, charging two-fifty, made a bit of profit. Boston liked her so well that its inhabitants bought tickets worth at the box-office $18,000, it is said, for her final week.

"Hold 'Em Helen!" is the name of one new song-and-dance piece; and "High Hatty" is the name of another.

The Pulitzer prize is said to have helped not at all. "In Abraham's Bosom"; and this work is soon to be taken off in New-York, where its success seems to have been confined to the heaviest of the heavy thinkers and those who think that they are h. t. . . . The Greenwich Village "group" which staged the piece says it will do something new by the author, Paul Green, in the new season, and, further, that it will give part of its energies to putting on Aeschylus' "Seven Against Thebes": this will, of course, "be done in a new way." The beauty of doing the Greek plays "in a new way" is that nobody knows precisely what the old way was.

Mr. Ziegfeld seems to be taking all the time in the world for his new Follies, which is now loosely dated for August. . . . He says the Brox Sisters will be in it.

Shifting Playbills

Tonight:

"Gay Paree," with Miss Sophie Tucker and Chic Sale, in the Four Cohans.—Transfer of the big, bold, and varied show from the Garrick, where it has been immensely prosperous.

Tomorrow night:

"Listen, Dearie!" in the Garrick.—A song-and-dance farce based by Harold Atteridge and Miss Grace Purcell on the farce named "Billy," which in turn was based on a sketch named "Billy's Tombstones": the late Sidney Drew was greatly admired by some in the part of Billy. The tunes in the show are by Charles Gilpin, who for a generation has written the score for the annual frolic of the Mask-and-Wig Club of the University of Pennsylvania. Miss Doris Patston, Fred Hillebrand and Stanley Ridges (soon to be replaced therein by Jack Sheehan, who was in "Katja,") are in it. The piece has not, as yet, had a New-York verdict.

July 10:

George White's Scandals in the Erlanger.—Eighth issue of the like-named show: it is to be installed here after a run of more than a year in New-York. Willie and Eugene Howard, Miss Ann Pennington, Tom Patricola, Miss Frances Williams, Harry Richman, the McCarthy Sisters, and John Wells and Buster West are among the performers listed.

The Playhouse—Louis Mann and Miss Clara Lipman in "Americans All." Seventh week.

Blackstone—"The Barker," with Richard Bennett. Eighth week.

HERE AGAIN

MISS DORIS PATSTON

She was here in the recent engagement in the Garrick of the operetta "Katja," and was, in the soubrette's part, a reason for being pleased with the piece in its guise as entertainment. An earlier appearance in Chicago was with Leon Errol, last year, in "Louis the Fourteenth." And this good-looking importation is returning tomorrow night to take part in "Listen, Dearie!" which is something new in the Garrick.

should be content to let well enough alone. She is still doing the telephone talk with the gossiping Ethel, and doing it as well as it ever will be done. But the songs are gone, and the younger folk have taken the patter away from her.

For the rest the troupers are mostly new faces on Broadway. There is a Libby Holman, who sings character songs rather well, and a slick young man who probably holds an ankle jumping record of some sort, and Evelyn Bennett, with a grin from here to there and a willing voice.

Also an enthusiastic team of dancers, Helen Howell and Burt Harger, who combine acrobatics and esthetics in the dance. You know — she runs and jumps and he catches her by the knee and the great toe and holds her over his head so all may see. And then she runs again and he catches her by the sashband and winds her about his neck. And finally they whirl around and around until he lets go of everything but her hand and she comes up standing.

They are really good students of this dance, these young folk, but the first night their hands slipped on the last figure and Miss Howell went skating across the stage gracefully poised on the pit of her tummy. If there had been any slivers in the stage their engagement would have ended that night.

Some night one of these leaping Valkyries is going right on over the orchestra into Alan Dale's lap, but I'll bet it will just be my luck to miss it.

Gilbert Miller is terribly exercised because he has been quoted as having told a London correspondent that there are only two real dramatists in America—Eugene O'Neill and Sidney Howard. What he said, Gilbert says, is that these two are the outstanding playwrights in America. Many of the others are good and many are promising, but none has done anything big yet to lift him free of the crowd.

Murray Phillips, having met with sufficient success with his revival of "Kempy" at a $2 top price for seats, is offering "Lombardi, Ltd." at another theater next week, with Leo Carillo in his old part, and is later to offer Margaret Anglin and "The Woman of Bronze" on the same terms.

then in a simply angelic tenor voice sing "Santa Lucia." After that experience a drive behind the wildest cabman that ever escaped the clutches of the Chicago police is going to seem conservative.

Rather curiously, however, in this land where opera was invented and where it is practiced most of the twelve months of the year, there has not been for several years a crop of particularly promising voices, many good ones, but only the barest few that can be called great. One hears of voice teachers in Milan and elsewhere so busy that they can turn down the untalented and concentrate on the best of their pupils. (The most famous are only getting 50 lire a lesson, though, so don't come over here to try and pick up the overflow.) The one thing they do not seem to be able to do is to turn out great singers. The point, of course, is that great voices are born first and developed afterward, and for quite a few years they apparently have not been born in any great numbers.

As soon as they are developed they go to America, where fees are higher, as it is not surprising that they are not doing much singing here. It is quite an experience to watch one of them come back. I told a few days ago how Edith Mason made a life sized hit as Marguerite at La Scala. She continued to repeat it, singing the part four times in eight days, and it is no exaggeration to say that the whole town was talking about her.

A Passport Absurdity.

What follows here has nothing in particular to do with music, but something with the legal farces in which some musicians—and some of the laity—sometimes find themselves involved. It was told me when I went through New York.

Richard Hageman, the conductor and composer, and Renée Thornton, the soprano, were married some years ago, she an American by birth, he a native of Holland, at that time in the interval between the first and second papers of American naturalization. As he was incompletely Americanized the marriage made her, like him, a Dutch subject. Since then he has taken out his second papers and completed the legal process.

This spring they decided to take a trip to Europe; in fact they will have gone before this reaches Chicago. When they came to apply for passports they found a situation that would have rejoiced the hearts of Gilbert and Sullivan. He, born in Holland, had no difficulty in getting an American passport. She, whose family had been in the United States so long that one of her ancestors was a signer of the Declaration of Independence, discovered that by a change in the law she was not American, but still Dutch, and that she will be obliged to take out first and second papers in her own behalf, among other things renouncing allegiance to the kingdom of Holland.

More than that, in order to leave the country at this time she had to take out a Dutch passport, go before the Dutch consul to apply for a permit of reentry, and then face a board of inquiry and an intelligence test to find out whether she was a proper person to receive a certificate of reentry, with such questions as "Who was George Washington?" "Who is the governor of New York?" and "What did Abraham Lincoln do that was specially important in the history of the United States?"

Try that on the back of your passport cover, and see if for sheer, stark, abysmal, maddening absurdity you can even tie it.

Mr. D. W. G. and the B. but D. Blonde

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special Correspondence.]—D. W. Griffith is taking a lot of tests of people for his first United Artists production, in which Estelle Taylor will take the leading rôle. The set looks like old home week, with Lillian Gish and Dorothy Gish dashing in from their little blue roadster to visit and chat, and with Mae Marsh, who may get a rôle with Griffith shortly, also present. Mae has spent most of her working time before the camera in England lately, and wants to work in Hollywood again.

The girls report one laugh. A large beautiful and dumb blonde was visiting on the set. Where she came from no one knows. She was just hanging around. D. W. Griffith walked up to her and said, "Have you ever worked in pictures?"

* *

Who's That Fresh Guy?

The blonde felt the neck edge of her boyish bob and drawled, "No."

"I'd like to take a film test of you," said the famous director.

Every one roundabout was tense. They felt that here was a career in the making.

Griffith went over to watch a scene being made and the blonde turned to Lillian Gish and said, "Say, kiddo, who is that fresh guy?"

Lillian gasped and answered, "Why, that's D. W. Griffith."

"O," said the blonde. Evidently the answer let in no light.

"Say, I gotta lunch date. Do you suppose he can wait till after lunch for me?"

Estelle Taylor's Party.

Estelle Taylor celebrated her birthday with a large party at her home in Laughlin park. It was a surprise planned by her husband, Jack Dempsey, who engineered it through friends who had everything ready when Jack and Estelle returned to their city home for an evening away from Jack's camp near Ojai.

Looking the little country girl in a white cotton frock, Estelle hurried into the house about 7:30, expecting to dress for the theater. On the front porch she was stopped by a tangled mass of shrubbery that proved, on inspection, to be potted rose bushes.

Once in the front door she was greeted by some fifty film friends who had brought the rose bushes along to plant in a rose "memory garden" around the newly constructed recreation house in the Dempsey grounds.

Two of the guests, William Randolph Hearst Jr., and Jack McDermott, the scenarist, were much aggrieved that no one had told them about the rose bush business and went out in the front yard and affixed their cards with appropriate sentiments to two of the large trees growing in the yard.

A buffet supper in the dining room had a huge birthday cake trimmed with yellow roses in the center of the table. An arch of yellow rosebuds stood over the cake with its burning candles. Following supper most of the guests adjourned to the recreation house, where an orchestra supplied dance music. Claire Windsor in a lace frock danced with young Mr. Hearst. Marie Prevost in black taffeta period gown appeared unescorted by Kenneth Harlan, her husband. Lenore Ulric in black lace appeared with her stage partner.

Among Those Present.

The Duncan sisters in white chiffon were squired by Nils Asther, young German actor who plays a rôle in "Topsy and Eva" and who seems to have formed a sentimental attachments for Little Eva. Louise Fazenda was with her fiancé, Hal Wallis. Peggy Prevost, sister of Marie, was a popular dance partner with a long billowy gown of brown organdy and green shoes. Patsy Ruth Miller blew in from the studio and had three men arguing over her next dance. Monte Blue brought his wife with him, but that did not restrain him from being the life of the party, doing eccentric Charleston steps and winding up to the pitch where he induced Louise Fazenda to join him in a nymph and satyr number done to the Spring song. Louise's ballet takeoff was a comedy gem.

Carmel Myers, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Carewe, Helen Taylor and Rod White, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Dempsey, Minna Wallis, Billie Dove and Irvin Willatt, her husband, Olive Tell, Alma Tell, John Miljan and many others were guests.

TWO-A-DAY

WALTER M'NALLY

He's sharing headline distinction this week in the Palace with Jack Pearl and Vincent Lopez. Mr. McNally's baritone was made known to many thousands of Chicago theater-goers in the run of more than a year, in the Great Northern, of "The Student-Prince": he was Doctor Engel, Prince Karl's tutor, in that operetta. And, in the course of that run, he gave a recital that is said to have been entirely successful as both commerce and art.

10 YEARS AGO in Chicago's THEATERS

ON Sunday, June 10, 1917, Percy Hammond, then dramatic critic of THE TRIBUNE, elected to discourse on six summer shows current in Chicago. Of "Dollars and Sense," a society satire at the Garrick, billed as "by and with Alan Brooks," Mr. Hammond spoke quite kindly.

Frank Keenan was occupying the Princess with a dramatic thriller, "The Pawn." The reviewer said of Mr. Keenan: "He is so effective that you are glad when at the end he prepares calmly to eviscerate himself as the penalty for having failed to put it over the American navy."

Cohan's Grand was doing good business with "Turn to the Right," described by the critic as "a nifty and salubrious sermon upon the topic that while the light holds out to burn the vilest sinner may return." And do you remember—peach preserves were distributed as souvenirs at a Saturday matinee!

A Roi Cooper Megrue comedy, "Seven Chances," with Frank Craven, Carroll McComas, and sundry other persons of theatrical importance was in the Cort.

At the Palace Music Hall was "The Show of Wonders," with, among many others, Willie Howard and Marilyn Miller. Miss Miller was described as "a pretty, ingenuous, youthful girl, who dances beautifully and sings, too, much better than her songs."

"The Bird of Paradise" was in the Olympic, an Oliver Morosco production, dealing with "events transpiring under the soft Hawaiian sun and having to do with the degenerating influence of Polynesian habits upon the white man."

20 YEARS AGO

ON Sunday, June 16, 1907, the theatrical columns of THE TRIBUNE listed these attractions:

Powers—Rose Stahl in "The Chorus Lady," said by THE TRIBUNE to be "the comedy triumph of the year."

Illinois—"The Man of the Hour," under the management of Frederick Donaghey.

Grand Opera house—Last week of "The Tattooed Man," under the direction of Charles Dillingham. "Good-by to the laughing, musical beauty show," the ads read.

Whitney Opera house—Twelfth big week of "A Knight for a Day," with John Slavin and Mabel Hite. Best seats at night, $1. "If you don't think this is the best show in town, we will refund your money," they advertised.

McVicker's—Klaw and Erlanger's production of "The Round Up," by Edmund Day.

Chicago Opera house—"Captain Careless." Sixth week, with Joe Whitehead, Ida Hawley, beauty chorus of forty, pony ballet, etc. Special feature, Miss Toby Claude as the funny waitress.

Garrick—"The Three of Us," by Rachel Crothers. Described as "a play of humor and pathos, emotion and strength."

Studebaker—"Miss Pocahontas," with Elgie Bowers. "Great fun, great music, great cast, great chorus, A GREAT SHOW," read the ads.

Great Northern—"The Volunteer Organist," billed as "a beautiful pastoral drama, presented by W. W. Newcomer."

Bush Temple—"Along the Mohawk," described as "a great rural drama."

Colonial—"Brewster's Millions," the George Barr McCutcheon spectacular comedy, was scheduled to open here.

Burlesque was on the boards at the Empire, Euson's, Folly, and Trocadero.

At the Bijou the famous "Ten Nights in a Barroom" was showing at night prices of 10c, 20c, 30c, and 50c, with matinées at 10c and 20c.

The Pekin was showing "In Zululand."

Advanced vaudeville was the Majestic's card, offering "fourteen acts and the Kinodrome."

Not Charmed by the Charmer.

My dear Mae Tinée: May I send my opinion of Greta Garbo? To me her looks would fail to express a temptress or enchantress. Insipid would express her.

John Gilbert looks too heavy in his work and on his feet. There is no venom in his—only a matter of opinion. I love you, Matinee—read everything you write. Your sense of humor is great! MARY.

Wishing Ben Better Luck.

Dear Mae: You know that young handsome looking movie star, Ben Lyon—why is it he always plays with girls older than himself? Aren't there any young girls in the movies? His pictures are just simply wonderful the way they are, but would be better if he played with young girls. Ben Lyon is my favorite movie star and always will be. I never miss his pictures.

LONESOME ANN.

[Editor's note: We all hope Ben will soon have better luck in leading ladies.]

An Answer to "H. S."

Dear Mae Tinée: In answer to "H. S." may I say I agree with her in what she said of our greatest emotional artist—Lillian Gish?

I usually agree with you, Miss Tinée, but, as regards "The Scarlet Letter," I really loved Lillian Gish as Hester even though Hawthorne's heroine was a brunette. MONA LISA.

13TH CENTURY MUSIC FEATURES TUESDAY'S CARD

Selinger String Quartet in Novel Treat.

The fourth concert by the Selinger string quartet, to be heard on Tuesday evening between 9 and 9:30 o'clock, tops the list of musical features which W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station in the Drake hotel is to present this week.

The Selinger string quartet has been offering a series of historical concerts, exhuming from the dust of centuries music of the minstrels, troubadours and early composers who twanged lyres and strummed guitars in the years that are dead. Tuesday night they are to offer a chamber music program culled from the works of early French composers, with the first two offerings on the program dating back to the thirteenth century. These are a "Song" by King Thibault of Navarre, dated about 1240, and a "Rondeau," by Adam de la Halle, a Picardian troubadour. Other offerings on the program include numbers of seventeenth and eighteenth century composers.

The quartet is composed of Henry Selinger, first violin; Armand Buisseret, second violin; Alfred Wathall, violist; and Leon Lichtenfeld, cellist. Mr. Selinger directs the work of the quartet, and Alfred Wathall is the arranger of the works they present.

Sascha Corado, the famous European baritone who has been proving such an attraction on W-G-N programs, will be heard in another song recital on Tuesday night between 9:30 and 10 o'clock. Mr. Corado was formerly a member of the Berlin Civic opera, and since his arrival in this country he has been doing concert work. His songs will be presented in three languages, French, German, and English. Mme. Elizabeth Moritz, the talented European pianist, will again accompany him.

Paul Ash comes to bat with another of his popular Friday night programs this week, starting at 8:30 o'clock. Paul's new evening feature broadcast direct from a special studio in the Oriental theater has proved so popular that it has been extended for an additional fifteen minutes and now continues until 9:15 o'clock. Milton Watson has returned to join Paul and his gang, and he is proving a big attraction.

Saturday night between 9:30 and 10 o'clock, listeners will be invited to take another trip "Over the Hills and Far Away," this time to France.

ANNOUNCERS OF TODAY READ MOST OF THEIR STUFF

It may surprise listeners to learn that in a growing number of the larger broadcasting stations practically every word that is spoken by the announcers from the time the station begins in the morning until it concludes at midnight is written out. Not only that, but it is even more surprising to learn that apparently impromptu speeches have been drafted two or three weeks ahead of time. Just as actors are fed their lines and get their cues, so is it becoming with radio announcers.

As network broadcasting increases announcing by numerous announcers becomes more complicated. What one man says must dovetail into what another immediately following him has to say. There must be no repetition and the whole thing must move ahead on a split-second watch time schedule.

Time the Big Element.

And here you have the reason for it all. Studio program directors are as a rule vastly more concerned as to how long it may take a man to say a thing than they are with what he is going to say, although there must, of course, be necessary precautions with regard to the latter.

The result is that practically everything that is said in a radio station, not only by those delivering set speeches but as has been said, by announcers is written out in advance. In fact, there has grown up a new studio profession known as radio continuity writing made necessary by these advance announcements.

Continuity Writers.

In one of the large New York studios, two continuity writers give their full time to the work and occupy the same relative position to station offerings as those who write the moving picture captions and scenarios in the motion picture studios.

In radio, the business of continuity writing is being rapidly developed, inasmuch as these men are also called upon to suggest ideas for the broadcasting of the rapidly developing commercial and advertising features.

INSIDE THE LOUD SPEAKER

By Quin A. Ryan, W-G-N Announcer

ONCE we thought that, of all the membess of the radio listening family, the football fans were the warmest audience. But we've changed our opinion in favor of the baseball devotees. They literally eat up the raido. It is astounding to learn how many old and new baseball fans there are who have the time and inclination to listen to the broadcasting from the ball parks.

The great majority of these live in the smaller towns of Chicagoland. They write letters in droves. They tell of crowds of listeners daily grouped in wayside "gas" stations, in hotel lobbies, in cigar and radio shops; they ask for the inning-by-innings scores of all games in both leagues; they voice their gratitude for learning minute details and ask for more, such as the colors of the players' uniforms, the north and south direction of the pitcher's mound from home plate and the physical proportions of each player.

Hundreds of them who've never seen a big league game vow that they are going to make special excusions to the city to attend a contest at the Cubs or Sox parks. They tell of listening to the games under peculiar circumstances; many a person writes to report that Grandma is rapidly learning the lingo of the diamond and is daily found shouting, "Come on, Hack" when the slugging Wilson comes up to bat. Some have explained that they do their gardening with the radio horn set up in the kitchen window.

A young lady last week detailed the story of how she works at bookkeeping while the loud speaker drones out the tale of the game, and she finds herself writing, in the midst of a column of figures, "Two strikes on Hartnett."

This past week we've been asking the baseball listeners to tell us of any unusual circumstances under which they listen to the games, and many have responded. Two letter carriers in Illinois towns describe their listening to the games daily as they make their rounds. The good people in the homes know the postmen are interested and have their sets turned on when they expect them to be passing!

A fan in Woodstock, Ill., writes: "I work nights as a stationary engineer and the starting of the ball game is my alarm clock. My wife calls me at 2:54 and says, 'Come, get up if you want to hear the ball game.' While eating my breakfast I place the loud speaker near the dining room door. Then I work in the garden, listening to the ball game at the same time. Some days my neighbors come over and listen with me, but do not help me with my garden work."

Another, a lady in Michigan, says she is 83 and has never seen a baseball game, but listens avidly every day. A crippled boy in Madison, Wis., says that he has found a new game, the game of make-believe baseball announcing. He sits beside the vacant lot while the other lads play ball and reports the game into an imaginary microphone!

TOMORROW, at the Fourth Presbyterian church, Sam of "Sam 'n' Henry" (in real life Freeman F. Gosden) will be married to Miss Leta Marie Schreiber. Liza is heard to gasp, "Um-um, ain't THAT something?" And Henry only mutters, "Now don't start no a'gument!"

THE USE of advertising trade names as labels for radio entertainment units is creeping into other fields. We find certain well known radio orchestras that go by the trade names of their sponsors now listed in the vaudeville and phonograph lists under the manufacturers' names. These orchestras, we take it, are not presented by the vaudeville houses because they will take smaller salaries than other orchestras, but because their advertising name has taken on a boxoffice value through their radio work. And still, the advertisers whose names they bear reap the benefits.

Entertainers are presented free of charge on the radio to the listeners because they carry advertisers' trade names. The nimble publicity and advertising men may carry this racket further.

Golly, the managers may some day admit everybody free to their vaudeville theaters because each act on the bill will be sponsored by an advertiser—if you follow us. The advertiser will pay the expenses and the public will see its shows free, by merely accepting for a moment a phrase or two of advertising. Such as:

Act 1. The Five Bounding Parkers, presented through the courtesy of the Phoenix Sleeve Garter company.

Act 2. The Mid-West Drop Forge quartet.

Act 3. Albert W. Winter & Co., in the Ideal Inkwell playlet, "Out, Damned Spot!"

Act 4. Tillie Tiddlewinks, in songs and dances, sponsored by the Saratoga Spinning company, makers of fine spinning wheels, spinning tops, and rakes.

You've heard the rumor that a single copy of one of our weekly magazines costs about seven times as much to produce as the public pays for it. The advertising in it carries the expense. Why can't we see our vaudeville shows free, on the same principle, and let advertisers foot the bills in return for the publicity? Or, on the other hand, we might drop the subject entirely!

WE NOMINATE Capt. Lindbergh for the new radio commission. He has learned a lot about wave lengths.

RADIO BRINGS FAMOUS OLD NEGRO SPIRITUALS TO PUBLIC ATTENTION

William Simmons, the concert baritone, will give the last of his series of three concerts in the Atwater Kent hour, broadcasting from W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, at 8:15 o'clock, Chicago time, tonight.

The program, in addition to operatic and other selections, will include "Steal Away," one of the more popular of the Negro spirituals which have come into increasing vogue with the rapid spread of radio.

The Negro spirituals did not attract much attention until searched out since the civil war. They had been in the process of development for nearly three centuries, and were first brought prominently to public attention by the jubilee singers of Fisk university.

While it is thought many were doubtless lost, those collected and recorded are said to number in excess of 500.

MUSIC ON ORDER, SLOGAN OF NEW AID TO RADIO

"Music on order" is a slogan which might easily be adopted by the Musical and Literary Research Department of the National Broadcasting company in New York. This department of the concern which furnishes radio programs to three separate networks of broadcasting stations, has expanded its activities to the point where it is prepared to furnish, on extremely short notice, complete orchestrations and vocal arrangements of compositions suitable for any sort of a broadcast feature.

This service is only one phase of the department's work, however. Originally established to avoid legal difficulties in connection with literary and musical material used in broadcasting, the department has come to include a very complete music library, groups of musicians skilled in composition and in vocal and instrumental arrangements, research workers continually in search of new material, copyright experts and clerks, fifteen people in all. Incidentally, original scripts for broadcast programs and original music to accompany them are now being regularly prepared under the supervision of the department.

Copyrights Are Complicated.

The question of copyrights in the music and literary fields is a highly involved one. Wide distribution of various rights connected with musical and literary compositions and in many cases the overlapping of such rights make the whole problem of fees for the use of this material on the air extremely technical. In many cases, reservations have been made by composers, authors and their representatives regarding the frequency with which their material may be used in broadcasting. Other compositions are limited to the arrangement which may be made from the original. Sometimes while original compositions are not copyrights, certain arrangements and translations of them may be thus protected. The entire matter is a complicated one.

Perhaps a more interesting phase of the department's activities concerns itself with research work and the manner in which the music library is maintained. Skilled music readers are always at work seeking out new and forgotten compositions, ranging from grand operas to the simplest song. Many different sources are used, including indices of all kinds, various reference works, files of old newspapers and magazines and countless others.

Draw Up Arrangements.

The music library is cross-indexed in a number of ways, so that compositions appropriate to any theme can be located within a very short time. One index is maintained by composers, one by titles, one by first lines and several by subjects with which the music treats. The present accurate and helpful condition of these indices has entailed a great deal of continuous effort, but it has proved its worth many times.

The object of the work is apparent. When a broadcast program is being prepared dealing with any particular subject, country or period, musical compositions which have been written about that theme are available.

Constant work is also necessary to make sure that the proper arrangements are at hand. For this reason the department must forecast the requirements of the program department. In most cases, when a selection is added to the music library, both vocal and instrumental arrangements suitable for broadcasting are made, so that no time may be lost when a call comes in for the music.

SHORT WAVES

Only about 20 per cent of the homes of the United States are equipped with radio.

Senator Howell of Nebraska referred to radio as the last great natural resource.

3 ORCHESTRAS TO PLAY NIGHTLY ON STATION WQJ

Dance music each night from 10:30 p. m. to 1 a. m. by three Chicago orchestras has been arranged for summer presentation from station WQJ.

The other two orchestras which will alternate in the dance music program are Jack Chapman's playing at the La Salle roof garden, and Katz and his Kittens playing at the Rainbo Gardens.

RADIO LEADERS HERE THIS WEEK FOR BIG SESSION

First Trade Show and 2 Conventions.

BY FRANK HINMAN.

Beginning tomorrow and for the five days thereafter Chicago wil be the radio center of the United States, the occasion being the first annual trade show of the Radio Manufacturers' association, held in connection with the third annual convention of that organization. The Federated Radio Trade association will also be in session.

For the last two days manufacturers, jobbers, dealers and broadcasters from all sections of the country have been gathering for the meetings and by Tuesday morning officials of the various organizations expect that more than 5,000 representatives of the radio industry will be on hand.

Not Open to Public.

The principal feature of the session will be the radio show in the new Stevens hotel. This exposition will be strictly an industry affair. Admittance will be only to those affiliated with the industry, the purpose being to give dealers and jobbers an opportunity to view an early showing of the 1927 merchandise, and to make their contracts for the season's business.

Tomorrow, Wednesday and Friday the show will be open to the trade from 2 o'clock in the afternoon until 10 o'clock at night, while Tuesday and Thursday the hours will be from 2 until 6. Tomorrow the time of the manufacturers will be taken up with registration and committee meetings, the opening meeting being scheduled for Tuesday morning.

Banquet Thursday Night.

The annual banquet of the R. M. A. will be held Thursday night at the Stevens hotel, Secretary Herbert Hoover and Merlin Hall Aylesworth, president of the National Broadcasting company being the speakers.

The first meeting of the Federated Radio Trade association will be held Tuesday night.

MANY STATIONS TAKE NEW BANDS NEXT WEDNESDAY

Radio listeners, tuning in their sets on Wednesday night, will be given their first opportunity to determine whether the new allocations of wave lengths and power for the radio stations of the country will eliminate interference as the federal radio commission hopes that they will.

Stations which have been granted new frequencies will make the necessary changes in their equipment early Wednesday morning and it is expected that all will be broadcasting on the new channels by night. This is bound to cause confusion for a few days as listeners relog their sets.

Whether the new allocations will be successful, only time can tell. The commission frankly admits that many stations will probably have to be changed, but it does not plan to make any changes until the present channels have been given a good test.

(Sunday, June 12.)

RADIO PROGRAMS FOR TODAY

(Daylight Saving Time.)

THE New York Giants are in town again for a series of four games with the Cubs, and their clash today at Wrigley field will be broadcast by W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel. The game starts at 3 o'clock, and W-G-N goes on the air five minutes earlier, at 2:55 o'clock. Quin Ryan will be at the microphone.

Phyllis Feingold, violinist, and Wolfgang Wittich, tenor, are the artists who will be heard during this afternoon's Lyon & Healy recital, broadcast between 2 and 2:55 o'clock. Among Miss Feingold's numbers are "Minuet in Olden Style," "Molly on the Shore," a Kreisler arrangement of the popular Granger composition; "Gypsy Dance," and "En Bateau." Mr. Wittich will sing many well known concert and operatic selections.

Between 1 and 2 o'clock this afternoon Ambrose Larsen is to offer an hour's organ recital direct from W-G-N's Wurlitzer studio. This program, which will be composed of popular and semi-popular numbers, follows Uncle Quin's reading of THE TRIBUNE comics to the children. Another Sunday organ recital takes place between 10:30 and 11 o'clock tonight, when Albert Meuer, a product of Chicago organ teachers, offers a special recital from W-G-N's Lyon & Healy studio.

William Simmons, the popular concert baritone, will give the third of his series of three concerts in the Atwater Kent hour of music tonight at 8:15 o'clock. His program, in addition to operatic and other selections, will include "Steal Away," one of the more popular of the Negro spirituals which have come into increasing vogue with the rapid spread of radio.

"Our Music Room," W-G-N's Sunday evening musical feature, offers tonight a resumé of the life and works of the greatest of all ballet composers, Leo Delibes. Delibes wrote much choice and charming music in the five decades of living and Bryce Talbot, baritone, and Henry Sellinger and his Drake Concert ensemble will interpret it for the radio audience tonight between 9 and 10 o'clock.

Correll and Gosden, W-G-N's popular harmony kings, will be heard in a novel song program tonight between 7:20 and 7:50 o'clock. Many new numbers will be offered by the two harmonizers.

The Salernos—Frank and Lawrence—the popular song and accordion duo, are also becoming recognized fixtures on Sunday nights. Their program starts at 10:10 o'clock, immediately following "Sam 'n' Henry." Incidentally, tonight is the night when Sam 'n' Henry take that airplane trip they've been telling about for the last few nights. Tune in at 10 tonight and see what happens.

An interesting Sunday night feature is always Bill Hay's reading of the Bible. Each Sunday night Bill chooses some appropriate passage from the Old Testament and reads it to the radio audience at 8:45 o'clock.

MOZART SUBJECT OF PROGRAM ON WLS TUESDAY

"Personalities in Music," a feature of WLS which brings the great composers in for a real closeup by the radio audience, will have for its subject on Tuesday, none other than Mozart. The program will be on the air at 8 o'clock.

Mozart was "the boy wonder" of his time, touring Europe as a child pianist. He was also known as a composer when still a child, it being said that he actually composed a tune at the tender age of four.

Boy Scouts to Help W-G-N Observe Flag Day

America celebrates Flag day next Tuesday, June 14, and the Chicago Boy Scouts are to offer a special program commemorating the day at 5:30 over W-G-N. A Boy Scout bugler will be heard in bugle calls.

W-G-N WILL PUT LINDY'S GOTHAM WELCOME ON AIR

New York's reception to Charles A. Lindbergh, which takes place tomorrow, will be broadcast by W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, direct from Manhattan. The program starts at 10:45 a. m., with the arrival of Lindbergh at the Battery. His first words upon setting foot once again in New York will be heard by listeners.

Then will come a mammoth parade up Broadway to the city hall, where Mayor Jimmy Walker and his cabinet will greet the returning hero. Such remarks as the mayor and Lindbergh make will be broadcast. Later in the day there will be a reception by Gov. Alfred E. Smith in Central park for the New York to Paris flight hero.

Announcers will be located at the Battery, all along the line of march up Broadway and at the city hall and in Central park to describe the vivid details of the event to listeners. The broadcast is expected to continue until 3 o'clock.

WMAQ WILL PUT MANUFACTURES BANQUET ON AIR

The third annual banquet of the Radio Manufacturers' association, which will be held Thursday night in the Stevens hotel, will be broadcast by station WMAQ. The speaker of the evening will be Herbert Hoover, secretary of commerce. Directors of the station have coöperated with the manufacturers and the National Association of Broadcasters in the production of an outstanding program.

Allen McQuhae, lyric tenor, who sings ballads and songs of Ireland, and who is as much at home behind the microphone as he is on the concert stage, will sing two groups of songs. From the Chicago Civic Opera company comes Irene Pavlowska, mezzo-soprano, to help with her golden voice. And from Cincinnati, comes Marjorie Garrigus Smith, pianist, to interpret "The Rhapsody in Blue," by George Gershwin. She will be assisted by the orchestra, conducted by W. J. Kopp, formerly assistant director of the Cincinnati Symphony orchestra. The Philco team and a twenty-two piece Chicago orchestra, directed by George Knackstedt, will also take part.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Ministers' Graves Decorated Today

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

MINISTERS' MEMORIAL DAY will be observed today by ministers and members of the Methodist Episcopal church in the cemeteries of Chicago and northern Illinois. Flowers will be placed on the graves and in several cemeteries commemorative services will be held.

A similar custom will be observed in many other parts of the United States. The Methodist ministers who have for several years observed the day would be pleased to see a like service carried out with reference to the ministers of other denominations. It is believed the custom emphasizes the service the minister is to the community, endears his memory to those who follow, and expresses the heroism of the sacrifices of pioneer days and days of peace as well those recognized in behalf of the soldier dead who sacrificed themselves in war.

The principal service today at 3 o'clock will be at Rosehill cemetery where more than 70 ministers of the Methodist Episcopal church, including Bishops Hamlin, Harris, Merrill, McCabe, Dr. Cummings, former president of Northwestern university, Dr. Dempster, founder of Garrett Biblical institute are buried. The grave of Frances E. Willard will also be decorated. Dr. Ernest Wray Oneal will make the address. Dr. Horace G. Smith will preside and the Rev. O. F. Mattison will direct the decoration of the graves.

Scribe Steers Away from the Didactic

By Mme. X.

SHE'S a great friend of mine, the lady on Oakwood avenue, Lake Forest, and she told me that I was getting prosy and didactic and was not half frivolous enough for my audience. As I swore off from ever mentioning her name some time ago at her request, at least half of my source of polite and light hearted piffle was cut off, as she is a never ending joy to her friends because of her vivacious attitude towards life and its opportunities.

I'll keep my vow not to mention her name, but I am going to tell the rest of my readers something about her. She won't know it as it is probably long since she has read this column, undoubtedly avoiding it because of its improving and highbrow note. Although she and her husband celebrated their thirtieth wedding anniversary recently, she is one of the most buoyantly youthful mortals that I know and always brings to life a zest and interest not often to be met with in the present time, even among people as alive and alert as are we Americans.

A Gem of a House.

She is active in so many different directions that her remarkable efficiency in each one of her favorite pursuits is a matter of wonder to those who know her. She is an expert card player, "contract bridge" being her favorite sport. Although she is rather nervous and high strung, she is one of the best automobile drivers that I know. She is clever with her needle. She is an artist as a caterer, her table being renowned for its special dishes. She is an ardent and industrious gardener, and has created a formal garden in a not large space which is a model for any gardener, so charming and successful is it. She has made it entirely herself with her own hands and out of her own vision of what a small garden should be.

She has also set in this garden a gem of a house, one that is a perfect example of a New England abode in the early part of the last century. Every bit of the furniture and all the adornments and ornaments are of that period. It is the most consistent example of the home of our great-grand parents that could be found the length and breadth of the land. It is, however, infused with the lighter, happier spirit of today. Our immediate ancestors were rather a stern and ascetic lot compared with their happy go lucky descendants. A feature of the dwelling is that the stairs from the second floor come steeply down between house walls into the dining room. This gives an air of Cape Cod and takes one eastward to that region of salt breezes and sandy stretches. But no New England household ever had such gay parties as gather in this unique and delightful cottage.

After Thirty Years.

As a hostess my energetic and captious friend on Oakwood avenue is noted far and wide. It is a safe bet that few owners even of the most spacious mansions on the north shore entertain so many people during a month as does this gardener, card player, chauffeur, interior decorator, seamstress, poetess, for she is as nimble and gifted with her pen as she is in her other talents. It seems to be as easy for her to handle rhyme and meter as for the rest of us to talk plain prose.

Here are excerpts from a gay and witty epithalamium, or ode to a happy thirty years of marriage, which she wrote on the occasion of a banquet she gave not long ago to celebrate the event.

In summing up the thirty years
Which we've been man and wife,
When taken altogether
It's been a happy life.
We've had vicissitudes galore,
But since I changed my name
I can't recall a single time
We haven't played the game.

Most women fear their husband's love
Will suddenly grow cold.
With all my faults I never did,
And I am overbold.

For the only rival that I'll own
Is not brunette or blonde,
But Sammie's game of golf,
Of which he's over fond.
No social crisis will prevent
If Sammie wants to play.
I only hope my funeral
Will be on a rainy day.
In looking back the thirty years
Of sunshine and of rain;
If standing on the threshold,
I would marry Sam again.

An Age of Candor.

In this day when marriage vows are so lightly taken it is pleasant to contemplate such a cheerful and successful union. A young and seemingly contented married woman told me not long ago that she never would have married if she had not had the thought in her mind that divorce was comparatively easy. The candor was interesting. Her immediate ancestors belonged to a sternly puritan type of people, folk to whom the mere thought of divorce would have seemed the acme of unrighteousness. Also, they were of the type to whom candor was unknown. If they had had such thoughts they would have concealed them.

I think nothing is more hopeful than today's custom of candor among the young. It means courage and self-reliance. They dare to be themselves. But I am getting didactic and, although my Oakwood avenue friend will probably not cast so much as an eye over this, I am bound to try to keep on the purely personal for today.

A Charming Party.

That was a charming party that Mrs. Joseph Cudahy gave on Memorial day, although it is a little late to mention it. She called it a sports day for women and invited chiefly those women whose husbands were sure to be having a field day of their own. The day, if you'll remember, was chill and bleak, which made the indoor sports rather the favorite pursuits of the company, although many of them did run races, either rolling hoops or getting needles threaded or cigarets lighted half way in the run, and other similar stunts.

Indoors there was one of the most amusing contests I have ever seen. A large cardboard was stuck full of photographs of infants and children in earliest, tenderest years, half clad babies sucking thumbs, little girls with long curls, and other such infantile portraits. The contest was for those present to pick out their friends in these early years of their lives, for the pictures were of those present. Each contestant had a card with dotted lines, headed by a number. Each picture on the board also had a number. The game was to write the name of the original of the photograph after the corresponding number on the card. Eight minutes was the time allowed to study one picture and put a name to it. It was most diverting to see the puzzled expressions on the faces of the various guests as they scanned the infantile features of some of their most intimate friends.

If the boy is father to the man, the girl is far from being a mother to herself grown up. Perhaps girls change more than do boys in the process of emerging from babyhood to their full grown estate. The game produced much hilarity. So did a revival of jack stones, at which some were so adept that the clumsy tyro, like the writer, strongly suspected the skillful ones of keeping in practice at home on quiet afternoons, though the sport is rather juvenile for most of us.

A gay luncheon with contract bridge afterwards completed what was generally acclaimed as "a perfect day."

The Cudahy Mansion.

The Cudahy mansion is on Deerpath avenue and is one of the best looking houses in that famous community of beautiful mansions, Lake Forest. It is of a distinctly French type of architecture, built of gray stone with garages, stables, greenhouses and so forth to the west of it all in the same style. There is also a pavilion, flanking the greenhouses, which is a delightful feature. It is so fitted up that in winter, if they want to go out to the country, Mr. and Mrs. Cudahy can be quite comfortable in it. It is heated with the adjacent glass houses, and has a pretty salon, a cozy bedroom and a well equipped kitchenette, and its owners are wont to camp out in it week-ends with entire comfort.

Wide green lawns and grassy fields surround the house, which has nearby a lovely formal garden. The grounds are so spacious that one is hardly conscious that not far away is an incipient subdivision, that threatens to change the nature of that part of the landscape; which, up to now, has been essentially bucolic. Just where those who love spaciousness and uninterrupted landscape of fields and woods are to go in the region about Chicago is hard to say. The energetic subdivider is fast turning the whole region into a vast real estate speculation. People who yearn to live near the mighty owners of many acres are going to scare their imposing neighbors away.

Wherever you drive for forty miles north, west or south of the city you see street signs, sidewalks and half indicated roads emerging from the scraggly verdure in rectangular groups, depressing and unattractive to the lover of nature in even its simplest manifestations. More aspiring among these tentative villages have gate posts of stone or brick at the end of what will in time be their principal thoroughfares. The gate posts suggest cemeteries as much as they do the abodes of the living.

Where Privacy Is Assured.

One of the big estates within easy motoring distance of Chicago that will long enjoy privacy is that of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Insull. Although it is situated on that popular highway, Milwaukee avenue, and is within the confines of Libertyville, it is so large in extent and the house itself, a stately Italian palazzo, is so sheltered by foliage from the road that the owners have secured as nearly a perfect privacy as is possible in our gregarious age. It is only from great distances that even the whistles of passing trains are audible.

It would be quite impossible north and west of Chicago to get quite away from these tuneful toots, that are carried on the air for miles and miles. North Shore communities are never for more than a few minutes at a time during the twenty-four hours that make our day without the sound either of engine whistles or the clang of their bells or the rumble of their huge wheels rolling along. Most of us become so wonted to this ever repeated noise as to become unconscious of it, but a few more highly strung mortals are acutely aware of this condition.

The Last Stand.

But to return to that personal note so desired by the lady on Oakwood avenue, to the one who harks back to another era, it is exhilarating to hear of the occasional protest of the old order of things against a fiercely self-assertive and utterly changed present. Take the horse, for instance, he is likely before long to join the mastodon, the sabre tooth tiger and the three toed equine, his immediate ancestor, and become extinct. But before he goes he is not unwilling to make his protest against the new order.

At Barrington, lately, a one horse shay drew up beside the handsome automobile belonging to the Hon. Franklin MacVeagh, and which his son, Eames MacVeagh had borrowed for the day and had parked along the roadside near the country club where he was lunching. The MacVeagh chauffeur was inside the car absorbed in the mental occupations which are the lot of those of his calling for hours at a time. Suddenly the waiting steed, victim probably of a sudden attack of inferiority complex, awoke from an equine stupor and attacked the adjacent motor car. He drove his front hoofs through the windshield, almost hitting the comnolent chauffeur on the nose. The latter got out in no little haste, whereupon those same hoofs are reported to have gone through another solid pane of glass in the car before the agitated animal, himself somewhat the worse for wear, could be brought under control. Perhaps he is the last horse that will ever attempt to show its hatred of a motor car.

It was such a gallant, such a daring thing to do that the deed should be celebrated in song and legend before the horse becomes a mere thing of memory. To be sure, it detained the two MacVeaghs a week in Chicago while the car was being repaired, as they had planned leaving town in it ten days ago for their lovely estate near Dublin, N. H., where Mr. MacVeagh will spend the summer, while his son makes periodical visits to him.

Two other well known society folk are making their way to their seashore abodes by motor, Mrs. C. M. Ely and Mrs. William R. Odell, who left here on Friday for Biddeford Pool, Me. It will take them four or five days to make their goal, where both have taken houses for the summer. Mrs. Howard Gillette will soon join them there. Biddeford Pool is a favorite refuge for those of the "pretty world" who are wearied with winter's gayeties, as it is a quiet, seaside village where there is small chance for social fatigue. Early hours are the mode and just enough human companionship to keep one from being bored, while those delicious sea breezes restore the weary brain cells.

A Varied Winter.

That ... intiate traveler, Mrs. Arthur Ryer... ...ils for home next Saturday in co... ...y with her brother, Adolph Borie. She has had as varied a winter as any Chicagoite I know. The last bulletin from her came from the Montenegrin capital, Cetinje. Thence she was going to Sarajevo in Serbia, a small and utterly unknown burg until June, 1914, when the crown prince and crown princess of Austria-Hungary were assassinated in its streets, an act which started a frightful turmoil from which the world is still reeling.

Previous to this excursion Mrs. Ryerson had negotiated a trip to the Holy land. That came after a visit to Mrs. Bryan Lathrop, in the latter's beautiful abode, the historic villa Medici at Fiesole, high above Florence, Italy. That visit was a breathing spell, succeeding a long sojourn in Egypt when Mrs. Ryerson took a houseboat party up the Nile, investigating the various archeological expeditions along the shore of that most famous of world rivers.

When she has seen everything in the way of historic interest and beauty that this tiny globe of ours has to offer, heaven knows what Mrs. Ryerson will do with her winters. Her summers she delights to spend at her lovely estate on the northern shores of lovely Lake Otsego in central New York state. There she runs a golf course for the benefit of the residents thereabouts. Two of her children, Mrs. George Hyde Clarke and Mrs. Victor Salvatore, have places nearby, therefore Mrs. Ryerson can spend three months yearly watching her grandchildren grow up and wax in grace and beauty.

Mrs. Clarke's house is one of the best examples of the architecture of a century and a quarter ago. It was erected by her husband's great great grandfather in 1802. It is a stately mansion built of cream hued stone. The ceilings in the main drawing room and dining room are wonderful examples of the plasterer's art, as they have carven cornices and richly wrought center pieces that are beyond anything one sees in today's houses.

An Atmosphere of Charm.

Mrs. Salvator's house is older even than that of the Clarkes' and was erected in the final years of the eighteenth century, about 1798. It, too, is a charming creation with that ineffable air which no modern domestic architecture can achieve under a century. Those houses of today that will survive a hundred years may have it, but at the rate that we are going it is impossible to imagine that anything built today is going to live as long as that.

Abram Poole, the well known artist who is a son of Chicago, though he now lives in New York, is a summer tenant of Mrs. Ryerson's and occupies an attractive made-over stable on her place. There he has installed a studio where he enjoys the quiet of one of the few countrysides left that is out of earshot of any nearby railroad or motor crowded highway. The only thing to disturb the day's serenity is the toot of a little steamer that comes up the lake once a day from Coopers-town at the south end of the lake. It is an ideal spot for any one seeking solitude and repose.

To Return Soon.

Two of Chicago's most attractive young women, Miss Laura Thompson and Miss Sarah Brewster, who were in Paris when Lindbergh landed there at the conclusion of his historic trans-ocean flight, joined the throngs that tried to go out to Le Bourget flying field to see him land. Alas, they, like many others, were turned away by the enormous crowds that swamped traffic along all the roads leading to the landing place. Both of these young women will soon arrive in this part of the country.

Miss Thompson had the novel adventure of being a guest at a ball given by Kemal Pasha, president of Turkey, at Angora in Asia Minor. She and her mother, Mrs. Leverett Thompson, attended this event with the American legation in May. A Turkish official ball must be an effective affair. The Turks are addicted to gay costumes and even in the humblest walks of life are vividly picturesque.

The Turkish women are rapidly emerging from the oriental seclusion in which they have been kept for countless ages and are becoming a part of the world wide emancipation of their sex which marks this era in the civilization of mankind. It is modern inventions which have made possible this dispersion of enlightenment over the whole globe. The discovery of the infinite possibilities of the use of electricity has done more for the freedom of the individual than any amount of preaching, though the latter undoubtedly prepared the mental vision for what was desirable and profitable in this direction. But here I am getting didactic again. That friend on Oakwood avenue stands as a warning vision, pointing the way to avoid, though she denies me assistance in achieving the frivolous and personal note which she considers so necessary in this P. P. P.

Heigho! the way of the provider of snappy social stuff in these tranquil days is uphill and stony. S. S. S. from a P. P. P. is a T. T. T. Fit your own words to those last three initials.

NEWS OF THE CHICAGO WOMEN'S CLUBS

Club of 16 Members Tackles Big Tasks

By Kate Webber.

WITH the waning of the season's activities among the women's clubs, it is heartening to hear of the energetic work of the "baby club" of the state federation, the latest organization to take its place in the sun. It is the Columbus Woman's club, which was admitted to the I. F. W. C. at its annual convention last month.

Organized more than a year ago, for the purpose of bringing together the Italian born American women of Chicago, that they might work together in harmony with the federated clubs, in civic and charitable enterprises, this club of sixteen members is an outstanding example of what a few working as a unit can do for the welfare of many unfortunates.

Pledged $200 for Hospital.

In the recent drive for the Women's and Children's hospital, the club pledged $200, some of which already has been raised. It also has put into condition for wearing, numbers of discarded garments, and has provided Christmas baskets for the poor.

Other philanthropies include the maintenance of two patients in hospitals, also contributions to the Shelter house on West Adams street. At the recent tree planting sponsored by the Chicago and Cook County Federation of Women's organizations the club planted two trees as its contribution.

Welfare Station Started.

The members' latest venture is the establishment of an infant welfare station on West Taylor street, a district much in need of this service. These sixteen women have agreed to raise the funds necessary for the maintenance of the station, and have asked the cooperation of the federation in this project.

Mrs. Eugene Palermo, founder president of the club, stresses the importance of contructive work to be done by this particular group, especially in the education of the foreign born, in which the state federation is intensely interested.

MRS. MEYER BARR.
[Bayhuff-Richter Photo.]

One of the newest and most active among women's organizations in the city is the Jewish Woman's Republican club, which was formed under the leadership of Mrs. Meyer Barr, the president. Five hundred women already have pledged themselves to membership.

MRS. EUGENE PALERMO.
[Montfort Photo.]

Mrs. Eugene Palermo is the founder and president of the Columbus Woman's club, the newest organization to be admitted to the Illinois Federation of Woman's Clubs. An account of the attainments already recorded by the club is given in another column.

MRS. SAMUEL MEYER.
[Scott Photo.]

Mrs. Samuel Meyer is actively interested in the David M. Grodsky aid, which is maintaining a home for handicapped children this summer at Michigan City, Ind. Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Metz will give a musical at their Flossmoor residence next Sunday, the proceeds to go toward the furnishing of the home.

CLUB NOTES

The sixth annual conference of the first district, Illinois Council of Parent-Teacher associations, will be held on Thursday at the Field museum. Mrs. Joseph L. Trunck, regional director, will preside. The morning session, beginning at 10:30 o'clock will be filled with reports of council presidents and chairmen. BRIGHT SAYINGS of HUSBANDS & WIVES

Never Done?

Wifey was trying to tell hubby that she did more work than he, quoting, "Man works from sun to sun, but woman's work is never done."

Hubby answered, "I'll say it's never done." H. S.

No Warning.

She—You were just crazy to marry me!

He—So I was, and somebody should have told me. C. M.

Dry Versus Wet.

Hubby [opening the mail]—Good gosh! Another ten dollars for dry goods?

Wife—Yes, dearie. I thought it would do me more good spent on dry goods than it would do you spent on wet goods! A. I. T.

Level Head Needed.

Mrs. D. lamented to Mr. D. how inconvenient it was for her not to know how to drive their car.

"Well, you see," replied Mr. D, "it takes a level head to drive a car, and that's something you haven't got."

"If that's the case, and it was possible to borrow a level head, I would have to go outside our household to find one," retorted the angry Mrs. D. Mrs. H. D.

"Adhere" the Wrong Word.

Mrs. D.—The doctor ordered me to adhere to a strict diet."

Mr. D.—Goodness, you don't need to add to any diet—you should subtract a few articles. E. C. C.

Not Much of It.

Wife [showing new dress]—Do you like it, dear?

Husband—Well, if lack of clothes denoted poverty, you would be a logical candidate for the poorhouse. Mrs. A. J. M.

Fond of Harping.

Mrs. G. [after a heated argument]—Well, I'm no angel.

Mr. G.—No, but you're always harping on something. Mrs. T. D. G.

By Dolly Madison.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—With New York beginning to feel the delayed heat of summer, outdoor events are much in order. Greenwich, in the Connecticut suburbs, Long island, and the northern New Jersey towns are preparing for annual horse shows, flower shows, and gymkhanas. The city proper, however, will have one of its annual events on Saturday, when the garden party is held on Governor's island in aid of the army relief fund.

The broad lawns of the famous old army post will be covered with bright booths and arbors flaunting vari-colored streamers.

Sponsored by the President and Mrs. Coolidge, the patrons and patronesses include Gen. Pershing, Secretary of War and Mrs. Davis, and Gov. and Mrs. Smith. Mrs. James H. McRae is in charge. Among those who are on the various committees for the garden fête are Mrs. Walter Scott, Mrs. Archibald Campbell, Maj. William C. Rose, Mrs. Halsey E. Yates, Capt. Robert B. Field, Mrs. Alfred A. Starbird, Mrs. Richard Dupuy, Mrs. George S. Gibbs, Mrs. Henry W. Fleet, Mrs. R. J. Kennedy, and Mrs. Alfred J. Booth.

Horse Show Draws Crowd.

Another interesting event of the week was the thirty-fourth annual Westchester county horse show held on Thursday, Friday and yesterday at the Westchester Biltmore Country club at Rye.

The picturesque outdoor surroundings formed a beautiful setting for the show, which comprised more than 7,000 entries in the various classes. During the three days there were many luncheons, teas and bridges given as part of the festivities.

The women's committee, handling what many consider a harder part than that of the show arrangers, included Mrs. J. Rich Steers, Mrs. Douglas Gibbons, Mrs. Ogden Reid, Mrs. H. Edward Manville, Mrs. John McEntee Bowman, Mrs. George Greer, Mrs. George D. F. Leith, Mrs. Oliver Harriman, Mrs. Cornelius B. Agnew, Miss Mary Steers, Mrs. Percy A. Rockefeller, Mrs. John I. Downey, Estelle Manville, Mrs. Gordon Grand, Mrs. William A. Read Jr., Mrs. J. Macy Willets, Mrs. Hugh G. Chisholm, Mrs. J. W. Klapp, Mrs. W. Hamilton Busk, Mrs. Robert Law Jr., Mrs. Everett L. Crawford, and Mrs. Frederic C. Tanner.

The Vanderbilts Again.

If it isn't Willie K., it's Willie H. The Vanderbilts in all their branches seem unable to keep out of the news, these days. For many a month New York has been keeping a curious eye on the young William H. Vanderbilt. While the son of Mrs. Paul Fitz Simons has been amusing himself at Oakland farm, Newport, popularizing coaching and operating a bus line between Newport, Providence, and other New England points, his wife, the former Emily O'N. Davies, has been conspicuously to the fore in Paris night life, having, as every one avers, a perfectly glorious time.

Fashionable folk long since decided the young couple would never come together again. In 1925 they parted, only to be brought together again through the activity of Mrs. Fits Simons. Last season they were at Oakland farm together, though they made no appearances in society. Since Mrs. Vanderbilt's departure for Paris some months ago, society has been awaiting definite action on the part of either Emily or young William. Now that Mrs. Fits Simons and her son have left Newport with the announced intention of sailing shortly for Paris, every one expects a Parisian divorce will soon be forthcoming.

Trips to New York.

Young Vanderbilt, while he had made his home at Newport with his 2 year old daughter, Emily, has been a constant visitor to New York. What interests the notables is that on his trips to town he not infrequently called at the home of Dr. Henry A. Griffin, 115 East 73d street. Long before his marriage to Emily Davies, young Vanderbilt was attentive to Mary D. Strange, a daughter of Mrs. Griffin by a former marriage. Indeed, for some time friends of both expected that Mary would become Mrs. Vanderbilt. Disappointed at that time, they are now interested in the attentions of William H. to his former friend, and no one would be the least surprised if the present contemplated trip to Paris has a direct bearing upon young Vanderbilt's visits to the home of Miss Strange.

Jealousy

We're all acquainted with jealousy, the monster that smashes love affairs, wrecks homes, causes business quarrels, and generally plays havoc with us mortals. We'd like to know your most notable experience with a jealous person or persons. If you have encountered a situation where jealousy led to a tragic or ridiculous climax, tell us about it. The Tribune will pay $1 for every story published. Address Jealous Editor, Chicago Tribune.

Losing Two Friends.

I fell in love with a boy I had gone with several months. We grew to be great friends.

While at a show one night I met my girl chum. I introduced her to my friend. They seemed to take a great liking to each other, which made me angry, for I was very jealous.

My chum lived across the street from me, and the next night I saw my friend enter my chum's house. I watched to see how long he would stay. In about an hour's time it began to rain and I saw him leave.

The next day I went over to my chum's house and told her what I thought of her.

My friend came that night and I talked ridiculously to him. He never came again. I lost my chum's friendship, too. P. J.

Because of a Dream.

Because she dreamed that her husband had paid affectionate attention to her chum, a friend of mine broke off what had been a life long friendship with the innocent woman!

She even talked it over with her friend, and admitted there was no foundation for her jealousy, but she couldn't get over the effects of the dream, so they are no longer friends. H. B. B.

ART AND ARTISTS

Prize Entries Seen in School's Exhibit

This is my son! I lost him for a while,
But now my son is found. Rejoice with me!
Down the long echoing galleries of the years
Runs my glad shout—my tears fell silently.

When he was lost I bowed my head in grief,
Forgot the man he was and dreamed the child,
Whom I had made, begotten in my image,
Had wandered innocent, perhaps, turned wild.

He mother laid him, little in my arms—
Why should I not rejoice that he is found?
My son, my son! The prodigal, you say?
The path he walked to me is holy ground.

E. J.

By Eleanor Jewett.

EACH year the more advanced students in the Art Institute school are given a subject to work with for the prize of a traveling scholarship, and this year the subject was "The Prodigal Son." Two students in the modeling department and three in the painting classes were awarded prizes. The prize sculpture and paintings are found in the school exhibit, which hangs in the east wing galleries of the Art institute, an exhibit which opened last Monday.

The exhibition this year is particularly good. There are posters and illustrations; still life and studies from life; charcoal and color; prints and etchings. In each division of the work wise discrimination was shown and only the best of its kind is included in the show. The students are to be congratulated on their achievement. The exhibit will continue through June 20, so more about it later.

Three Others Open.

The remarkable members' exhibit of paintings has closed at the Chicago galleries [by the way, some one wanted the address of these galleries and, as other people might also want it, let me mention it: 220 North Michigan avenue] and it has been replaced by an exhibition of the recent paintings by Tom Barnett of St. Louis and those by Edgar Payne of California. The exhibit opened on Friday and will close July 1.

Starting last Tuesday and to continue until July 7, an exhibit of recent paintings by Arthur Rider may be seen at the Palette and Chisel club. The paintings are those executed by Mr. Rider on a recent trip to Spain and Central America, and there are a few water colors as well as the oils. The paintings are brilliant. A hot sun splashes down on trees and water and flowered walls. The exhibit deserves a longer story, which may be possible next week. Mr. Rider is one of our brilliant colorists and a solid technician.

The list—the really surprising list—of new exhibits at a time of the year when one might confidently expect that nothing new would come to startle us from the exquisite peace engendered by these first June days, is almost ended. A Russian artist claims the last word. Maj. Gen. Gotoftzeff says of him:

"Serge A. Popoff was formerly a captain of the imperial guard, and during the world war was awarded the highest honor, the St. George Cross. He suffered eleven wounds and fought bravely in the allied armies. He will become a United States citizen the end of this year."

An exhibition of Popoff's paintings opened last Monday at the Russian art shop, Lakeview building, on Michigan avenue. The pictures are quite fascinating. They have the interest that seems to flower so easily in things Slav. Lest we forget, Serge Popoff's murals for the Russian Orthodox churches throughout the west and Alaska have met with appreciation. He was a student of the noted Russian artist Nicholas Remisoff, art director of the "Chauve Souris," and he is also a graduate of the Chicago Art institute.

The end of next week he is leaving for California, where he is planning to spend a year in landscape painting, and, besides, the lure of Hollywood being eloquent, he has several commissions to portray the mobile features of Russian movie actors. A month ago he painted Charles de Roche, a French movie actor, often, they say, called Valentino the Second.

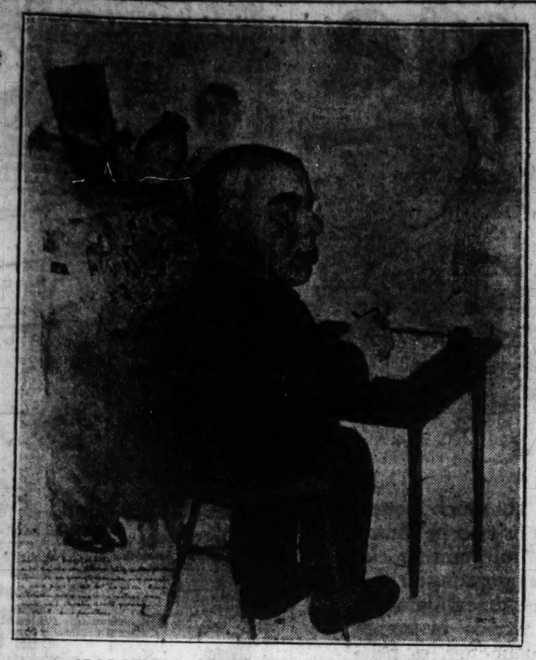
Manoir Comes Home.

With artists leaving Chicago it is just as well to hear about some who are returning. Irving K. Manoir, a former instructor in the Art institute school and a painter who last summer had a delightful one man show at the Art institute, has just returned to town from Cuba. Florida and Cuba have shared honors in housing the artist for the last several months, both playgrounds having given him occasion for a number of gorgeous paintings. Mr. Manoir, as do many artists, designs his own frames, and when these are finished to his satisfaction he intends to give an exhibit of his work.



"CARICATURE OF JOSEPH HERGESHEIMER," by William Cotton, in which the sister arts are drawn close together in a risible, farcical manner, sufficiently suggestive of Edward Lear to make any comment on it swing into his jingle rhythm. The clever take-offs by Mr. Cotton were among the best of the offerings in the International Water Color exhibition recently concluded at the Art institute.

During the last few days of the international water color show at the Art institute several pictures were sold. These were "Cliff Dwellers" and "Dieppe," by W. J. Aylward; "Corner of St. Sulpice," by William Walcott; "The Well House," by W. Emerton Heitland; "Caricature of Jones, MacGowan and O'Neill," by William H. Cotton; "Flower Merchants," by Lucille Kaltenbach; "Near Brabaggio" and "Green Door, Morocco," by John Whorf; "Luxembourg Gardens," by Martha Walter; "Avalon, No. 1," by Julius Delbos; "Sea Gulls," by Raoul Frank; "New England," by Irma Rene Kean; "Wangura Water Carriers" and "Wangura House," by Stephen Hawels.

A collection of the work done by members of the American Institute of Graphic Arts is now on exhibition in the school exhibition gallery, on the ground floor of the Art institute, where it may be discovered for some days more, though it was supposed to close June 11. More than one hundred Chicago organizations are represented in the exhibition. Five awards were made for excellence of exhibits, the jury being composed of Ernest Detterer of the Art institute; Oswald Cooper, designer of "Cooper Black" type, and Douglas C. McMurtrie.

Medal for Architect.

From June 25 to August 1 the Chicago Architectural league will hold its annual exhibition at the Art institute, occupying the east wing galleries. The Chicago chapter of the American Institute of Architects will present a gold medal of honor to the designer who submits the most meritorious work. Only those architects are eligible who live or have offices in the state of Illinois, and no designer may receive the medal more than once. The officers of the league are: Rudolph J. Nedved, president; Harry V. Wheelock, first vice president; Leon E. Stanhope, second vice president; George M. Nedved, secretary; Hubert Burnham, treasurer; Margaret S. Jones, corresponding secretary. The jury is composed of C. Herrick Hammond, Harry H. Bentley, Albert H. Krehbiel, Sylvia Shaw Judson, and the chairman, Alfred Granger.

Leaving for Summer.

With the closing of the school of the Art institute on June 17 many of the instructors will leave for their summer painting grounds. George Oberteuffer will conduct a class at Gloucester, Mass. Albin Polasek will spend the summer abroad, where he has, in Moravia, a number of commissions to complete.

F. De Forrest Schook will be again in his studio at Bailey's Harbor, Wis.; Elmer A. Forsberg is planning a trip to northern Michigan; Miss Matilda Vanderpoel will go to Bluebird cottage, at Boulder, Colo., and paint from their lodge in the mountains; Miss Laura van Pappelendam will again make Santa Fé her western headquarters; Miss Ruth Hutchins will teach in the Berkshire summer school of which Raymond P. Ensign is the head.

Miss Ethel L. Coe will visit Paris and Miss Helen Parker of the museum instruction department, will spend her vacation in France; Miss Mary C. Scovel, head of the teacher training department, will go to Boothbay Harbor, Me.; Mrs. Myrtle French of the modeling department will teach in the summer school at Alfred, N. Y.; Ernest Detterer of the Printing Arts department will go east about the middle of August, while Mr. Phipps, of the lettering department, is planning on spending a honeymoon vacation in Europe with his bride. Miss Helen Gardner of the Art Survey department will teach a summer class in Los Angeles. Salcia Bahne of the design classes will go to New York to prepare for an exhibition of her work.

Notes of Arts and Artists.

An exhibition of paintings, etchings and drawings held under the auspices of the Illinois Academy of Fine Arts opened last Sunday at Rock Island, and will run through June 26.

A painting by Paul Gauguin has been added to the Helen Birch-Bartlett Memorial collection in the Art institute, the gift of Frederic Clay Bartlett. "Tahiti Woman with Children," it is called. Gauguin died in 1903 and the canvas was executed two years earlier, making it one of the last paintings by this mad painter. Mr. Bartlett bought it in Europe.

Paris Quiets Down After 'Comet' Goes

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1927: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS.—[Special.]—Capt. Charles A. Lindbergh's departure last week gave the social activities of the American colony in Paris a chance to recover their normal stride. Like an apparition, the brilliant comet threw all the other twinkling planets for a moment into the shade. The adulation Capt. Lindbergh received would have turned a less well balanced head, but his was placed squarely on his shoulders. With his aplomb goes a quick mother wit, which makes him at home with concierges or crowned heads.

One reply was worthy of a practiced statesman. When asked what the prince of Wales had said to him "Lindy" replied: "You know how it is about these conversations with royalty—they can't be repeated."

Like a shrewd report attributed both to Lincoln and Disraeli when questioned on their religion, he said: "My religion is that of all sensible people."

"And, pray, what is that?"

"Sensible people never tell."

A Signal for Departure.

Whitsuntide, or the Pentecost holidays, coming seven weeks after Easter, mean three days, including Whitsun Monday. This period, a relic of the ancient church festival, although little observed in America, is celebrated generally in England and on the continent. It is the signal for the scattering of fashionables to the seaside and cure resorts.

This season Deauville, the smartest watering place in the country of William the Conqueror, attracted many who seek recuperation from the swift round of balls, art expositions, and sporting events in the capitals. Many from Chicago who have not seen the Casino at Deauville since last year will be impressed with the change there. M. Andre, on whom the mantle of Deauville's creator has fallen and himself the markedly successful director of the Casino at Cannes, has imported Riviera specialties to the Ambassadeurs restaurant on the Normandy coast, which he has transformed.

The Palmers at Deauville.

Among the many Americans who spent this Pentecost holiday at Deauville are Mr. and Mrs. Honoré Palmer, who, though planning a stable there, preferred the pre-season tranquillity of the seashore to the great excitement of the opening of the racing season at Chantilly.

Many Chicago people, however, are seen in the crowd which took in the Chantilly races, where a number of American owned horses entered the Prix de Diane, known otherwise as the French Oaks. Mrs. Marshall Field's mother, Mrs. Charles Marshall, just over from London, was seen in the brilliant Jockey club crowd, which also included Marshal Petain and leading notabilities of the French social world. Also there were Charles Greene, just arrived from Chicago, Mrs. John May, Mrs. Harry Shearson, and Mr. and Mrs. Van Doren Wright.

Interested in Music.

Many Chicagoans more or less prominently resident in Paris are deeply interested in music, either as amateurs or as patrons. A group of Chicago women follow with promise Miss Marion McAfee, whom they are supporting while she puts the finishing touches to her voice under the tuition of Georges Cunelli. After great progress in Paris during the winter, Miss McAfee will continue at the summer school at Chamonix.

Mary Garden, with striking success in the Opera Comique, shows herself an ardent devotee of tennis, often appearing in the gallery at St. Cloud, where her tiger skin coat and red velvet hat make her a picturesque figure.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert R. Ross left for the mineral water cure at Divonne les Bains.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Revell, now in England for the golf tourney, are expected in Paris in a few days.

Notes Artistic

The American Academy of Art, 306 South Wabash avenue, announces its annual exhibition of the work of its students from June 6 to July 6. About this exhibit, too, more later.

A group of etchings by D. Y. Cameron and a series of William McBey, chosen from the Buckingham collection, were installed in galleries 17 and in the print department at the Art Institute yesterday, to be shown there until Sept. 1.

ENGAGED

MISS MINA EVELYN OAKES.
[Sykes Photo.]

Mr. and Mrs. V. P. Oakes of 3514 West Ohio street announce the engagement of their daughter, Mina Evelyn, to Emanuel Fivek, son of Mr. and Mrs. K. Fivek of Cicero.

MY GREATEST THRILL

Write and tell us about the greatest thrill you ever experienced, and if we print your letter we'll pay you $1. Make your letters short and snappy. Address them to "Greatest Thrill" Editor, The Chicago Tribune.

Almost a Tragedy.

I endured my greatest thrill during a brief stay at Killarney lakes. While we were on our trip it rained every day. One day the rain stopped for a while, so we decided to go into town for some provisions. On the road to town we had to pass over a narrow one way bridge. Just as we were about a quarter of the way across, a recklessly driven car careened down the hill onto the bridge. The bridge was too narrow for two cars to pass at the same time. So with an effort, my father swerved the car over to the edge and the road hog in the other car did the same.

There was a splintering of wood and glass as our car broke the frail rail of the bridge. The road hog got by without a scar. But one front wheel of our machine slipped over the edge of the bridge and we had to hire a farmer and his team to pull us onto the road again. E. McL.

Unable to Let Go.

My greatest thrill came through a small charger used for the radio battery. It was connected by means of the table lamp to the battery.

Without turning the current off I attached the clamps to the battery, then caught hold of the charger by the plates. My hand stuck fast and I could not let go. I screamed and danced around until finally the radio box was pulled off the stand and the lamp from the table, which pulled the cord from the lamp, and in this way the current cut off. I dropped the charger in a hurry. E. H.

Out Fell a Scorpion.

It was while serving in the West Indies. The washwomen down there starched our trousers heavily so as to retain the crease, and when we donned them we would stand on our locker boxes and shake them out before putting them on.

I had lent a fellow a pair of trousers, and after they had been washed he returned them to me.

However, imagine my feelings when I shook them out, to see a large scorpion drop to the floor!

My thrill was not fully realized until the doctor told me the scorpions on that island were deadly poisonous.

Strange Weddings

Have you ever seen a wedding so outlandish that it upset all your ideas of the traditional ceremony? Some marriages are foreign and quaint in their adherence to ancient customs; others are ultra modern in their haphazard speed and unconventionality. The Tribune would like to know the story of the strangest wedding you've ever seen. We will pay $1 for every letter published. Address Strange Weddings, Chicago Tribune.

In a Cemetery.

This is the story of one of the strangest weddings I ever heard about. The groom was an undertaker, whose father had been an undertaker, also. The wedding took place at midnight in the cemetery before his father's grave.

When asked why he was married in this way, the groom replied, "Well, I have been to the cemetery so often on sad occasions that I felt I would like to come here just once for some happy event." I. S. M.

More Like a Funeral.

I think the strangest wedding I ever attended was where the bride and groom both of wealthy parents, were married at the home of the bride and the bride's mother, being the daughter of a minister, would not allow any singing. There was no music and not much conversing. All the guests sat with folded hands.

When the preacher announced them man and wife the bride's mother cried so hard that she caused the bride, to weep, too. When the bride wept most of the tender hearted guests shed tears, which made it look more like a funeral than a wedding. F. E. S.

A Surprise.

The strangest wedding I ever attended was one performed when I was about 13.

It had rained hard and water was standing in a vacant lot next to my home, so two girl chums and myself thought it would be great sport to don old gingham dresses and go wading.

We noticed one of the young men of the neighborhood came out of his home with his girl friend and get in his buggy. We jokingly asked if we could go along. He told us to jump in, so we did.

Much to our amazement, to say nothing of embarrassment, considering our personal appearance, he drove right into the main part of the town and stopped at the city hall.

He told us to get out and come along with him. We followed him into the presence of the mayor and several policemen who, with ourselves, acted as witnesses to this strange wedding. E. P.

Out for Money.

The strangest wedding I have ever attended was in Europe. The groom wore a green hunter's hat with a red feather and a red tie. He had his shoes soled with strong leather so when he kneeled at the altar the leather began to crack and squeak.

When the wedding was over the collection box was passed. The best man and witness each dropped in about two dollars and fifty cents. The collector then hesitated before the groom, thinking he might add to the box, but instead the groom put his hand in, took the money out and said, "If you don't think this is enough, I can use it."

I wish you could have seen his bride and relatives blush. C. J.

A Cold Affair.

We were country folk and by our country minister we wished to be married. February in northern Wisconsin is usually a cold month, and the day of our marriage was none the less cold than usual. But it would have taken more than cold weather to keep us away from that minister's country home.

When we arrived, we found the minister and his wife shivering with cold because the stove, which the parish provided, had decided it had served too many years already, and had cracked, causing more smoke to escape in the room than went up the chimney. To keep from suffocating, they let the fire die down, and were shiveringly trying to prepare a small meal.

Their one salvation, and ours, too, was a stove in the wash house, fifty yards or so back of the house. Half an hour before we arrived the minister had started a fire there and intended to stay there until the stove in the house could be fixed.

So we were married in that wash house—warm, to be sure, but extremely conscious of our unusual surroundings. P. W. E.

Yellowstone
A Carefree Vacation

Burlington "Tour H" through Yellowstone National Park is a remarkable vacation trip. It takes only 9 days. $163.78 covers all expenses. The tour includes a scenic railroad journey, and 4½ days motoring through the Wonderland of the World. "Tour H" leaves Chicago Union Station every Monday evening, June 20 to August 22.

It's a thrilling, adventurous trip from Chicago to Yellowstone! The Burlington Route follows the scenic Mississippi to the Twin Cities. Then on the Northern Pacific you pick up the historic trail of Lewis and Clark—through Minnesota, Land of 10,000 Lakes—past the golden wheat fields, ranches, weird Bad Lands of Dakota—to the ranching and cowboyland of Montana and the Shining Rocky Mountains!

Railroad sightseeing cars from Livingston to the rugged, picturesque Gardiner Gateway of the Park. By going in Gardiner and out the Cody Road, you see the spectacles of Yellowstone in dramatic order—Nature's climax comes where it should!

Mammoth Hot Springs first—terraces curiously carved. Old Faithful—hot pools—mud volcanoes—more geysers than in all the rest of the world together! Old Faithful Geyser shoots a million and a half gallons of water into the air every hour! Yellowstone Lake next—a sapphire lake 7800 feet above sea level.

Climax of beauty—the Grand Canyon of the Yellowstone, painted in rainbow colors! Walks along the rim and to the foot of the falls. Last, the Cody Road! Ninety miles of thrills—through the Buffalo Bill country to Cody—and your train East.

"Tour H" offers you a carefree, well-planned vacation—and memories to last a lifetime. You pay all expenses in one lump sum and an experienced travel guide makes all arrangements. We'll be glad to send you an illustrated book about Yellowstone and to help you plan your vacation trip if you will mail the Coupon.

CITY'S MASONS PLAN RESORT IN NORTHLAND

Knights Templar Get Big Tract.

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.

(Picture on page 3.)

It's a rare week when a big outdoors development isn't announced for some division of Chicago's indoors inhabitants and the past seven days are seeing this record maintained. The news this week is of interest to Knights Templars and concerns a holding of some 6,000 acres in northern Wisconsin which are to be used for club purposes and as sites for the vacation homes of members.

This property is located near Summit, about forty-six miles north of Antigo, and contains about thirty lakes.

A syndicate comprising a number of knights has secured control of the property and has formed the Knights Templar estate, which will proceed with development. It is said the investment will be about $1,000,000.

A Large Clubhouse.

Paul Frederick Olsen has designed a central clubhouse of English architecture, work on which, it is stated, will start next spring. This clubhouse is to be located on a hill overlooking one of the larger lakes and will contain about 100 guest rooms. Further, this structure will have a lounge, with a huge open fireplace at one end, card rooms, a billiard room and an attractive dining hall. Some of the guest rooms will be in suites.

In proximity to the clubhouse will be fifty cottages of three and four rooms, including sleeping porches, which will be rented. All the cottages will be furnished and will have electric light and running water.

Members erecting their own homes may do so on any site they choose, though present plans call for grouping according to commanderies.

An interesting feature will be a boys' camp where sons of members or youngsters recommended by knights may spend the summer months under the supervision of woodsmen. Two barracks are to be erected for the use of the boys.

A Fish Hatchery.

It is said that most of the lakes on the property have not yet been fished, and are now filled with bass, pike, blue gills, and other denizens of the water. The club is to maintain its own fish hatchery, so the lakes will be kept well stocked.

Some of the lakes will be set aside as bird preserves, to improve the fall shooting. Others will be reserved to provide a place for the propagation of fur bearing animals such as minks and muskrats. The furs will be sold to help cut down the expenses of running the club.

Helping to swell the list of Bear lakes, Duck lakes, and the like, now scattered about the northern woods, this club will also have bodies of water bearing these designations. There'll be a little bit of variety, however, in Dynamite lake, which is said to have received its name because of a rumbling sound that rolls across it late in the afternoon.

Open Year Around.

It is proposed to keep the club open the year around. The summer months, of course, will find plenty of entertainment for the members, including the pastime of swatting mosquitoes and the subsequent scratching when a miss is recorded. In the winter there'll be an array of hunting, skating, skiing, sledding, story swapping, and the like from which to choose.

The Chicago office of the club is located at 123 West Madison street.

CHICAGO CITY PLANNER GIVEN NATIONAL HONOR

Jacob L. Crane Jr., engineer, town planner and landscape architect of Chicago, has been elected to the board of governors of the American City Planning institute. This action was taken at a recent meeting of that body held in Washington, D. C. The board of governors consists of five outstanding city planners selected from various parts of the country. Mr. Crane has been identified with the zoning and city planning of a number of Chicago suburbs and other cities throughout the country.

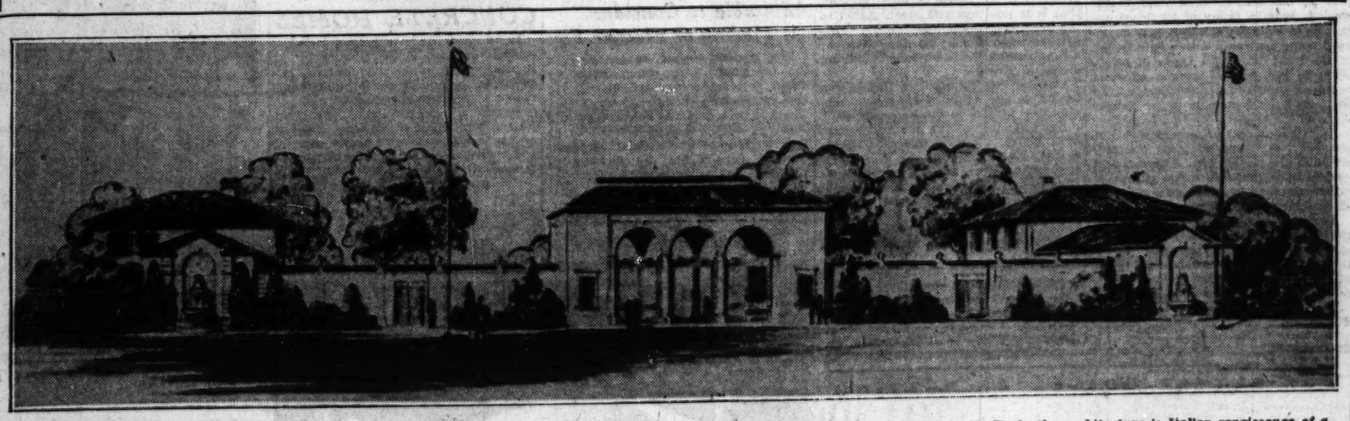
ENTRANCE TO ZOOLOGICAL GARDENS



Here is how the entrance to the new zoölogical gardens will look when completed in the not distant future. Designed by Edwin H. Clark, the architecture is Italian renaissance of a simple country type. One of the buildings will be used for administrative purposes and the other as a comfort and rest station.

ANIMALS IN FUNK AS WORK ON NEW ZOO ADVANCES

Work Starts Soon on 3 Buildings.

Wild animals, snakes, birds and insects all over the world are reported to be in a blue funk following receipt of news spread about by the ubiquitous English sparrow that work is advancing apace on Chicago's new zoölogical gardens, west of Riverside.

It seems that contracts are to be let this week for the construction of a reptile house, a group of buildings for the entrance and the power house, so before the animals know it it will have been too late for them to form an allied army to resist the trappers, snake charmers and professors with nets sent out to bring them in.

It's not supposed that the animals will be interested in knowing about the architectural side of the buildings that will be found in the zoo. But doubtless most Chicagoans are, so we'll proceed to give a few details, beginning with the entrance group. Edwin H. Clark is the architect.

First it may be well to say that all the buildings in the park will be of one design—that is an Italian renaissance architecture of a simple country type. This style was adopted to harmonize with the rustic surroundings. All walls will be of white plaster, with red tile roofs adding a splash of color. Ornamentation will be provided through stone trim, with the simple lines broken somewhat by columns and the like.

In the center of the entrance group will be the main gateway for pedestrians. It will consist of three arches which may be closed by pairs of ornamental wrought iron gates. Here will be found the ticket booths, check room and the like.

To the west will be the administration building containing all the park offices. To the east will be a structure containing comfort rooms for men and women, rest rooms and quarters for the park police. These buildings will be joined to the entry by a monumental wall along which will be a covered passageway. This passage will have benches and will serve as a meeting place and as a shelter during inclement weather. The exit turnstiles are in this wall.

Coming to the snake house, there will be a number of cages on the interior for the smaller reptiles. All the cages will have glass fronts before which visitors may shiver and shudder to their hearts' content. There'll be three large cages for pythons, anacondas and other denizens of the giant's D. T.'s. Then there'll be a pool for alligators and quarters for turtles, large and small.

Just outside the reptile house will be provision for movable cages.

The power house will contain the conventional array of boilers, switchboards and the like, as may be seen at any water works station, so we'll close without giving details of it.

FOR SOUTH SHORE METHODISTS

Rowe, Dillard & Rowe designed the above edifice which is to house the merged congregations of the Parkside and South Shore Methodist Episcopal churches. It's to be erected at the northwest corner of Jeffery and 74th street.

Sheppley Gets $125,000 for 16 Flats at 820 Galt

J. B. Northcott paid a reported $125,000 for the sixteen apartment building at 820 Galt avenue, lot 50x125 feet. George Sheppley was seller.

REALTY BOARD TO CHECK UP ON ZONE MEDDLING

Warns Against Too Many Changes.

Fearing that the number of proposed changes and amendments to the present Chicago zoning ordinance has dangerous possibilities for the law itself, President John P. Hooker of the Chicago Real Estate board, has appointed a zoning committee, headed by Clifton R. Bechtel, to make a survey of the situation. Henry T. Carr and John W. Arthur are also on the committee.

CLIFTON R. BECHTEL. [Wallinger Photo.]

"It has come to our attention," said President Hooker, "that numerous attempts are being made to change the present zoning ordinance as applicable to certain districts. The Chicago Real Estate board was largely instrumental in securing for Chicago and its suburbs the necessary enabling legislation so that zoning could be a fact.

The board believes that the zoning ordinance should possess a certain amount of elasticity in order to keep pace with the progress of the city, but that no changes should be made unless fully justified and unless property owners are fully advised of the contemplated changes. No changes should be made for light or trivial causes or for the purpose of promoting private or selfish gain."

City Suburbs Maintain Hot Building Pace

Although showing a slight drop from May 1926, building construction figures for Chicago's suburbs for the same month of this year reached the impressive sum of approximately $10,000,000 according to a survey made by S. W. Straus & Co. This figure is based on building permits filed in twenty-one of the principal suburbs.

The actual figure was $9,687,121 for last month, a loss of only five per cent against the building volume in the same suburbs last year. If the Chicago total for May were added the volume in the Chicago area, based on the suburbs reporting, would be $37,493,621 or a loss of 8 per cent as against last year.

Berwyn, Blue Island, Evanston, Glencoe, Highland Park, La Grange, Lake Forest, Waukegan and Wilmette were the suburbs showing gains in May, 1927, over May, 1926. The suburbs showing gains in May over April this year included Berwyn, Blue Island, Cicero, Highland Park, Lake Forest, La Grange and Waukegan.

Evanston Eclipses All.

For the first five months of 1927 Evanston eclipsed all other suburbs in the volume of building, making a total for the period amounting to $8,941,250, as against $6,883,670 for the first five months of 1926. Evanston's record for the first five months this year was the largest for any in the same period in the last five years.

Gary with a five months' total this year of $6,425,668 fell behind its own five months' record of last year of $7,948,048. Gary's record this year, however, was practically twice its first five months' record for 1924 and more than three times its first five months' record in 1923. It is notable in the case of Gary, however, that the larger industrial building in that city is not included in permits filed with the building commissioner. Gary has, with comparative frequency, placed in the list of twenty-five leading cities of the United States in point of building volume, and were the larger industrial plants included in the steel city's building volume Gary would undoubtedly have placed much higher in this honor list of cities in previous months.

Slump Reaches Suburbs.

According to the Straus report the building slump current all over the country has reached the suburbs, although in the May to May comparison Evanston made gains of 20 per cent, Highland Park, 24 per cent; La Grange, 50 per cent; Waukegan, 224 per cent; Wilmette, 27 per cent; Lake Forest, 339 per cent, and Blue Island, 34 per cent. The general tendency was for building to be less in May this year than last, considering the suburbs as a whole.

May, 1927, as against May, 1926, showed losses in the following suburbs: Aurora, Chicago Heights, Cicero, Des Plaines, Glen Ellyn, Joliet, Maywood, Oak Park, Wilmette, Gary, Hammond and East Chicago.

The May comparison in volume was as follows:

	May, 1927.	May, 1926.
Aurora	$ 284,600	$ 501,219
Berwyn	750,400	746,700
Blue Island	163,465	121,400
Chicago	27,806,500	30,700,700
Chicago Heights	88,650	169,450
Cicero	646,963	801,400
Des Plaines	90,600	96,800
Evanston	2,049,850	1,701,850
Glencoe	272,000	263,950
Glen Ellyn	83,750	185,000
Highland Park	309,815	248,167
Joliet	172,350	186,427
La Grange	99,000	66,000
Lake Forest	178,144	40,500
Maywood	223,950	285,310
Oak Park	489,814	945,900
Park Ridge	550,000	.....
Waukegan	1,567,680	482,925
Wilmette	152,650	135,000
Winnetka	166,850	139,925
Gary, Ind.	1,004,261	2,287,450
Hammond, Ind.	499,325	537,500
E. Chicag, Ind.	357,916	513,975

The first five months' comparison for several of the principal suburbs was as follows:

	First 5 Mo., 1927.	First 5 Mo., 1926.
Aurora	$ 1,160,975	$ 1,745,813
Chicago	174,991,200	149,600,550
Cicero	2,115,300	2,200,500
Evanston	8,941,250	2,200,500
Oak Park	2,491,975	2,716,765
Gary, Ind.	6,425,668	7,948,048
Hammond, Indiana	2,217,350	2,948,950

Considering the high pace set last year, this year's building record seems all the more remarkable.

WISCONSIN MAN PURCHASES FROG LEGS BUILDING

Frog legs are to have a building in Chicago all of their own. It seems Erwin G. Hoffman of Oshkosh, Wis., has purchased the two story building at 625 West Randolph street, lot 20x75, from A. W. and Emily Roche, and will use it for the wholesaling of the jumping instruments of our husky throated friends. Albert H. Wetten & Co. represented all parties in the transaction.

NEW APARTMENT FOR HALSTED AND WAVELAND SITE

Frank C. Heenan and James McCarthy conveyed title to the property, 205 by 135 feet, at the southern corner of Halsted and Waveland, to the Sheridan Trust and Savings bank as trustee. They propose to tear down the old improvements on the site and erect an apartment building, the exact type of which will be decided later. Isaac K. Goodman was attorney in the deal.

Roofing Contractor Buys Park Ridge Acre Tract

Robert Meyer, Chicago roofing contractor, has purchased thirty-nine acres at Peterson and Cumberland avenues, Park Ridge, from Arthur G. Duval, through Grasser & Gilbertson, Edison Park brokers.

WILL GO UP AT JEFFERY AVE. AND 74TH ST.

Bishop Hughes Will Christen It.

BY AL CHASE.

[Real Estate Editor.]

With the merger of the South Shore Methodist Episcopal church, now at 77th and Coles, and the Parkside Methodist Episcopal church, at 72d and Cornell, just announced, the south shore district is to have both a new religious body and a modern church edifice. The latter is to be erected at the northwest corner of Jeffery avenue and East 74th street from plans by Rowe, Dillard & Rowe. It will cost in the neighborhood of $165,000.

Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes yesterday christened the new organization St. John's Methodist Episcopal church.

First Unit Ready Nov. 1.

Plans have been accepted and bids are now being received. They will be opened this week and work is scheduled to start not later than July 1. The hope is to have the unit containing the Sunday school and social activities ready for use by Nov. 1.

The new church will be designed in a modified English Gothic and will be of dark tapestry brick, with stone trim. It will have a tower. The roof will be of random slate. The main auditorium will seat 400, with 200 more seats available in the adjoining chapel and in the balcony.

The interior walls of the church auditorium will be of plaster with exposed wood trusses. The interior will be of stone.

Will Have Community Hall.

The Sunday school wing of the building will contain a 40x70 community hall in addition to provision for departmental Sunday school activities.

The Rev. J. W. George is pastor of the Parkside Methodist Episcopal church, which holds services in its edifice at 72d street and Cornell avenue. This building, it is understood, is to be sold.

The pastor of the South Shore Methodist Episcopal church is the Rev. W. J. Hyde. This congregation has sold its edifice at 77th street and Coles avenue. The church is to be wrecked and an apartment building erected.

Abandon 1926 Plans.

The merging of the Parkside and the South Shore Methodist churches means the abandonment of the plans announced in April, 1926, for a new edifice at the southwest corner of Colfax avenue and East 77th street. It was announced at that time that a church and community center was to be erected.

The site of the new church fronts 125 feet on Jeffery avenue with a frontage on East 74th street of 112 feet. The property is now vacant.

INN TO REPLACE OLD RESIDENCE ON BUCKINGHAM

A four story and English basement kitchenette apartment hotel is to be erected at 715-20 Buckingham place by Fred and Louis Krupp on the site of the W. E. Spangenberg homestead. The Krupps purchased the 48x133 site for a reported $18,500. The ten room residence occupied by the Spangenberg family for the last twenty-five years will be razed immediately. There will be forty-two one room units in the new building. F. W. Boston of E. R. Hastings & Co., represented all parties as broker in the deal.

MATHER TOWER TO HAVE FRESH AIR SYSTEM

According to Baird & Warner, who have just been appointed renting agents of the needlelike Mather tower, now nearing completion on Wacker drive, between Wabash and Michigan, this structure is to have an innovation in the shape of a ventilating system for all offices. As 99 per cent of city offices never have an open window between September and June, this ought to be a bit of cheer for the prospective Mather tower tenants.

NEW SUBURB TO DEDICATE SITE OF VILLAGE HALL

Mayors and presidents of north shore communities from Evanston north to Waukegan have been invited to attend the official ceremonies which will usher Northfield into civic existence next Saturday. Dedication of the site of the village hall will be one of the features of the celebration to be held at the new Skokie valley community.

A frankly informal house is presented for consideration today. Its English spirit has been carried out in walls of cinder block and buff colored stucco, with a roof of harmonizing green brown and purple asbestos shingles. And the cost is moderate.

LOUISE BARGELT.
[Chambers Photo.]

This is a design which was submitted to THE TRIBUNE Homes Competition and the architect is Dorothy Eggert of 1717 North Fayette street, Saginaw, W. S., Michigan.

Asbestos roof shingles, as specified here, are an extremely good roof investment. They have a long life, and are more than fire resistant or fire safe. They are fireproof. Yet their cost is not much more than the home owner would pay for an ordinary shingle roof.

Cinder concrete blocks also are fire resistive, and because of their cellular cork like structure they possess a high degree of insulation.

Beginning with the basement, which is assuming greater importance in the mind of the practical home owner, it can be seen that this one has been amply provisioned with windows. The basement is no longer a dim, dusty place, and the more daylight that can flood it, the better.

Favoring Copper Windows.

Copper steel windows, which are rust resistant, set in the foundation are a wise investment. They afford the maximum of light. Another modern basement innovation is the use of steel pipes filled with concrete instead of the former piers of heavy brick which supported the cellar's main girders. These also contribute to making a basement seem less crowded and less dark, and at the same time they are stronger than the brick piers.

The cellar is waterproofed throughout. This is one of the best investments a home builder can make. It does not cost more than 1 per cent, or little more, of the total cost of a house to waterproof the cellar walls.

Here the basement is solid reinforced monolithic; this means it is poured all at once so that it may set in one piece like a solid concrete box. It might also be of brick and lime mortar, as most cellars once were, or of cement blocks. If the latter are used they should be purchased from a reliable manufacturer.

Every home owner should insist on having his cellar waterproofed, and he should also see that this is written into the specifications. Any owner will find it especially vital if he wishes to obtain a loan from a bank or any finance company to help him pay for his house.

Two Types of Waterproofing.

Generally speaking, there are two kinds of waterproofing, membrane and integral. Look into both these kinds. The location and position of the lot, the water pressure in the neighborhood and other considerations determine to an extent what kind of cellar waterproofing you should have. Discuss this matter with your contractor.

In this plan the basement arrangement is good. The laundry occupies the front, with an outside window. The fruit cellar is completely walled off from the coal bin and the boiler room. One mistake some people make is to build a coal bin too small. It should be large enough to store the coal for the entire winter season. In this way the home owner can save money buying coal in generous quantities and in off season, and also keep himself from being at the mercy of coal strikers.

The entrance to the house is reached by a terrace of slate or brick. The hall is generously lighted by two windows while the dining room, a spacious, square room whose shape adjusts itself excellently to dining purposes and treatment, occupies the front.

The kitchen beyond is light, airy and compactly arranged. Always, it may be said, the planning of the kitchen is a study in itself. There is vastly more to it than mere cubic content. If properly arranged a small kitchen is much easier to work in than one twice its size.

Always Some "Ifs."

But there is always that "if" to take into consideration. In a large kitchen, poorly arranged, one at least has space to move around in, but in the small kitchen with bad interior arrangement, it is nothing more than a cluttered closet with irritations galore swarming about one every hour that it spent there.

Highly efficient in equipment and layout is the kitchen shown here. The refrigeration is in the outside entry. Cupboards are adjacent to the sink and there are two small closets for brooms, dusters, and kitchen paraphernalia. It opens onto a porch at the back, which, like the living room, overlooks a garden.

The woodwork suggested for the first and second floor is a white wood, such as gum or pine. On the first floor the trim should be stained, and on the second floor, painted or enameled.

The flooring on the first and second floor is to be of white oak, with the exception of the kitchen and the bathroom. The kitchen is to be covered with linoleum, the bath to have tile floor with four to six inch tile base.

Spacious Master Bedroom.

The master bedroom is spacious, with large storage space lighted by a window extending beyond one of its two closets. There is also a linen closet in the hall.

One could build this house along the general lines indicated in this article for 48 cents to 50 cents a cubic foot in Chicago territory. This would bring its cost between $10,000 and $11,000.

This five room home can be built on a 30 foot lot, and include the landscaping of the perspective.

WOMAN ARCHITECT

Vacation time picture of Dorothy Eggert of 1717 North Fayette street, Saginaw, W. S., Mich., who designed the model home pictures in this department today.

BRICK GARDEN WALLS COMING INTO FAVOR; COST IS MODERATE

This is the season of the year when the home interior begins to demand the summerlike treatment that chints and cretonne, printed linen and cotton afford. Slip covers create a new atmosphere in any room and materials can now be purchased which conform to any architectural type the house is designed in—Spanish, Italian, English, colonial or French.

Rooms in the colonial style are appropriately treated with chintz. The background or predominating color of the chintz should harmonize with the shade of the wall. Glazed chintz is extremely attractive, and furthermore it has dust shedding quality which appeals to many housewives.

Printed linen is also much used, while soft printed cottons are preferred by many who think that linens muss too easily.

For a sunroom a brightly colored, strikingly designed cretonne is always effective. For the dining room a richly colored, dignified design is suitable and for a living room gay chintzes in delicate designs add vastly to the charm of the summertime use.

Covers for bedroom furniture, bound in ribbon, with ruffles of sundry sorts, mask the wintry look of furniture, and deck it becomingly for hot days. An old porch swing with a slip cover and some bright pillows can give a porch the appearance of having been newly furnished.

VENTILATION IS VITAL IN GARAGE JOINED TO HOME

In the garage attached to the house ventilation is an important feature. Most cities today include in their building ordinances requirements that such garages have forced ventilation and, even though one lives in a community where requirements are not so strict, it is a wise precaution to have the garage equipped with the mechanical means of removing fumes. Many fumes of a highly deleterious nature originate in garages where cars are kept.

An entry between the garage and any room in the house is a wise plan and this entry should be well ventilated with an open window. Steam or hot water is an excellent method of heating garages, for then there is no heated surface which can ignite gasoline vapors.

Since ventilating devices now on the market have removed the danger from fumes, as well as their disagreeable odor, and fireproof construction methods have become so perfected, the attached garage bids fair to become a decided asset in home planning and designing.

SKINTLED BRICK WALLS REDUCE PRICE OF HOUSE

It is claimed that skintled brickwork is seen in many of its finest examples in Chicago where it was developed some six years ago. This is one of the least expensive types of brickwork to lay, for no studied effort is required to effect a fixed design. In fact, its chief charm is in its irregularity.

A development of common brick, skintling produces a mass tectural effect in the walls, with a consequent rugged handsomeness which is intensified by the play of light and shadow on their diversified colorings.

Some masons have the ability to get the full value in effects from this skintled brickwork. For this reason the home owner contemplating a house of this type should be certain he engages a mason who has mastered the laying of the skintled brick wall. There are seldom two walls exactly alike, save in the general effect.

GOOD HARDWARE ADDS GREATLY TO HOME VALUE

Many Uses Are Found for Brass and Bronze.

BY HOMER GRANT.

In order to get the utmost satisfaction out of one's home, it is of vital importance to consider carefully each of the many features which go into the making of the finished product. And because the problem of expense is usually among the foremost questions for deliberation, it is equally necessary to study these features from the standpoint of durability and the enduring wear which they can be made to yield.

Many times, to his subsequent annoyance, a home owner pays no attention to the hardware fixtures which are installed in his house. His mind is too occupied with questions which seem superficially to be of greater importance.

And yet for the amount of money expended there is no other product of the small home's construction which produces more in the way of usefulness and good looks than these pieces of hardware, each one of which, in some fashion or other, plays its small part in the daily domestic routine.

Woes of the Cheap Products.

The experienced home owner knows without being told the difficulties that follow in the wake of too cheap hardware fixtures. Rusty hinges which can discolor the carefully painted front door, and hinges which squeak irritatingly; lighting fixtures which too soon become transformed into ugly, disfigured things; window fasteners which show a lamentable reluctance to perform their appointed duties, and locks which do everything but lock in the way that they should. These are but a few of the disturbing results which follow in the wake of ill chosen, inferior quality hardware.

Naturally, in considering the small home it is not advised to install the costliest and most elaborate hardware purchasable. But it is possible to buy hardware at the present time which is manufactured and sold by reliable concerns; which is moderate in cost and which will look just as well at the end of ten years or twenty years as at the end of one year.

In most of the domestic hardware fixtures are made of brass and bronze, cast iron and steel. Brass and bronze are alloys of copper, and the brass fixtures come in a lemon yellow shade, while the bronze ones come in orange yellow tones.

Beware of False.

Brass and bronze hardware is not subject to rust and if a home owner decides to install brass and bronze products in his house he must be sure that it is not iron and steel, plated to resemble real brass and bronze. This is sometimes done. So the value of a reputable dealer is obvious in buying domestic hardware.

The non-rusting quality of brass and bronze is one of its great value contributing factors to the home owner.

For instance, all the outside fixtures of a house, such as knockers, name plates, lanterns, etc., are constantly exposed to rains, snows and all kinds of weather. Where they are of brass or bronze they neither rust nor corrode. The same holds true of the inside fixtures exposed to moisture from handling as well as to moisture in the air.

One may obtain both brass and bronze in cast and wrought. For the front door "cast" may be used wisely, but elsewhere in the small house "wrought" may be employed if expense is a matter of consideration. The "cast" is more expensive, but the "wrought" is satisfactory.

Many Types of Locks.

There are many varieties of front door locks, knockers and handles. Handle and thumb pieces are much in favor now on the front door instead of a knob. These handles are especially suitable for Colonial types of homes, and come in a wide variety of cast brass and bronze.

Glass knobs with small wrought brass key hole plates are in excellent taste for use in the home interior, excepting in the kitchen where white porcelain knobs, with nickel plated brass trimmings, are appropriate.

For the bathroom and the toilet, where considerable moisture prevails, the hardware may be nickel plated on brass or bronze. Rust has no chance of coming through as sometimes happens where the nickel plate is on iron or steel.

Brass and bronze hinges have qualities of self-lubrication and do not squeak. Casement windows opening outward may be hung on galvanized hinges with brass pins so that rust will not put them out of commission.

For interior doors there are steel butts, plated to match the rest of the hardware in the house, which come with ball bearings and are practical.

The assortment of lighting fixtures in brass and bronze from which one has to choose is wide. Fixtures in these alloys are strong and lasting and have beauty as well as practicability to recommend them.

A reliable hardware dealer is in a position to offer the home owner a great deal of practical advice in the matter of mechanical hardware contrivances on the market. His experience is first hand in these matters and the ideas he has usually have been gained by the tried and testing method.

Advisable to Consider Placing of Electric Fan

Fan outlets should be included in the principal living rooms of every home. A place should be selected for the suspension of an electric fan, which is both safe and convenient, and also one which can be located so as to provide the best circulation of air without regard for the location of furniture or furnishings.

JAPAN WOMEN AS MINERS.

In Japan women work in the mines, underground and above, in factories, and in the fields. Factories are almost entirely manned by women, as most of the factories are textile mills.

SLIP COVERS GIVE SUMMERLIKE EFFECT TO HOME INTERIORS

In garden walls there is a charm and durability to brick which recommends this material for use by the discriminating home owner.

Many garden walls now being erected are whitewashed as soon as they are finished. Vine covered and blooming with flowers, these whitewashed garden walls present in a few years the effect of having stood a half a century, which is, of course, the effect desired from this treatment.

At the present time the price of a brick garden wall is not prohibitive to the suburban dweller of moderate means. He can now afford it just as easily as did the home owner of favored fortune in earlier days.

While the garden wall has not been as popular these last few years as formerly, there is evidence of its returning vogue.

One reason doubtless for its return to favor is the growing acceptance of the living-room-at-the-rear-idea. This means the cultivation of the lawn and garden area in the rear of the house and a feature like a garden wall, which will contribute to the privacy of this area, screening it from neighboring view, will naturally be in demand.

KIDDIES' ROOMS NOW CAN BE MADE CHARMING

Delightful Decorations Are Possible.

Possibilities of treatment for rooms for the small boys and girls of the family are many at the present time. Never were wall ornamentations so beguiling, never was color so delightfully used. Never were there such delightful renderings on the market of miniature pieces of furniture in interesting period designs.

It goes without saying that the walls of a child's room should have a waterproof finish, or at least a washable dado. Plain plaster surfaces covered with waterproof paint are excellent because of the ease with which they can be kept clean.

Cloth wall coverings finished in glazed surfaces are a wise solution for the walls of a small child's room.

Linoleum for the floor is one of the best coverings and coming as it does in an infinite range of colors and designs it can be secured to harmonize with any room treatment.

If the floor is hardwood washable rugs are a good investment. Painted floors can be made to add a color touch to the room if desired.

Built-in furniture also plays its part in the child's room. Window seats are always useful and there should be cupboards where toys can be conveniently kept and bookcases for the time when the child is a little older.

CINDER CONCRETE BLOCKS USEFUL IN HOME BUILDING

Rapid developments are being made in the field of cinder concrete blocks for home building. These blocks are fire resistive and, because of their cellular corklike structure possess a high degree of insulation.

Moreover, dryness is assured with the cinder concrete blocks. They are light in weight and there is building economy in the fact that the trim can be nailed directly to the cinder concrete block, as these blocks have a nail holding power.

Another economy point brought out by the devotees of the cinder block is that by its use there is an important saving of direct plastering. By direct plastering is meant that furring and lathing are eliminated.

NOTE INCREASE IN REINFORCED CONCRETE HOMES

Reinforced concrete is now making its appearance more frequently in homes which make no pretense at costliness but do stress durability and modern fireproof qualities.

Beams of pressed steel, or "tin joists," very light rolled steel sections or "junior beams" and beams of steel rods are used in moderate priced houses.

For the ceilings and floors of such houses we find metal lath used as a reinforcing material. These reinforced concrete floors are not thick and can be covered with linoleum, rubber, cement finish or even wood.

REALTORS WILL DRIVE AND RACE AT GRAND BEACH

Annual Outing to Take Place Tuesday.

Chicago's realtors are to forget all about corner sites, sales contracts, commissions, leases, leads, and other paraphernalia of their calling on Tuesday and board a special train on the Michigan Central for a day's outing given by the Chicago Real Estate Board at Grand Beach, Mich.

L. G. VARTY. [Wallinger Photo.]

The celebration is to be a stag affair, so the celebrators can confine their attentions to the various events that have been arranged. Here is the program arranged by the outing committee, of which L. G. Varty is chairman:

The realtors' train leaves the Roosevelt road station at 9:30, with intermediate stops on the south side, and arrives at Grand Beach at 11:10. There'll be a parade to Pine inn, where luncheon will be served at 11:30. At 12 every one will leave for the athletic fields, and at 6 p. m. all will return for a chicken dinner. Then at 8:10 the special train will return to the city.

Golf, perhaps, will be the principal item of amusement. Harrison B. Riley, president of the Chicago Title and Trust company, is giving prizes for winners in the various events. Besides golf there will be baseball, horseshoe pitching, foot races, and swimming if the weather is warm enough.

Friends of realtors also are invited to attend the outing.

QUARTER IN SLOT PHOTOS WILL BE SEEN HERE SOON

Quarter-in-a-slot photos, an invention for which Anatole Josopho, a young Russian, recently was paid $1,000,000, shortly will be seen in Chicago. It was announced last week that the Middlewest Photomaton company has leased the four story building at 160-62 North State street, now being used as an entrance to the Randolph theater, from the Randolph Movie company, and a portion of the store at the northwest corner of State and Monroe from the Buck & Raynor company.

Two stores for dispensing the new type of photos will be opened some time during the summer. Sam B. Ullman of Antigo, Wis., the vice president and general manager of the middlewest company, states that a string of studios will be established in this part of the country as soon as Photomaton machines can be delivered.

The parent company, Photomaton, Inc., was organized in New York recently by Henry Morgenthau, former ambassador to Turkey, and a number of business men including James Harbord, John T. Underwood and Raymond B. Small.

L. L. Sachs & Co. were brokers in the Chicago deal. The attorneys were E. H. Morris, D'Ancona and Pflaum and Moses, Kennedy, Stein, and Bachrach.

Iliff Takes Over South Central Business of Bowes

George F. Iliff has taken over the south central business of the Bowes Realty company and will operate under the new firm name of George F. Iliff & Co. Mr. Iliff has been handling the business of the Bowes Realty company in that part of the city for some years and will continue at the same address, 2446 South Park way.

Sherwood Terrace Flat Building Sold for $44,500

John and Marie Florianek have sold the six apartments at 1455 Sherwood terrace to John A. and Hilma Risberg for a reported $44,500. Fred H. Wolff and F. G. Anderson were brokers.

A RETREAT IN THE BIG WOODS

Paul Frederick Olsen designed the above building, which will be used as a clubhouse in a north woods development proposed for members of the Knights Templar. A syndicate has acquired a tract of about 6,000 acres in northern Wisconsin, including thirty lakes, and it is stated will convert the property into a vacation paradise for local Masons. SUMMER COURSE IN REAL ESTATE WILL START ON TUESDAY

John P. Hooker, president of the Chicago Real Estate board, announces that the summer classes in real estate to be conducted by the Chicago Real Estate board, in cooperation with the Chicago Central College of Commerce of the Y. M. C. A. will begin next Tuesday evening at 6 o'clock.

The lectures on Tuesday evening will be open to the public free of charge at Central Y. M. C. A., 19 South La Salle street. The courses to be offered this summer in real estate law, conveyancing and impromptu speaking will fill the needs of many different types of real estate men.

The lecture entitled, "Legal Pitfalls to Be Avoided by the Real Estate Man," to be given by E. E. Dornbaugh of Cheney, Evans & Peterson, will mark the beginning of the eight week summer session of the college in real estate law. Since these sessions will meet on both Tuesdays and Thursdays, the same ground will be covered as in the fall or spring semesters when the classes meet only once a week.

"Knowledge Necessary for the Preparation of Real Estate Forms" is the subject of the opening lecture to be delivered by Calvin George of the law firm of Harmon, George and Gilbert. Mr. George will instruct the class in real estate conveyancing during the summer session. This course will enable real estate men to handle the detailed legal forms involved in real estate transactions.

The course in impromptu speaking is given full credit as one of the two electives required for the two year real estate certificates issued by the college in cooperation with the Chicago Real Estate board. "How to Speak Effectively Under Pressure" will be the lecture delivered Tuesday by A. G. Pierrot, vice president of the real estate firm of Teninga Brothers & Co.

LAUDERMILK TO OPEN PALATINE RESIDENCE TRACT

The Bert H. Laudermilk Realty association is opening a subdivision at Palatine which will be its fifth northwest of the city since Jan. 1. It's located three blocks from the Chicago and North Western station and is called the Palatine Ridge. High School addition because of its proximity to a new $155,000 high school now under construction.

The Laudermilk organization bought the property from Johnson and Webber of Palatine for a reported $433,300. It is stated that about $300,000 has been spent for the installation of underground improvements, street paving, and so on. About fifteen homes of Spanish architecture will be erected at once to sell from $12,000 to $13,000.

A portion of the frontage along the Northwest highway has been zoned by the village for business purposes, and the remainder of the tract has been zoned for single family residences to cost a minimum of $7,500.

PANCOES SECURE FEE OF SITE FOR 38 STORY TOWER

The proposed thirty-eight story Pancoe tower, at the southeast corner of Monroe and Wells, told about in this department last December, advanced a step nearer realization yesterday when Morris A., Samuel, and William J. Pancoe bought from the Illinois Merchants Trust company, trustee for the estate of Perkins Bass, the fee of the site on which the structure is to rise.

The purchase made yesterday is L-shaped, measuring 70x40x100. The Pancoe brothers already control a 50x60 strip on Wells, making the site 70 on Monroe by 100 on Wells. While the price paid was not disclosed, it is stated that property close by has been sold at prices ranging from $100 to $125 a square foot. The leasehold of the fee bought yesterday is owned by the Pancoe brothers.

It is stated that legal technicalities have prevented work from starting on the new tower, but it is now hoped to have construction under way by May 1. Former Judge Bernard Barasa and Max M. Grossman represented the Pancoe brothers and Mr. Loehr the bank in yesterday's deal.

EVANSTON WILL REPLACE SCHOOL RAZED BY FIRE

Plans for a new Evanston intermediate school to replace the Boltwood school, destroyed by fire last winter, are being prepared by Childs and Smith. The structure is to cost about $500,000. It will accomodate pupils of the seventh and eighth grades in districts 75 and 76 which were recently consolidated. The school authorities recently acquired two parcels of property in Elmwood avenue from Forrest A. Pontius and Carl W. Werner. Eventually the school will occupy the entire block bounded by Elmwood, Greenwood, Sherman, and Lake.

Woman Sells the Morris Building on North Clark

Annie D. Kinny has sold the Morris building, at 2056-58 North Clark street, to Christ Diamond for a reported $60,000. The property fronts fifty feet and contains two stores and four flats. Strassheim & Co. were brokers.

Arthur L. Webster, Du Page county surveyor and Wheaton real estate man, has purchased the business of the Wheaton Realty company, with offices in the Smith block, across from the Wheaton station of the Northwestern railway.

Thorndale Avenue Flat Building Sold: $65,000

James T. O'Malley has sold his six apartments at 1531-33 Thorndale avenue to Mary Papp for a reported $65,000, subject to $35,000, through John J. Kern & Co.

They will erect an English type cottage on one of the parcels and will hold the other for investment. The price was not disclosed. Gilbert D. Johnson & Bro. were brokers.

A parcel of five acres three miles northwest of Barrington station was bought by Mr. and Mrs. Charles D. Ewer of Wilmette from Gilbert D. Johnson representing a syndicate for an undisclosed price. The purchasers will remodel an old farm house on the land and will landscape the property in the vicinity of the residence.

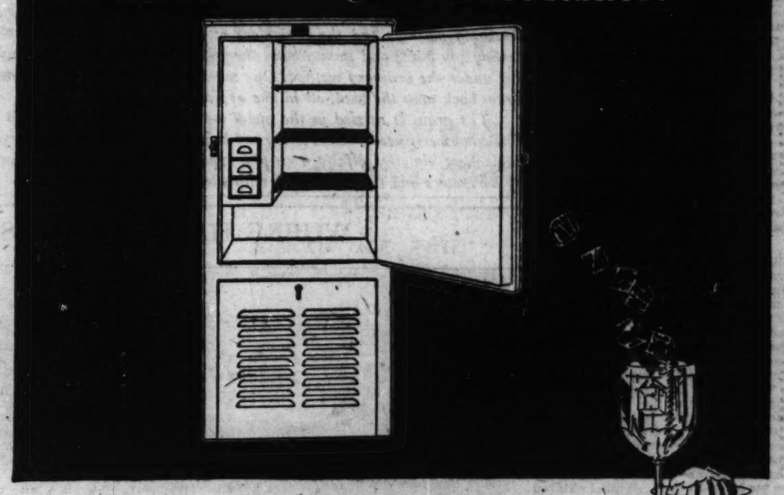
DEPENDABLE Electric REFRIGERATION



For Small Kitchens, too!

A great many people have denied themselves the advantages and conveniences of electric refrigeration simply because they thought it necessary to purchase large, expensive models.

Copeland models C-5 and C-5-P are only 21⅝ inches in depth, 27¾ inches in width and 60¼ inches in height—small enough for even an apartment kitchen. Both models have four shelves, including bottom, and supply 90 ice cubes at one quick freezing. Their essential difference is in the interior finish—C-5 being white enamel, and C-5-P genuine white porcelain. These and other small Copelands are identical in dependability, silence and economy with the larger, more costly models.

Come in and inspect the Copeland line—there are 9 complete cabinet models, and 14 sizes of separate freezing units for present refrigerators. A few dollars down will put exactly the right type and size of Copeland in your home.

Rustproof Houses Are in Demand

Buyers of ready-built homes are demanding the use of rustproof metals in their construction. Builders will find it much easier to sell houses so equipped.

If you intend building or buying a house see that it has COPPER gutters and downspouts, BRASS pipe and solid BRASS or BRONZE hardware and lighting fixtures. These are the vitals of a house. Made of rustproof metals, they give permanent good service and you avoid the frequent costly replacements that are inevitable when corrodible material is used.

FARM AND GARDEN

Combines Cut Cost of Harvesting and Reduce Man Power

Binder, Thrasher, and Horse Teams, All in One.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

FORTY thousand combined harvester-thrashers will be used this season in harvesting the grain crops of the United States. The combine was introduced in the middle west eight years ago and this year one-half the wheat in Kansas will be harvested with these machines, which indicates the rapid change that is taking place in methods of harvesting and thrashing small grain.

At least 120,000 fewer men will be needed to cut and thrash the 1927 grain crop, saving the growers a half million dollars a day in labor alone. Cutting costs with the combine is adding from 17 to 20 cents a bushel to the farmers' profits on wheat.

The combination outfits are now to be found in various parts of the United States from Texas to the Canadian border. They are being used by farmers who are old enough to be familiar with the American thrasher's story from the cradle to the combine.

In a combine the farmer gets a binder, a thrashing machine, and the equivalent of several teams of horses all done up in a comparatively small package. With this outfit operated by one or two men the grain is cut and thrashed and the straw is spread back on the land. "Once over and it's all over" is the terms engineers apply to this method which is new this side of the Rockies but old in the big Pacific slope grain fields where two out of three farmers harvest their wheat with the combine.

Simplifying the Job.

Last summer while touring the great grain belts of the Mississippi and Missouri river valleys and the western provinces of Canada, I heard dozens of these combines humming their merry tunes while happy farmers rode them over the fields. The combine has greatly simplified the task and lowered the costs in harvesting grains.

The story of modern grain harvesting told to me on top of a Nebraska farmer's combine in the Elkhorn river valley last July was quite different from the one related to me thirty years ago by my grandfather who used oxen to tramp out the grain grown on his Missouri farm. While I skinned a cat on the warped boom pole that swung out over the thrashing floor my grandfather told how he once sweated cutting wheat with a cradle, bunching the grain with a wooden tooth hand rake, binding the sheaves by hand with twisted straw rope and then spending days driving oxen in a circle to tramp out the grain. The path of the oxen was still visible a few years ago on the thrashing floor of that old Missouri farm. The old cradle still hangs by its fingers in the granary.

If Old Methods Were Used.

If that laborious method were used this season in harvesting the 57,726,000 acres of wheat now growing in this country it would require millions of harvesters. It is estimated that it would take at least the nation's entire population of 117,000,000 and an additional 60,000,000 to produce this year's wheat crop if the pioneering methods were used.

Along with the cradle and thrashing floor, binders, thrashing machines, and binder twine are being thrown into the discards. Tomahawking bands at the mouth of a dusty thrashing machine and stacking straw have sent many a farm boy cityward. All of that is done away with where the combine is used.

Eliminating the nation's twine bill would mean a big saving. It is estimated that from 110,000 to 125,000 tons of binder twine are used annually in harvesting the grain crops in the United States. That costs the farmers from $29,350,000 to $33,475,000 a year, according to estimates.

P. H. Higgins of the National Association of Farm Equipment Manufacturers says, "America was slipping in her supremacy as a producer and exporter of wheat in favor of Australia, Canada, the Argentine, and Russia. With the combine we now regain our place regardless of the cheap land, cheap labor and cheap water freight of the rest of the world. The combine is bringing in the marginal lands that could not be farmed profitably before. Farmers are now able to cut their costs, just as mass production cut costs for the manufacturer."

Man Power Lessened.

Each combine eliminates three men. That great army of men called to every farm each season when it comes time to cut and thrash the grain is no longer to be seen where the work is done with a combine. With the old outfits, thrashing day brings in all the neighboring farmers, often with their wives and children. The farmer's wife has to feed from 25 to 50 and often more in order to get a few acres of grain thrashed. Feeding a bunch of hungry thrashers is nothing short of drudgery for the farmer's wife. The annual nightmare often lasts for days. Small forces are used with the combine. With some of the smaller combines a farmer and his son or hired hand operate the outfit.

Agricultural engineers roughly estimate it would take more than twenty million days' work of men to cut, shock and thrash the annual wheat crop in the United States. This is the man labor required for wheat and does not include the enormous acreage of other grain crops. Three men are "fired" every time a combine is put to work. The larger combines can be operated and the grain hauled to the bin or to a nearby elevator with a force of four men.

More than eighty combines were used in Illinois last year; the first one was put to work in this state three years ago. Soy beans brought the combine to Illinois. In addition to soy beans, wheat, oats, sweet clover, red clover, timothy, alsike, buckwheat, rye and barley are being harvested with the combine in this state.

What the Farmers Think.

Last year E. W. Lehmann, chief in farm mechanics, and I. P. Blauser, assistant in that department at the University of Illinois, made a study of sixty-four combines used in this state and have just issued a circular, No. 316, which briefly tells how well farmers like this new machine.

These engineers say that the combine at the present time seems much superior to any other method of harvesting sweet clover. It cuts two-thirds of the loss in handling soy beans, and the wheat loss is reduced one-third.

In summing up the advantages and disadvantages of the combine Lehmann and Blauser say: "Advantages of the combine include the saving of twine, time, labor, and grain, and in many cases the production of a better quality of product. Some combine owners report that the machine has paid for itself in a single year, and others that they have made very large payments on the investment. The combine, to a large extent, has solved the problems of harvesting soy beans and sweet clover. The quality of the grain is better, in most cases. The combine also has lightened the work of the farm women during the harvest. For instance, four men are doing the work that formerly took a large number of men. The combine has the advantage of spreading the straw on the ground at the time the grain is thrashed, if not needed for live stock.

Some Disadvantages.

"A number of disadvantages of the combine in the humid region have been mentioned by prospective buyers. Some of these are real and some are imaginary. The first year the combines were used for harvesting small grain some elevator men refused to accept the 'combine' grain because of a preconceived notion that it could not be handled without heating.

"The experiences of the last two years tend to disprove this idea. The first cost, ranging from $1,100 to $2,200, is given as a real objection. In many cases it would mean duplication of some of the machinery already on the farm. High moisture content, wet seasons and weeds, rain, hail and saving of the straw have all been mentioned as other disadvantages of the combine.

"Of these the most important seem to be wet seasons and weeds, which go together. A wet season causes trouble in 'combining' grain, just the same as it does in the common method of harvesting and thrashing, but the combine met the condition better in 1926."

Cutting Down the Cost.

These engineers point out that while definite cost records are not yet available to the state agricultural experiment station, "some who have used the combine state that harvesting with it costs only about one-third as much as with the usual method."

"To 'combine' successfully and have a low moisture content, grain must stand from seven to ten days longer than when cut with a binder," Lehmann and Blauser find. "As the grain gets dead ripe, it dries out rapidly. Letting it stand a day or two longer therefore, may make a higher grade as well as keep it from heating in the bin. The common varieties of wheat grown in Illinois shatter very little when left standing after dead ripe. Oats shatter much more than wheat and should not be left standing any longer than is absolutely necessary."

Their study shows that ordinarily two men are all that are needed to operate the tractor and combine, and in a few instances one man has handled the whole outfit. Usually from one to three men are needed to haul the grain away from the combine.

Illinois farmers lose from 15 to 45 per cent of the soy beans harvested and thrased under the ordinary method, while with the combine tests show an average total loss of only 8.39 per cent.

In Kansas.

More than 8,000 combines were used in harvesting the Kansas wheat crop last year, harvesting more than 3,000,000 acres which yielded more than 50,500,000 bushels of wheat. The most conservative farmers in Kansas, who have used combined harvester-thrashers for several years, claim they save at least a bushel more grain per acre with this improved method. Others claim they save at least two bushels more to the acre. In that state the combine reduces the harvest hands about 30 per cent.

A farmer who has used the combine in Kansas since 1922 says his costs of harvesting average about 3½ cents a bushel. Last year because of a high yield he put his wheat in the bin for less than 1 cent a bushel with the combine.

The Kansas state board of agriculture officials2 cite a case where last season three men and one small boy, two of the men on the combine, one on a truck, and the boy with a wagon, cut and delivered at an elevator two miles from the farm an average of 1,538 bushels a day.

C. C. Isley, general manager of ten elevators in Kansas and Colorado, says "Hindoo coolies, at three cents a day, and Russian semi-serfs with hand labor cannot compete with a farmer and two boys who, from May to October, with a tractor and combine, can grow and harvest 500 to 600 acres of wheat—8,000 to 10,000 bushels."

Handles 400 Acres.

C. D. Kinsman, formerly with the United States department of agriculture, found, on a survey of the combine at work in the field from the Texas Panhandle to North Dakota, that the combine is at present handling an average of 400 acres. The cost per bushel is 16 cents on 100 acre basis, 8 cents on 500 acre basis. The danger of the combine delaying the harvesting of grain seems to be overestimated. A combine lasts on an average of a little over eight years, according to owners' estimates made to Mr. Kinsman.

In Canada grain growers find that the cost of harvesting wheat with a combine is at least 10 cents a bushel less than where the work is done with old methods. This figure is based on a two year's test at Swift Current, Sask.

Fifty per cent more combines will be sold in the United States this year than last season, according to estimates made by the National Association of Farm Equipment Manufacturers.

More than half the wheat crop in Kansas is expected to be harvested and thrashed with combines.

"COMBINING" IN ILLINOIS.

"ONCE OVER AND IT'S ALL OVER."—This is an Illinois farmer with a combine—a binder, thrashing machine and the equivalent of several teams of horses all tied up in a small package—harvesting soy beans and saving more than 90 per cent of the beans, where 45 per cent of them are often lost under the ordinary method. One man runs the whole outfit, which cuts, thrashes, and spreads the straw back onto the land, all in one operation.

The grain is carried in the metal tank on the combine until it is emptied into a wagon or truck. The combine is used in harvesting soy beans, wheat, oats, barley, rye, sweet clover, red clover, alsike, buckwheat, timothy, alfalfa, cow peas, and ordinary beans. This farmer is doing the work of a big force of harvesters and thrashers used with the ordinary method.

WHERE HARVESTING IS EASY.

GIVING A WHEAT FIELD THE "ONCE OVER".—Half the wheat crop of Kansas will be harvested this season with combined harvester-thrashers similar to the three outfits in the above picture. This harvesting scene was taken on Roy Kite's farm near Bird City, Kan. On the outfit in front the grain is collected in a 60 bushel metal tank mounted on the combine. Wagons are drawn along to catch the grain on some of the outfits, as shown in the picture of the two combines in the background. Two men, one on the tractor and the other on the combine, operate each outfit. Extra men are used to haul the grain away from the combine.

Big armies of harvesters that follow the old thrashing machine outfits are gradually disappearing from the grain fields of the west and middle west. More than 8,000 combines were used in Kansas to harvest about one-third the wheat crop in that state last season.

RAY E. MILLER TO HEAD CO-OP MARKET WORK

Ray E. Miller, former county agent of Adams county, with headquarters at Quincy, Ill., has been employed to head the livestock marketing department of the Illinois Agricultural association, according to an announcement from the organization's Chicago office. He will also serve as field director of the four coöperative producer agencies operating in the Illinois territory, including the Chicago Producers Commission association, Union Stockyards, Chicago; Producers' Commission association, Indianapolis, Ind.; Peoria Producers' association, Peoria, Ill., and Producers' Live Stock Commission association, National Stockyards, Ill.

Adams county, Illinois, where Mr. Miller served as farm adviser for four years, has the reputation for shipping more live stock coöperatively than any other county in the state. Under his leadership the Adams county farm bureau has attracted the attention of agricultural leaders throughout the middle west.

Mr. Miller is a graduate of the College of Agriculture, University of Missouri. He will begin his work with the state farm bureau and the coöperative live stock selling agencies at four central live stock markets about the middle of July. Miller succeeds William F. Hedgecock, who recently resigned as director of the Illinois Agricultural association's live stock marketing department.

That Awful Water!

THE dinner table all set for guests—snowy linen, silver and china gleaming softly, bowls of flowers charmingly arranged—but the whole effect distinctly marred by cloudy water giving off the odor of chemicals.

No wonder the poor hostess cries out in desperation—"That awful water!"

Such a thing never happens in a home where the Standard Filter stands guard over the water supply. The water is always crystal clear, sparkling—absolutely pure.

Every drop of drinking water is forced through a thick wall of snow-white porcelain. An exclusive process of automatic circulation keeps the water always fresh and delightfully cool.

Every member of your family will drink more water from the day a Standard Filter is installed in your home. Doctors say this is one of the most important aids to health.

As a special inducement to tenants, the finer new apartment buildings are being equipped throughout with Standard Filters.

GARDEN CONTEST JUDGING STARTS ON WEDNESDAY

Competitors Urged to Put Their Plots Shipshape.

The Tribune flower garden contest editor warns contestants to look out for photographers who may attempt to enter their gardens to take pictures claiming to represent this newspaper. No photographer has been authorized to take pictures of any of the 2,516 gardens entered in the home flower garden competition, except members of The Tribune staff. Tribune photographers will present their credentials upon the request of any contestant.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

Final details of the elaborate plan for the judging of every single one of the 2,516 gardens entered in THE TRIBUNE'S home flower garden contest are being completed. Approximately 100 judges will start their work early Wednesday morning, according to plans made by garden club workers who met at Hinsdale, Ill., recently.

The judges will be scattered from Waukegan, Ill., to Gary, Ind., and from Lake Michigan west to Elgin, Aurora, and Joliet. Their work is so thoroughly organized that the judges, who represent the various garden clubs in this territory, expect to start work simultaneously in every community in the contest zone covering an area within a radius of approximately forty miles of The Tribune Tower. Landscape gardeners declare it to be the most thorough judging system ever attempted in this country.

Every Garden to Be Visited.

Route maps, score cards, and other necessary information will be complete and in the hands of each judging committee by Tuesday. Every garden will be visited by the judges from the various garden clubs working in groups of three.

This advice is given to contestants by the garden contest editor:

"Arrange to have some member of your family at home during the latter part of this week to make sure that some one is present the day the judges visit your garden. It is impossible to notify the contestant exactly when the judges will arrive.

"Between now and Wednesday morning make a final inspection of your garden—clean out all the weeds, discard wilted blossoms and dead leaves on the plants, and mow the lawn."

The Order of Judging.

According to the judges' plans, the first groups will select the best twenty-five gardens in each one of the seven districts. They expect to complete this work before the end of the week. During the early part of next week the district judges will visit the twenty-five gardens selected by the preliminary judges in each district. The ten best gardens out of the twenty-five will be awarded cash prizes ranging from $5 to $100.

Later the most outstanding garden, or the first prize winner, in each of the seven districts will be visited by the final judges. These seven gardens are eligible to compete for the grand prize of $1,000 which will be awarded this fall after the late gardens have been judged.

Under the uniform system of judging which is to be followed in THE TRIBUNE contest each garden will be rated according to points on a score card worked out under the direction of Dr. Joseph C. Blair and his staff of expert landscape gardeners at the University of Illinois.

In outlying suburbs garden clubs are being asked to furnish guides wherever it is necessary to aid the judges in locating the entrants' gardens.

New Judges Announced.

Following are the district and preliminary judging committees which have not been previously published in THE TRIBUNE or which have been changed since the names of the various judges, representing the garden clubs in the contest zone, were printed:

Four Lake Forest Gardens Open to Public Saturday

Mrs. Samuel T. Chase of Lake Forest, Ill., announced yesterday that the Lake Forest Garden club's open garden schedule for Saturday, June 18, will include four of the most interesting gardens along the north shore.

The following gardens will be open to the public: Mrs. Clyde M. Carr's, Mrs. Tiffany Blake's, Mrs. Lester Armour's, and Mrs. De Forest Hurlburd's.

Mrs. Chase explains that Mrs. Carr's garden on Mayflower avenue is a green garden. In it special attention has been given to evergreens and heliotropes, with a still pool of water on the landscape to reflect the trees like a mirror. Not so far away is Mrs. Blake's garden, more of the English type, with perennial borders, vegetables and formal plantings near the house.

The Armour garden is of the formal type, with a ravine crossing it, while Mrs. Hurlburd's is an informal type with perennial borders and a swimming pool as attractive features. All of these gardens have been selected to illustrate distinct and interesting types of planting.

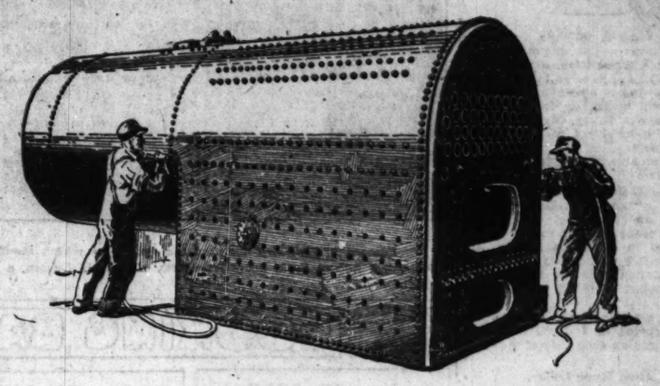
KEWANEE



Steel and Rivets for Long Life

Steel plus rivets equals strength. More and more it is becoming evident to the builders of the world. Kewanee Boilers are gaining popularity with leaps and bounds because Kewanee combines the steel and rivets.

Japan, which is rebuilding Tokio, and using steel-construction to insure perpetuity, is buying Kewanee Boilers extensively. And Kewanee Boilers are made of all-steel (riveted)—one of the great factors on which Japan depends and insists. The empire can't afford to take any more chances.

The only objection we have to our own product is that it lasts a life-time. There can't be a re-sale in the same spot. These boilers are enemies of Father Time. Still, we have the satisfaction of knowing that every Kewanee Boiler sells another. It is an endless chain. Kewanee Boilers are their own best advertisement.

Quality will make its way "in spite of hell and high water" as a well-known General in the Civil War was fond of saying.

Men who invest money in buildings today consider the heating boiler as carefully as architecture and building material. They go hand in hand—steel, concrete, Kewanee All-steel (riveted) Firebox Boilers.

Ask the Old Man Behind the Boiler just why all this is true. He loves to talk about it.

NEW SYNAGOGUE IS ANNOUNCED FOR ROGERS PARK

Will Be Erected at 1439 Pratt Boulevard.

Rogers Park is to have an important addition to its religious life in the Temple B'Nai Zion, a synagogue which will be erected at 1439-47 Pratt boulevard, near Greenview avenue. Ground will be broken for the structure in about thirty days and completion will involve a matter of nine or ten months, so the congregation ought to be able to enter its new home next spring.

The front elevation of the temple, designed by Edward P. Steinberg, will present an imposing appearance. Architecturally it will follow classic lines, and in this case dignity will be attained by simplicity of outline. Ornamentation will be found in a great amount of detail in Byzantine feeling.

The street side of the building will be constructed of Indiana lime stone, with returns on each side of the same material.

Caen Stone Lobby.

The structure will be three stories high, with the first floor devoted to community purposes and the synagogue proper extending through the two upper ones. Entrance will be made through a lobby lined with Caen stone.

In the community part of the building there will be Sabbath school rooms, meeting rooms, possibly a gymnasium, and an auditorium, seating 500 persons, where plays and lectures may be given. There will be accommodations in the building for banquets.

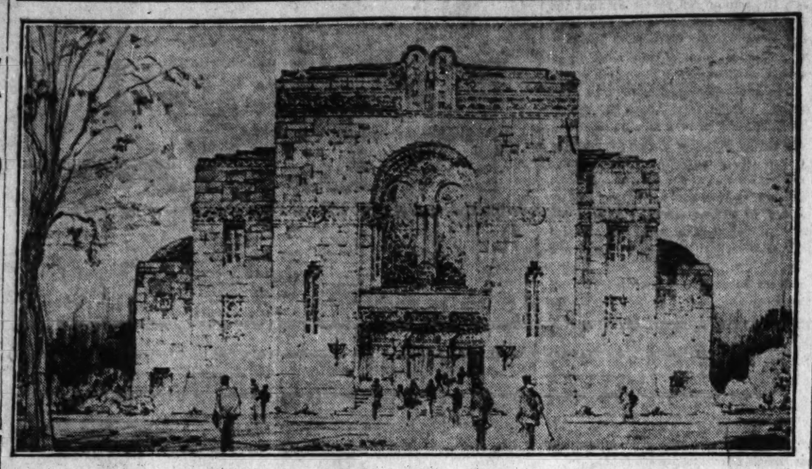
A considerable amount of thought has been given to making the interior of the synagogue auditorium as individual as possible. American walnut will be employed to a considerable extent, and this material will be used for the altar, which is to be richly carved. The walls will be finished in a plaster which will be invested with acoustical properties. Seating accommodations will provide for 1,000.

To Cost $250,000.

The temple is to occupy a site measuring 105x125 feet and will cost about $250,000, exclusive of the land.

B'nai Zion congregation is only about four years old, but already it has a membership of 300 persons. Dr. A. L. Lessen, a graduate of Northwestern university, is its rabbi and the president is Morris Joseph, president of Joseph Brothers Lumber company.

FOR FOLLOWERS OF JEWISH FAITH



Edward P. Steinberg designed the synagogue which the Temple B'Nai Zion will erect at 1439-47 Pratt boulevard, Rogers Park, near Greenview. Dr. A. L. Lassen, a graduate of Northwestern, is in charge of the congregation.

What Would It Mean to You

IF Evanston, Wilmette or Winnetka were wiped out today and started all over again—planned to a super-idea and a high ideal and with fullest development pledged? What would it mean to you if you could purchase property there at the low prices your father paid a generation ago?

VALUES on the North Shore had gone beyond the means of 90 per cent of Chicago's population until construction of the Skokie Valley Extension of the North Shore Line made possible the founding of this brand new super-suburb. Suppose you now were offered a slice of Evanston in its pioneer days at pioneer prices!

You Were Born Too Late for Evanston— But NORTHFIELD is Here!

WHY haven't thousands of young families bought and built on the North Shore? Because this wonderful area was so popular that towns already established there absorbed all the land possible and real estate values doubled, trebled, quadrupled. Then the Skokie Valley Line brought to the city's very threshold the region where you can give to your children even better opportunities than your parents gave to you.

Of course, all Nixon services, including Triple Protection—Death, Health, Accident—are available to those who purchase lots in Northfield.

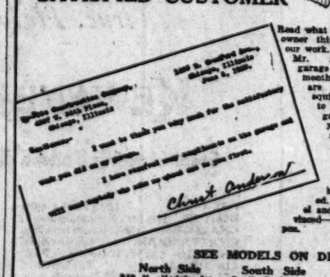
For many years we have enjoyed the confidence of thousands of prospective garage builders. Today those same thousands are enjoying the advantages of the superior type Up-Rite garages.

The greatest volume of our business is founded on recommendations from satisfied owners—but so that you may more quickly and easily realize the benefits derived from owning an Up-Rite we take this opportunity to call your attention to the coupon below which will bring you all the information you will want to know about the construction and materials used.

Chicago's Foremost Builders

Constantly on the alert to improve the standards of Up-Rite construction, we now specify Quicklocks. The Quicklock is a wonderful, new, startling innovation—nothing before like it—nothing more simple to operate. Opens the heaviest garage doors with a single quarter turn of a key; locks top and bottom automatically—just push doors close. Here is something new prospective garage owners cannot very well do without. It saves time, energy, as big doors open from outside by the single turn of key. Eliminates walking around to side door.

TESTIMONIAL FROM A SATISFIED CUSTOMER



Read what a satisfied owner thinks about our work. We built Mr. Anderson's garage several months ago. We are better equipped now to build a garage for you, for many decided improvements have recently been added, and be convinced—mail coupon.

As SHEATHING
BASE for PLASTER
WALL BOARD
As Protection Against Heat, Cold, Dampness and Storm
Insulite

Because it is a fabricated wood fibre, it has superior toughness and strength needed in sheathing and wall board; its texture is such that as a plaster base it has a greater bond than wood lath; and its cellular structure of all wood gives it a higher degree of insulating value against heat, cold or dampness.

WANTED—MALE HELP.
Salesmen, Solicitors, Etc.

A SINCERE SALESMAN.

We have no $25,000 jobs for salesmen.

No salesman can become one of our executives in a month.

We are not looking for the quick, slick, cleanup salesman.

We do not sell Real Estate, Books, Insurance, etc.

We do have average salesmen earning $8,000.

We do promote salesmen with sales records to Executives.

A connection with this organization means securing a permanent territorial franchise with a nationally known organization.

A proven future without investment, except your brain, for active specialty salesmen between 27 and 40 years of age.

I will interview privately two men for nearby territory, so do not consider this unless you are prepared to start at once should a connection be agreed upon.

Let's get down to "brass tacks." We only want to interview salesmen who are sincere in their desire to make a permanent connection.

Remember, no quick cleanup here, but an opportunity which you will immediately recognize after talking it over with me.

Telephone MR. MARTIN ANDERSON, Superior 0855, Monday, or address J C 378, Tribune.

Strict confidence observed.

A RARE OPPORTUNITY

We are prepared to offer an exclusive contract to a few outstanding several salesmen who possess the necessary qualifications.

First of all, we will consider only such applicants whose ambition demand that they earn $200 and more every week.

We have no competition in our line. We train you individually for one week in the field. We can't afford to gamble with success and neither can you.

Of course you are going to prove to us that you are a real producer between 30 and 45 years of age; that you have successfully sold an idea or books, stocks, advertising service, etc.

To the fortunate salesman who qualifies we offer a permanent opportunity to earn an unusual income. Ours is an organization whose executives are proud to be called "salesmen"; always just a bit ahead of the time.

Read this again. Note what we say of ourselves and what we expect you to say for yourself — then phone Superior 1592 for an appointment, or address G A 568, Tribune.

A BIG MAN MENTALLY,

This is our first national expansion program. We have grown from 17 men to 150 during the last 15 months. We have interviewed hundreds of men to pick the highest class selling organization we believe has ever been assembled. We are not so much interested in salesmen as we are in potential executives; men who can sell for a short period, learn our business, and then be promoted. One of the best rated business analysts in America has recently entered the field as our competitor because he realizes the importance and future of our business. We want only men who value their services from $5,000 per year up. Our business is allied to the poster advertising field. We serve thousands of the best rated firms in America.

This is a real job for a real man. We can use several men in out of town interviews and two for Chicago. Call Mr. Below Monday, 9-12, for appointment.

WANTED—MALE HELP.
Salesmen, Solicitors, Etc.

THEY SAID IT COULDN'T BE DONE, BUT WE DID IT.

A GOOD CONNECTION FOR YOU.

Knowing this to be a "buyers' market," we have rearranged our business so as to offer for sale and to sell just what the buyer wants and nothing else. We analyzed the buyers' wants, took a piece of our property wanted by him, arranged it to suit him, and now we are selling in this same man just what he seeks.

Believing that certain methods were antiquated and knowing that we had one of the best pieces of property that lies out of doors for quick turnover and comparatively quick profit to the buyer, we went to industry and told it quite frankly of what we were about to do. We went to those prosperous industries having hundreds of millions of dollars of invested capital in buildings and equipment and told all about this property and told them that rather than rent our property as an industrial site we were going to offer it as a high class, well restricted residence and apartment and business area; that a small town might be built within a city, as it were, with the result that industry is behind us, is co-operating with us, with the result that we have thousands of prospects, and that industry within one week an organization of 100 men, together with their managers, who have come to us from almost as many sources. These men knew just what they were about when they signed up with us. These men saw the leads, saw the support that industry was giving to us, saw the property, saw the facilities and assistance that we are giving to our men, saw their opportunity to make money, yes, there is a reason, and a good one, why we have the fastest growing organization in Chicago, and growing every minute, why our men are destined to make more money than they could make elsewhere.

We have a business and a real one, because we have just what the buyer wants, and can see permanency and security, he can see profit, he has never seen anything like it before; as a matter of fact it is doubtful whether this same kind of a proposition was ever presented to him ere this time.

If you want to make money, real money, if you will work night and day, 7 days a week; if you are willing to do your level best for the next 100 days and do unusually well for yourself, it is best for you to come in and see us bright and early tomorrow morning and to find your particular place in the scheme of things in some one of our new divisions.

WE REQUIRE TOMORROW

Sales managers, assistant sales managers, salesmen, investigators, telephone canvasers, secretaries – competent men and women to whom we can pay the very top that the profession warrants in terms of salary or commission or both.

We cannot employ every man or woman that comes in. We must know that you are clean cut, well dressed, talk good English and that you are honest; we must know that you will not misrepresent and will not steal our prospects and give them to the other fellow. We have thousands of prospects that have cost us large amounts of money to procure; the names of these prospects, together with their addresses, from our point of view are golden. We will not throw them away.

These men and women prospects of ours await your coming; they know what we have. There is a reason and a good one. Associate yourself with success from the start and grow. You know whether or not you have a chance to connect with us. If you will not work, if you are looking for a sinecure, if we sense the fact that you want simply advance money and won't work, don't apply. We talked to and looked over 1,000 men and women to pick 100 selected by us last week. These 100 men and women are happily on the job. They are producers.

We need additional help to handle and to call on our prospects. An organizer of national reputation, with his organization, have contracted with us to put in for us modern sales methods, to show us how to do this thing in such a way that our executives and, as we say, find your place in the scheme of things. There is a place for you and there is a reason and a good one. Come early Monday morning and if not Monday, Tuesday morning.

These lessons are being conducted by Fred B. Smith, America's greatest demonstrator of applied psychology in sales work. So overwhelming has been the success of the new plan, and we are judging by actual sales, that F. E. Moskovics, president of the Stutz Motor Car Company of America, is coming to Chicago to address our next meeting to be held Monday, June 14th, at seven thirty p. m., at S. W. corner 25th and Michigan.

Mr. Moskovics is a renowned speaker, sales executive, and an automotive engineer of international reputation. He was personally selected by Charles M. Schwab to be the head of the Stutz Motor Car Company of America and is the designer of the new and proven invention, the Safety Stutz.

An opportunity is offered to every sales person or potential sales person in Chicago to take advantage of this remarkable course without charge, and, in addition, the further opportunity of earning while learning is afforded.

If you desire to improve your position in life and to better your mental equipment, attend our meeting. At that time full details will be furnished you regarding the course and how you can earn either with full time effort or part time service an unusual amount of money for time expended.

we made the statement that if you would follow our ads you would be presented with the most unusual bargains in real estate ever offered in Southwest Chicago. In going over our books we find figures and facts that are bewildering. Hundreds of thousands of dollars of real estate sold. Staggering profits made and the end is not in sight but we are not satisfied. We are going to outdo ourselves for the rest of this year and we know we will. Our friends are more numerous than ever and their confidence is stronger than ever.

Now just before we pull down the curtain on the most successful period in the history of our business, we are going to invite you to be our guests the last Sunday of June at 77th-st. and Cicero-av.

On that day, as an act of appreciation, we are going to sell 35 lots including 7 corners at the low price of $495-$695 for corners. Real estate experts and other judges of values have appraised this property at $1,000 per lot on conservative basis.

This is not a sale of real estate. This is a get together party for all our friends. You can hire a taxi at our expense. Streets are paved all the way. Signs will be posted showing the way pointing to you the directions, and while this is going on do not forget the many bargains we have all over the southwest side.

"Miss Lorraine Carson, who lives at 550 Surf St., wished to find a roommate. She used a Tribune Want Ad and was able to select a congenial girl from the large number of callers answering her ad."

"When three of Mrs. Grace McKeever's family fell ill she phoned The Tribune a want ad that enabled her to hire a capable woman to help her through the crisis."

"Not only did Mrs. C. Hanson, 2642 N. Mozart St., sell her own camping outfit through The Tribune Want Ad she placed by telephone, but she was also able to dispose of a friend's camping equipment."

"Mrs. E. Siefert, 844 S. Highland Ave., Oak Park, was encouraged to give a detailed description of the delicatessen she wanted to sell. Her Tribune Want Ad ran Sunday, the store was sold Tuesday."

"Last December Mr. Leslie H. Hallgren of 1617 Waveland Avenue called up and placed his radio set on sale through a Tribune Want Ad. He sold the set to the first party who called for a demonstration."

"The loss of her lease compelled Mrs. Wm. J. Bramon, 10753 Prairie Ave., to vacate her shoe store. The disposal of the fixtures presented a temporary problem, but a Tribune Want Ad sold them to the first caller."

"The Tribune Want Ad Section has served Mrs. Lena Barber, 1121 S. Troy St., twice with complete success. She sold her restaurant and three lots for cash through two ads thlephoned to The Tribune."

"Mr. Milton W. Ellen, Jr., of the Con[illegible] Corporation, wished to hire a [illegible] signer, but met with no success until [illegible] phoned a Help Wanted Ad to The Tri[illegible] une. The ad brought him just the [illegible] he wanted."

Two good things of life

The famous Broadway Limited. 20 hours between New York and Chicago

You board the "Broadway Limited" at the Pennsylvania Station in New York. It is five minutes to three in the afternoon. Five o'clock finds you skirting Philadelphia. About seven you are leaving Harrisburg and entering the foothills of the Alleghanies. Pittsburgh at half after midnight. Fort Wayne, Indiana, early in the morning. And at five minutes to ten you alight at the Chicago Union Station. 20 hours from New York . . . 908 miles traveled . . . six states crossed . . . and an average speed of 45 miles an hour maintained.

A wonderful achievement of modern railroading you say? You have traveled in the utmost safety, comfort and luxury; the cuisine from hors-d'oeuvres to demi-tasse has been excellent and the service delightful. And then remember that your trip on the Pennsylvania's "Broadway Limited" is only one. Every day from New York and Chicago west-bound and east-bound trains set out . . . every day . . . winter . . . summer . . . rain . . . snow . . . sleet. The Pennsylvania Railroad has been operating the "Broadway Limited" for 15 years. The good things of life are always the same, always dependable. That is what makes them good things of life.

In Boston, shortly after the Civil War, Beacon Hill became familiar with a new brand of coffee. It was called Seal Brand and was sold by a firm known as Chase & Sanborn. The railroads pushed west. The Mississippi and Ohio valleys grew in population. Chase & Sanborn followed. The Far West was conquered. That country, too, knew Seal Brand Coffee.

The Gay Nineties saw a great World's Fair at Chicago. Chase & Sanborn Seal Brand Coffee was drunk in all the restaurants and cafes. And now in 1927 Seal Brand is sold in every town, in every city, everywhere in the United States. The quality of Seal Brand is a household word throughout America. In half a century Seal Brand has never varied. It, too, is one of the good things of life.

Wear them under the most trying hygienic handicap

Utter protection and security, plus an end to the problem of disposal

By ELLEN J. BUCKLAND, Registered Nurse

SUMMER days and moonlight nights, dances, tennis, motoring, yachting—don't let them bother you because of a difficult hygienic situation.

The old-time "sanitary pad" has been supplanted. There is now protection that is absolute, positive and certain—a new way that will make a great difference in your life; that will provide peace-of-mind under the most trying circumstances.

Kotex — what it does

Unknown a few years ago, 8 in every 10 women in the better walks of life have discarded the insecure "sanitary pads" of yesterday and adopted Kotex.

Filled with Cellucotton wadding, the world's super-absorbent, Kotex absorbs 16 times its own weight in moisture. It is 5 times as absorbent as the ordinary cotton pad. It discards easily as tissue. No laundry—no embarrassment of disposal.

It also thoroughly deodorizes, and thus ends all fear of offending.

Only Kotex itself is "like" Kotex

It is the only sanitary napkin embodying the super-absorbent Cellucotton wadding. It is the only napkin made by this company.

See that you get the genuine Kotex at better drug and department stores everywhere simply by saying "Kotex." Comes in sanitary sealed packages of 12 in two sizes, the Regular and Kotex-Super. Supplied also through vending cabinets in rest-rooms by West Disinfecting Co.

LOUISE BROOKS, of Broadway and the "Follies," has been selected as one of the new junior stars of Paramount. Wish she'd stop fussing with her hair. She's such a knockout when she wears it as she did when first we saw her on the screen. Which doesn't mean that she isn't stunning here.

ELINOR PATTERSON, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Patterson of Chicago, recently signed a long term contract with Universal. Her work as the nun in Morris Gest's spectacle "The Miracle" convinced the movie-makers she would do well in pictures. She has come through the photographic tests with flying colors.

DOLORES DEL RIO is wearing what is known in Hollywood as the "Dolores" shawl. This is a 1927 bathing fad, and is made of turkish toweling elaborately designed. It cannot be harmed by the elements, and sand is good for it.

AS COACH of a famous western university crew, Russell Callow is an authority on keeping men in tip-top condition. He writes:

"For the past two years, members of my crew squads have taken Fleischmann's Yeast during the training period. At first, many of the men were skeptical. It was necessary to make it a rule that Yeast be eaten regularly. This year I found this rule unnecessary. Practically all the men are sold on the use of Yeast. They are making a steady diet of it of their own accord.

"Throughout the time that Yeast has been used we have not been troubled with constipation, which is so often prevalent during training periods. And we have had no skin disorders, with the exception of one boil, which was shortly cleared up. What is more, the general condition of the men seemed improved. I do not intend to go through any future rowing season without Fleischmann's Yeast." Russell Callow, Seattle, Wash.

"Overworked, worried—

I was near a nervous collapse"

"LAST CHRISTMAS and the holiday season meant less than nothing to me. I was completely down and out from overwork and worry.

"I tried a rest. It brought only bills and added business expense. All too soon I was back in harness again, subsisting on milk and will power, with a little golf added to cheer.

"Each meal was a positive burden. Each dish of food was taken in doubt as to how it would be handled. My nights were sleepless, my mental condition a cause of anxiety to everyone.

"I ran along in this condition until about a month ago.

"One evening, throwing myself on the couch with the newspaper instead of going to the dinner table, I read of Fleischmann's Yeast. Impressed, I arranged for three cakes a day.

"The results were these: good sleep, good appetite, good digestion and a daily increase in strength. In short I am now about 100%, and all from thirty days' regular use of Fleischmann's Yeast."

J. M. Davis, Hollywood, Calif.

A MIRACLE?—call it what you will! Yet literally on every hand his experience is being duplicated. One person in every third American family is today a user of Yeast for Health.

A corrective food, that is what yeast is—not a medicine. Grown in a nutritious extract of malt and grain, yeast is composed of millions upon millions of tiny living plants.

Yeast keeps the system internally clean. And healthily active. It purifies the digestive and intestinal tract, preventing the absorption of dangerous poisons by the blood, correcting indigestion and clearing the unhealthy skin. It strengthens the sluggish muscles of elimination, gradually overcoming constipation.

Your grocer has Fleischmann's Yeast. Buy several days' supply at a time and keep in a cool dry place. Write for a free copy of the latest booklet on Yeast for Health. Health Research Dept. N-789, The Fleischmann Company, 701 Washington Street, New York City.

"I WAS GROWING FRANTIC. For years my system had been constantly clogged, resulting in a most irritating skin condition. Small white blotches were always appearing. And worst of all, my troubles seemed steadily to grow worse. I was about in despair—did not know what to do.

"It was at this time that a friend urged me to try eating Yeast morning and evening. It may sound foolish, but as I had tried nearly everything else I concluded I might as well try Yeast too, even though I did not see how it could possibly help.

"Well, I started to eat it—and the change in the way I felt was marvelous. My system was no longer clogged, my complexion became smooth and clear—till today I can face the sunlight without fear. To everyone who asks me how it is done I say, 'Simply eat Fleischmann's Yeast regularly'." Helen Broderick, Freeport, N. Y.

RIGHT

MME. ROSA RAISA, prima donna lyric soprano of the Chicago Opera Company.

"MY DUTIES as the leading dramatic soprano of the Chicago Opera Company, together with my concert tours, proved a great strain. I found myself lacking in ambition. I suffered from a general run down condition. And I had lost my natural complexion. Naturally, I was heartbroken and searched in vain for a remedy. A friend suggested Fleischmann's and I at once started taking it daily. Immediately I began to regain my lost complexion and in only a short time I was myself again. Now when I feel that I am a bit run down I take Fleischmann's Yeast, and I also prescribe it to my friends." Madame Rosa Raisa, Chicago, Ill.

Millions have found this easy natural way to feel themselves again

Eat three cakes of Fleischmann's Yeast regularly every day, one cake before each meal: just plain in small pieces, or on crackers, in fruit juice, milk or water. For constipation physicians say to dissolve one cake in hot water (not scalding) before meals and at bedtime. (Be sure that a regular time for evacuation is made habitual.) Dangerous cathartics will gradually become unnecessary.

No half-way verdict—Camel is supreme

THE American people have had many favorites. But there's never been a choice like Camel.

Camel is the most popular cigarette this nation ever had. Millions unite to place it first, and there's no comparison. Camel is supreme.

There must be reasons back of such a preference. There must be mountain-high quality in this famous cigarette to make millions join in saying, "I will have only Camel."

That is true. Camel quality is just as supreme as its leadership. In Camel, no substitute has ever been made for quality. No compromise has ever been made with expense. For Camels, the world's largest tobacco organization buys the choicest Turkish and Domestic tobaccos grown. There simply are no better tobaccos or blending.

If you don't yet know that supreme tobacco enjoyment, try Camels. All the taste and fragrance, all the mild and mellow pleasure you ever hoped to find! We invite you to compare them with any cigarette made, regardless of price.

PERMANENT WAVING
AS THEY DO IT OVER THERE

The Eugène Wave has been the pride of French and English hairdressers for many years. Indeed, nine-tenths of the fine establishments abroad employ the Eugène Method exclusively.

Now, Eugène Permanent Waving is available in America, and there are expert Eugène-trained operators everywhere. The fine shops in every city have been quick to adopt the Eugène Method because in its perfected technique lies the secret of flawless, flowing, natural waves.... It is true they cost a trifle more, but they are so obviously worth it.

In Eugène waving, the hair is wound dry, instead of being drenched in chemical solutions. Thanks to the patented Eugèneol Perforated Sachet, countless tiny pressure-jets of clean, white steam do all the work that was formerly done by baking the chemically drenched hair. The Eugène Method is the gentle method using the mildest waving ingredients known to permanent waving.

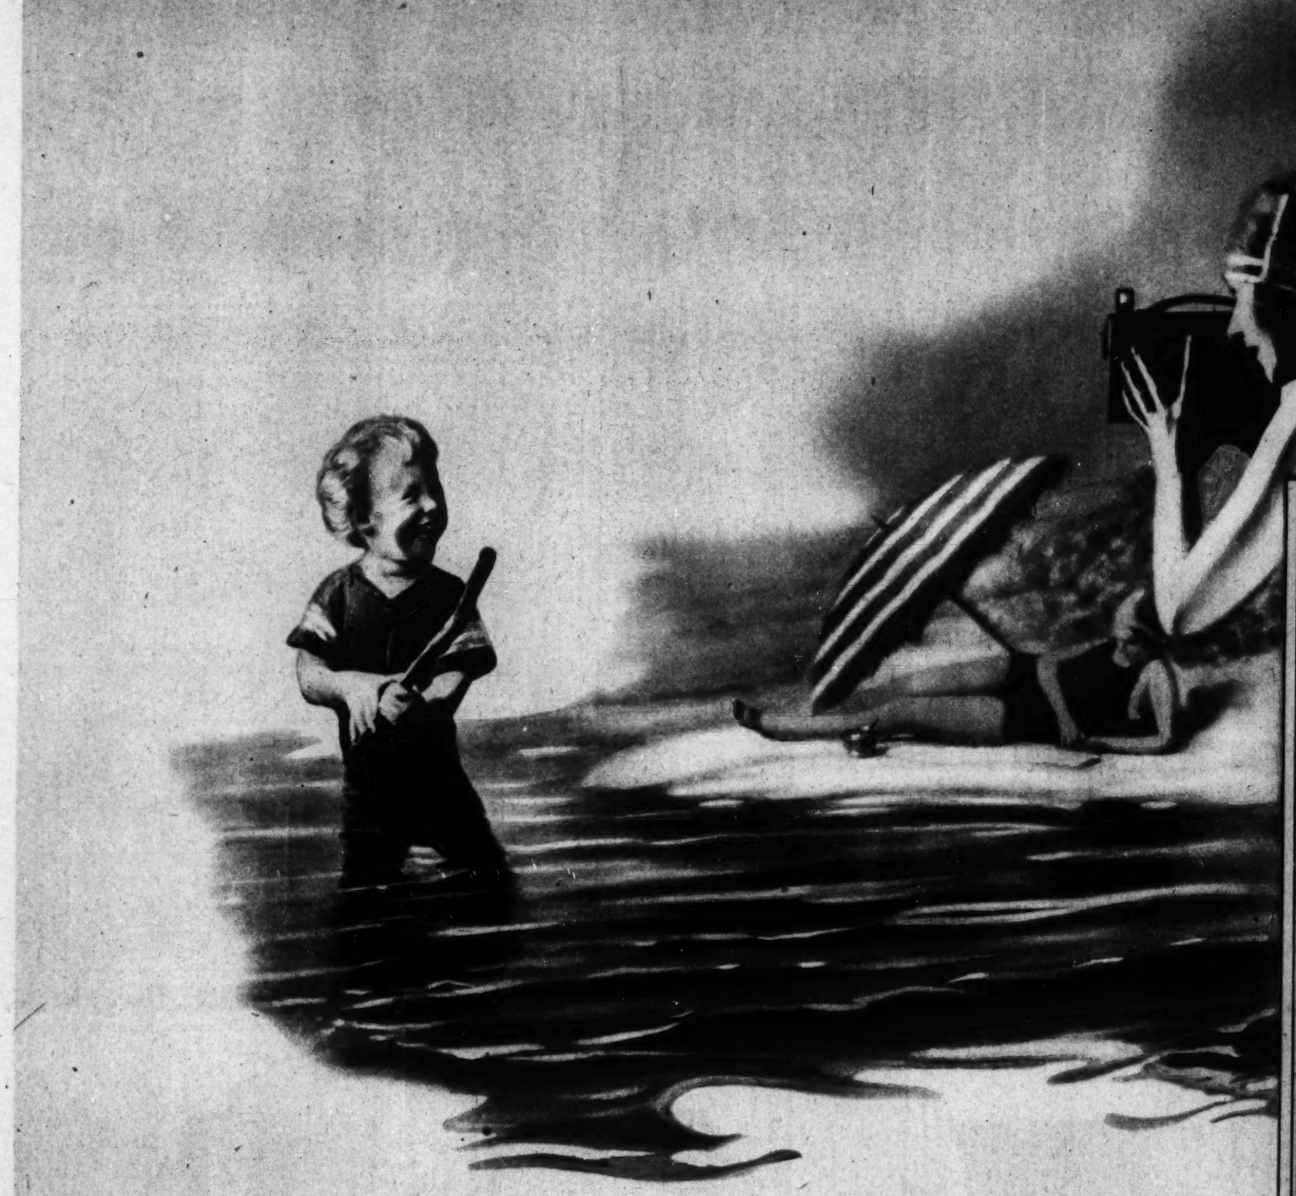
"I never would have believed making movies could be so simple"

—From a woman owner of Ciné-Kodak, the simplest of movie cameras.



You may sight the Ciné-Kodak either at waist height or eye level—an exclusive feature in cameras using amateur-standard (16 m/m.) width film.

A click of the switch on your Kodascope projector, and the picture you've made is in action on your screen.

Anyone can make good movies with a Ciné-Kodak.

It is all as easy as this:

In your hand is your Ciné-Kodak. Before you is your moving subject.

You sight your camera. As you press a button, a shutter whirls inside, and the film slides swiftly behind the ever-focused lens.

Instantly and continuously every action within the scene before you, every changing sequence of light and shadow, every expression of individuality, is registered for all time on your film. You are taking your first movie!

Another touch of your finger, and the shutter stops. Your movie is made. You are ready for your next one.

"You press the button . . . we do the rest."

Then, no troublesome developing. No mistakes. We finish your films at no extra cost, and return them to you. And you are ready to make romance, adventure, affection, sports, and humor live again on your screen.

Your audience gathers. Your film is in your Kodascope. You darken the room. You press another button.

Crisp and clear the scene flashes itself in swift light and shade upon your silver screen. The amateur actors or the unconscious subjects re-act their parts.

There is a stir of surprise,—a murmur of interest,—a ripple of sudden laughter,—then silence,—then applause. Then:—"Run that one over again!"

You are showing your own Motion Pictures.

"Your own movies!" It is all as easy as that. For the day of the new sport, the new art, the new personal ability, is here. The months and years of experiment are past. The Ciné-Kodak is not a toy. It is an efficient, compact and simplified device for making motion pictures. Thousands are using it with professional results.

Kodak Cinegraphs—Something New

To supplement your program of personal movies, Kodak Cinegraphs, 100-foot reels covering a wide variety of subjects, comedy, drama, travel, cartoons, are now available at your dealer's. Price $7.50 per reel—and the reel becomes a permanent feature of your film library.

Ciné-Kodak weighs only 5 lbs. Loads in daylight with amateur standard (16m/m) Ciné-Kodak safety film, in the yellow box.

Full length films, which constitute a complete entertainment in themselves, and include the biggest screen successes of famous stars, may be secured at a modest rental from the nearest Kodascope Library.

A complete outfit, for movie taking and projection, may be had for as little as $140.

Thousands of Kodak dealers are now prepared to show and explain the Ciné-Kodak to you. If your dealer is not yet ready, write us for the new Ciné-Kodak booklet which tells how you can use the Ciné-Kodak artistically, swiftly, accurately and economically. Your copy will come to you, without charge, when you sign and mail this coupon.

AROUND HORN

By Carl Clausen

A Boyhood Grudge Is Settled When a Ship Goes Down in a Hurricane and a Man Shows the White Feather in the Face of Danger.

ILLUSTRATED BY GARY SHEAHAN.

The order came to his ears like a death knell.

CAPT. AUSTIN received his sailing orders from Jay Sprohl, the I. O. N. C.'s new general manager in the Inter-Ocean Navigation company's executive office, below whose twenty-eighth floor window the bay of New York lay sunk in a dense March fog. From where he sat Capt. Austin could see the pedestal of the Statue of Liberty, The rest of the figure was swathed in mist.

Ellis and Governor's islands were clear and distinct; not because they were nearer but because at that moment a low flying gust of wind from the Hudson river had driven a lane through the fog, as clear cut as if it had been sliced out with a knife. At the extremity of that lane Austin could just make out his ship, the full rigged Endymion, anchored in the bay off Staten island.

Broad bowed little tugboats, important as pouter pigeons, breasted the Hudson current with barges trailed at the end of their humming hawsers. An incoming New Orleans packet clamored for right of way at a Weehawken ferry, which tossed back a defiant screech in a minor key. The steam blasts from their sirens dissolved in the mist almost before their sound reached Capt. Austin's ears.

His dark eyes moved back to where his ship swung on her cable, phantomlike in the distance, flying mist trailing from her slender masts and tapering yardarms, while her death warrant and possibly his own—the thought made him pause and search Sprohl's face for an instant — was being signed in the mahogany veneered office higher in the air by a hundred feet than the gilt ball on her main top.

The envelope in his hand contained his orders neatly typewritten by Miss Carstin, Sprohl's private secretary. The Endymion was to proceed to Melbourne, Australia, with her cargo of Michigan pine, and from there in ballast to Port Pirie, from where she was to take a cargo of ore back to New York via Cape Horn.

"Those are your orders, captain," Sprohl repeated for the second time. "Of course, if you'd rather not go"—he had meant to say "if you're afraid," but something in the young skipper's eyes made him couch his remark in more diplomatic language —"I'll get some one else to take her."

"I'm here to obey orders," Capt. Austin replied shortly. "If I'd rather not go I'd quit."

The implication in the other's tone infuriated him, but he kept his temper. He knew that Sprohl "had it in" for him and was only waiting for an excuse to discharge him. Sprohl had been elevated to the position of general manager on the death of Big Burt Crowell, the founder of the Inter-Ocean Navigation company, three months earlier.

At the skipper's "I'm here to obey orders," Sprohl's beefy face relaxed in a smile of porcine approbation. He ran a smooth, pink nailed hand over his carefully brushed blond back hair, as if figuratively patting himself on the back.

"That's the spirit we expect in our employés," he said.

Austin might have suggested here that Sprohl was an employé himself, but he ignored the thrust and said merely:

"You're to meet us in Port Pirie to arrange about the charter, you say?"

"Precisely. I want to establish personal contact with certain Australian firms. Miss Crowell is taking a party of friends on a South sea cruise in the Corsair in May. I shall go with the Corsair as far as Auckland, New Zealand, and catch the Melbourne packet there."

Austin dropped his eyes. The berth as skipper of the Crowell yacht Corsair was his by right of succession. It had been given to some one else the year before through favoritism. Edith Crowell was Big Burt's daughter. Like Sprohl, she was fair, but not in his beefy, blond way. Austin remembered her first as a quiet little blue eyed girl with pigtails who had visited the ships with Big Burt on his inspection tours, later as a debutante with bobbed hair and a sturdy figure, later still as a young woman with serious eyes, a friendly mouth, and a complexion that bespoke health and sane living. Rumors had come to Austin's ears that Edith Crowell had refused Sprohl so often that she had half made up her mind to put a stop to the repeated proposals by marrying him.

Austin glanced at Sprohl. The presence of the general manager of a shipping concern as large as the Inter-Ocean at a port of lading ten thousand miles from his desk was an unheard of thing. The skipper knew that it was only an excuse to be a member of Miss Crowell's yachting party as far as Auckland.

"I see," said he. "I shall want a wireless outfit installed before we clear for the Horn. The boys knocked two holes in one of the stern plates chipping rust yesterday."

Sprohl's white, almost invisible eyebrows went up.

"Not one cent for unnecessary equipment," he replied harshly. "They'll make us scrap her in a year or so."

Capt. Austin remained silent and his face impassive. Only his dark eyes gave any indication of what was going on in his mind as he put the envelope with the sailing orders in his pocket.

The two men were about the same age—in the middle thirties. Their enmity dated back to the time when Sprohl as office boy, with a mistaken estimate of his own powers of authority, had essayed to bar the way to the cashier's desk to Austin, the cabin boy, presenting a money order from his skipper. The barring proceedings went slightly astray. Young Sprohl had emerged from them collarless, tieless, and with a very black eye which two pounds of raw beefsteak had been unable to reduce to normalcy. He had also come out of the scrimmage with a deep and deadly hatred for Austin. Being revengeful, he had never forgotten. As he rose in the service of the I. O. N. C. he lost no opportunity to injure the other.

It had never been any overt act upon which Austin could put his finger. Sprohl was cunning. It had been merely transferences to the hardest vessels, a mate's berth delayed two years, a dig here, an unjust display of favoritism there, for Sprohl was able as well as cunning, and his rise to one executive position after another had been rapid. Austin knew that if it had not been for Capt. Anderson of the Endymion dying in midocean and because of his own record breaking run to port with a cargo of nitrates he would never have risen to the post of captain in the I. O. N. C. service. Sprohl would have prevented it.

Before being transferred to the Endymion as mate, he had been second and first officer of the Corsair for two years. He had therefore seen a good deal of Edith Crowell, more than was good for his own peace of mind, in fact, but he had never permitted himself to forget that he was an employé of her father. After his transfer to the Endymion—engineered, he had no doubt, by Sprohl —his sensitiveness had prevented him from accepting an invitation to a dinner party at the Crowell mansion on upper Fifth avenue when the Endymion happened to be in port, but he still numbered Edith's little perfumed note among his choicest possessions.

"A wireless is not unnecessary equipment," he asserted, arising. "It's murder to send my crew around the Horn without one."

"Ships have gone around there before wireless was invented," Sprohl reminded him with rising asperity.

"No ship in the Endymion's condition with a cargo of ore and in the dead of winter," Capt. Austin replied, then turned on his heel and left the office.

As he emerged from the building and crossed the sidewalk, a motor drew up at the curbing and a young woman alighted. She looked up brightly at him and held out her gloved hand.

"How d' you do, Capt. Austin?" she said. "I heard that the Endymion was in port. I half hoped I might run into you."

The young skipper saluted, then took her hand.

"We are going out this evening, Miss Crowell," he replied, for want of anything better to say. His regard for her made him ill at ease.

"You're a most elusive person since you've become captain," she chided gently.

"A skipper's duties are many," he said.

She nodded.

"I suppose you will be too busy to take tea with me at the house this afternoon, since your ship is leaving this evening?"

"My mate attends to the details of getting ready for sea. I shall be delighted to take tea with you."

"At four?"

He replied that four o'clock would suit him very well.

THE Crowell mansion on Fifth avenue in the Seventies had been built when Thirty-fourth street was still the principal retail thoroughfare of New York and when Madison Square had not yet surrendered to the "Roaring Forties" its position as the hub of commerce. It was a rather ugly old brownstone pile of Norman architecture, but spacious and homelike within.

Edith Crowell received him in the high ceilinged living room, whose arched and heavily mullioned windows overlooked Central park. The great room with its massive furniture and tapestried rugs lay sunk in shadows, deepened by the leaping flames in the wide fireplace. Her hair caught dancing lights as she arose to greet him.

"I like to sit and moon by the grate on a dreary afternoon like this," she said.

He took her hand. She was like some lovely young neophyte tending temple fires, he thought.

"It is one of the things that makes a sailor wonder sometimes why he sticks to the sea," he found himself replying easily, to his surprise.

"Then the sailor should get himself a grate," she retorted.

Repartee had not been included in his sea curriculum. He covered up his deficiency with a smile and took the chair which she had drawn up before the fire for him, opposite her own. They discussed the future of the Inter-Ocean Navigation company and then returned to the more significant topics of the past and of their old friendship.

"I had rather hoped that you would have accepted the captaincy of the Corsair a year ago," she said, "but I suppose that the chances for advancement in the active fleet are greater."

"It was never offered to me," he replied.

She paused in the act of refilling his cup and glanced up at him in surprise.

"Father said that you had told Mr. Sprohl that you preferred to remain on the Endymion," she told him.

"Mr. Crowell was misinformed," he replied.

"You never told Mr. Sprohl that?"

"Hardly. I was mate then. It would have been insanity to refuse a promotion."

She passed him the filled teacup.

"I wondered at your refusal at the time. Mr. Sprohl explained that you were waiting for Capt. Anderson's retirement."

"Mr. Sprohl was"—"lying," he wanted to say—"under the wrong impression," he did say.

The girl's face grew thoughtful.

"If I ask you a personal question you won't be offended?" she queried.

He shook his head, wondering what was coming.

"You and Mr. Sprohl are not on very good terms—am I right?"

"He's my superior and a very able man," Austin fenced. "I do not allow my differences with him to interfere with my duties to the company."

"Of course not." She regarded him warmly. "But such differences do exist."

"I have not said so," he replied stiffly.

"I admire your loyalty," she said softly, "and I appreciate Mr. Sprohl's abilities as a manager. You know, of course, that he is going to Australia in an effort to open up new markets for us?"

"Yes, I'm to meet him at Port Pirie," Austin said.

"He's going as far as Auckland with the Corsair —to save the company traveling expenses. You know that, too, I assume?"

"So he informed me."

Here it seemed appropriate to broach the subject which he had made up his mind to discuss with her, for the safety of his crew and at the risk of incurring the stigma of disloyalty.

"I suppose you know that the Endymion is the only vessel of the fleet that is not equipped with wireless," he finished, after giving her the reasons for the necessity of its installation.

"I know, but I hadn't given it a thought," she confessed. "It must, of course, be installed at once."

"It's too late to have it done here now," he said, "and I'd rather wait until we get to Melbourne. It'll avoid friction with Sprohl. As it is, he'll probably never forgive me for having gone over his head."

As he spoke he realized the delicacy of his position. He knew that Sprohl would lose no opportunity to make the most of it, but the welfare of his men came first. This was the code of the sea. Personal considerations came second. She must have divined some of the thoughts that were passing through his mind, for she said presently:

"Suppose I let you draw on my personal account for the installation. Mr. Sprohl need not know anything about it, then, until it's been done."

"That is very good of you," he replied.

When he arose to leave she went to her desk and returned with a blank check, signed.

"If you will fill this out for the cost of the installation my bank will honor it," she said as she handed him the slip of paper.

He clicked his heels together and saluted.

"On behalf of my crew, I thank you," he said.

She smiled and held out her hand.

"Capt. Austin," she said, "I know what it means to a man of your temperament to humble yourself as you have done to me this afternoon. I honor you for it."

He raised her hand to his lips.

"Your graciousness and understanding have made a disagreeable task pleasant," he said. "My men shall be informed of your generosity."

PORT PIRIE is a town almost devoid of vegetation. Day and night the furnaces of the great smelters belch poisonous fumes in which neither tree nor grass can breathe.

Man alone, perhaps by his gifts of adaptability, manages to survive. They say that the lungs of the average Port Pirean are made of sole leather. Be that as it may, he seems to thrive on the noxious air, consumes vast quantities of tea and ale, and does his eight hour stint in the smelters or on the wharves handling the small, heavy bags of refined ore, and is apparently happy and healthy.

These bags, which are less than two feet square, weigh in the neighborhood of a hundred and fifty pounds each. The ore is silver, lead, and zinc with the slag removed, almost pure metal. A ship with its hold two-fifths full of it is laden to the Plimsoll mark. It is a cargo that all mariners dread. At its worst the whole bottom has been known to drop out of a vessel thus loaded in a heavy sea, with the instant loss of all hands before a davit tackle could be hooked or a lifeboat lashing unshipped. At its best the trip around the Horn with such a cargo, in the dead of winter, is one of the things that keeps underwriters awake of nights.

The Endymion had finished loading her ore and the crew was battening down the hatches under the mate's directions when Jay Sprohl walked, cane in hand, down the gangway with his eyes on the aerials stretched between her three lofty tops. Kennerly, the mate, a man of sixty, who had grown gray in the service of the I. O. N. C., was smoking his pipe over the railing at the break of the poop.

"The Beauty of the Blue Train"

By Frank Swinnerton. A breath-taking story of a girl, an adventurer, and a kidnaping on the Riviera.

Florence Burner with outer jacket cut away to show how flame is focused on the cooking vessel. There is no wick, for the Florence operates on the most advanced principle of combustion engineering, mixing the vapor from kerosene with heated air. This assures complete combustion and intense heat. Now you see how focused heat saves your time and money.

New Model Florence with Built-In Oven

The Florence Oil Range pictured at the left is the last word in oil range design. No other oil range at a price so low offers all these advantages and refinements. Study carefully the new built-in oven. This is the type of construction which has the unqualified approval of domestic science experts. It produces better baking and gives the range a substantial and thoroughly modern appearance. The new spacious all-grid top is another outstanding improvement. Plenty of room for simmering, warming and cooking—all at the same time. Note also the single giant burner under the oven, replacing two standard burners. This uses less fuel and insures ideal heat control. This model comes only in the four-burner size. The Standard Model Florence with removable oven in 2-, 3-, and 4-burner sizes.

Quicker Meals—Cooler Kitchens

Focused Heat

applies heat to the cooking in the scientific way

BECAUSE of the focused heat principle, the wickless Florence Oil Range sends all the heat from the burners directly into the bottom of pot, kettle or pan. There is no waste heat. No long distance for the heat to travel.

This concentration of heat, at close range, makes quick work of cooking. It puts the heat into the food and not into the kitchen. The Florence burners—note them in the picture—are close up to the grid-top, only 2½ inches below. But that's not all. Florence burners force air inside the flame, producing an intensely hot gas that sends more heat into the cooking in a given time from a gallon of kerosene than any other high power oil range. What you really burn is gas and air. Hence your fuel lasts a long time.

New luxurious built-in oven—single giant burner

An improvement that makes the Florence a better-cooking, better-looking range is the new built-in oven. Oven and mantel are made in one unit and firmly attached to the range. This is the type of range domestic science experts most highly recommend. The oven cannot get askew. You can always be certain that it is placed properly for the most efficient oven cookery. The Florence is the only range with all of these quality features that can be had at so low a price.

This oven is a joy to every woman who bakes. It has the famous "baker's arch" at the top, and at the bottom a patented heat-spreader. In the door is a temperature dial. Note the single giant burner for oven service. This gives ideal heat control and can be operated more cheaply than two standard burners. With the single giant burner this four-burner Florence is the equal of a five-burner range of the old style.

New and bigger cooking surface

One of the most notable advances ever made in oil range construction is the new all-grid top on the Florence. This spacious cooking top gives you ample room for an unusually large number of dishes. While you are cooking over the burners you can push other dishes aside to simmer or to keep warm. And there is no danger of spilling, for this new grid top is perfectly smooth.

You can see from the picture that the Florence is a beautiful range. Black and gray heavily enameled surfaces. No wicks. Easy to keep clean. No trouble to operate. Just strike a match and light the asbestos kindlers.

Florence Oil Ranges are sold by more than 25,000 hardware, furniture and department stores. At the right is a partial list of dealers in Chicago and nearby towns. Visit the dealer nearest you and see the Florence in operation in his store. If there is no Florence dealer listed in your neighborhood, write or phone us.

New Florence Water Heater with Thermostatic Control. Pictured at the left is the new Florence Water Heater, the only oil-burning water heater ever marketed that is entirely automatic. All you have to do is light the pilot light and thereafter you have a continuous supply of hot water with no further trouble than renewing the fuel supply as needed. An ingenious thermostat increases the heat when the water cools off and lowers the flame to just the right temperature when the tank is full of hot water. This heater can also be operated by hand just like any ordinary water heater if desired.

AROUND THE HORN

By Carl Clausen

He winked at the boson, who was driving home the wedges of the after hatch, below him.

"This is where the sparks begin to fly," he said out of the corner of his mouth and without removing his pipe. "If I were the Old Man I'd skin him alive and nail his perfumed hide to bulkhead."

To the crew of a sailing vessel their skipper, no matter how young, is always "the Old Man."

"'Ere's 'opin 'e does," the boson grinned as he drove the last wedge home with a grunt.

CAPT. AUSTIN, working at his desk in the cabin, looked up from his task as Jay Sprohl stepped across the threshold with fury in his pale blue eyes.

"You've installed a wireless against my orders," he began, before the skipper had a chance for a word of greeting. He thrust his head across the desk and pounded upon it with his cane. "The I. O. N. C. will never pay the bill."

Capt. Austin pushed the cane aside, then opened a drawer and took from it Edith Crowell's check, which he had filled out and made payable to the firm that had installed the apparatus. He held up the slip of paper before Sprohl's eyes.

"The bill will be paid. I'm mailing the check this morning," he said quietly.

Sprohl glared at the signature.

"So you've gone over my head, you—you cheap petticoat politician," he sneered.

Austin returned the check to the drawer and arose. He was slow to anger, but the epithet made him see red.

"Get out," he said, "before I throw you out."

Sprohl's face was working. The look in the skipper's eyes told him that he had gone too far.

"You dare order me out of one of my own ships?" he spluttered. "You're discharged—fired, d'you hear?"

"I heard you," Austin replied. "But first you're going ashore—or over the side—whichever you prefer. I'm the master of this vessel until I receive your notice in writing. Now get out!"

"You'll receive it in short order," the other rejoined. He whirled about and stamped up the companionway stairs. "Mr. Mate," he bellowed at Kennerly, "call your men together. I want to speak with them."

"Too busy," said Kennerly. "We're battening down and getting ready for sea. The tug'll be alongside in an hour. Captain's orders, sir."

"My orders are that you call your men together!" Sprohl shouted.

Kennerly sucked imperturbably at his pipe.

"Sorry, sir. I'm responsible only to the skipper. All right, boys," this to the crew, "go on with your work! Boson, send your watch aloft to slush down the spars."

"Aye, aye, sir."

"You refuse to obey my orders?" Sprohl demanded, his face livid.

"If you please, sir, yes, sir." His hand rose to his cap as the skipper's head appeared in the companionway. "Hatches all battened down, cap'n." He jerked his thumb at Sprohl. "Shall I throw this insect into the creek, sir?"

Sprohl waved his arms windmill fashion as he backed down the gangway.

"I'll get you two, if it's the last act of my life," he stormed.

"Applesauce," said Kennerly.

"You're fired, too," Sprohl told him, beside himself with rage now.

"So's your Aunt Lottie," the mate retorted cheerfully.

Now, "slush" is a combination of melted tallow and grease left over from the cook's galley, with a dash of pine tar to make it flow easily when applied to the spars. Needless to say, the grease from the cook's galley is somewhat rancid before it goes into the slush bucket. In tropic climes like the south Australian, slushing down is no job for sensitive nostrils. Sprohl was waving his cane at the new stretched aerial. He seemed about to frame a fitting retort to Kennerly's cheerful observation anent his relative, one generation removed, when a gob of slush came hurtling through the air and took him fair in the mouth.

"You there, in the maintop!" the mate sang out. "You're docked a dollar for wasting a can of slush."

"All right, sir," the voice replied meekly from aloft. "It was worth it, sir."

Gagging, Sprohl staggered down the gangway with his handkerchief at his mouth.

Late that afternoon, when the Endymion was anchored in the roadstead ready to go out at daylight, Capt. Austin was rowed ashore by four of his men for his clearing papers and to hire another sailor in place of one who had deserted the ship in Melbourne. No official word of discharge had come from Sprohl. The skipper knew why. The worst punishment the general manager could inflict would be nothing compared with the trip around the Horn with the cargo of lead ore in the dead of winter. Besides, he'd not be able to find a new skipper nearer than Melbourne or Sydney, which would mean a delay of several days.

Capt. Austin found Sprohl waiting for him in the caste-room of the clearing house. The general manager tossed him an envelope.

"Yours and your mate's formal discharges, to take effect immediately upon arrival at New York," he said. "Also orders to go out this evening instead of tomorrow morning."

"I won't be ready to weigh anchor until morning," the skipper replied. "The boarding house runner could not guarantee to have the new man aboard until late this evening. His sailors are afraid of the trip. They've heard about the holes we knocked in her chipping rust."

"Man or no man, you'll go out tonight or not at all," Sprohl said.

"You mean that you're going to send us around the Horn short handed?" Capt. Austin asked quietly.

"I mean that, man or no man, you'll go out at sundown or bring your things ashore."

The skipper looked at him in silence for several moments.

"Very well," he said, finally.

At his change of tone Sprohl smiled a crooked smile. Had the general manager not been taken up with gloating over the other's apparent discomfiture, the look in the skipper's dark eyes as he pocketed the envelope would have warned him.

Upon leaving Sprohl Capt. Austin went straight to the Empire hotel, a sailors' boarding house run by one Lefty McBurr, a gentleman of nocturnal habits and sanguine temperament. It is said of McBurr that once during a dearth of sailors he had shanghaied his own grandfather for an advance note of three pounds ten, sterling, and had shipped him aboard a four masted Nova Scotiaman, with a pair of leaky rubber boots, a donkey's breakfast that no donkey would be ass enough to breakfast on, a one-and-nine-penny red checked shirt, and a pair of blue dungarees.

With this person Capt. Austin was closeted for half an hour in earnest conversation. At the end of that time the two men shook hands.

"Ten guineas if you have your man aboard by sundown," the skipper said.

A man in the bow of the lifeboat threw him a bowline.

"He'll be there, captain—with bells on," McBurr assured him.

THREE days later the Endymion, with her yards squared, was running the Tasman sea before a twelve knot breeze. Capt. Austin was sitting in his cabin looking through the skylight at the flapping of the clewed up cross-jack when Kennerly, the mate, came into the cabin and saluted him.

"The new hand wants a word with you, sir," he said, with a wink.

"All right, Mr. Kennerly, bring him down."

The mate left and returned presently with the "new hand." He was a pitiable sight. Not the dapper, insolent Sprohl of three days ago, but an abject creature, recently emerged from the effects of Lefty McBurr's knockout drops, to the unerring potency of which many a luckless son of Neptune could have testified.

"What d'you want, my man?" said the skipper, kindly.

"I—I want you to put me ashore at the nearest point—or take the consequences," Sprohl snarled.

"Nearest point we touch is New York. Anything else?"

Sprohl stood swaying before the two men, his fists opening and closing. The defiance of the trapped was in his pale blue, bloodshot eyes.

"The penalty for kidnaping is life imprisonment," he said between his teeth.

"Kidnaping?" the skipper repeated. He glanced at his mate in well simulated surprise. "I hope you signed this man on properly, Mr. Kennerly?"

"Yes, sir. He's down on the articles as John Brown, ordinary seaman. A bit under the weather, he was, sir, when they brought him aboard, but everything's perfectly regular and shipshape."

"You're a fine pair of birds—adding conspiracy to the crime of kidnaping," Sprohl sneered. "You'll rot in Sing-Sing, or I'm not general manager of this line."

Capt. Austin tapped his head significantly.

"He says he's general manager of this line, Mr. Kennerly, d'you hear?"

The mate nodded.

"They often go batty from the bye-bye drops, sir," he said. "He'll be all right after a week or so holystoning decks."

"You dare put me to work!" Sprohl shouted. "I'll—I'll——"

"Leave us for a moment, Mr. Kennerly, please," the skipper said. "I want a word alone with him."

"Yes, sir."

"Now, my man," Capt. Austin said after the door had closed on the mate, "either you go to work or into the brig. As far as I'm concerned you're John Brown, ordinary seaman. Ashore you may be Jay Sprohl, general manager of the I. O. N. C. Understand, I don't admit that I know you are. Maybe you're telling the truth. I've only your word for it." He cocked his head to one side. "I admit there's a resemblance, but I can't let that interfere with the running of this ship. You see, I was ordered out at sundown with no time to choose or pick. Had to take the first thing that was offered. Didn't dare to go around the Horn short handed." He paused. "Now, then, are you going to be pleasant about it and turn to, or do I have to clap you in irons for refusing duty on the high seas?"

"I'll—see you in hell first," Sprohl bellowed.

"Very well, my man. We won't quarrel over it. But I warn you not to use any more violent language to your superior officers. It isn't done, and I as master of this vessel won't tolerate it. Ashore you may be cock of the walk, but when you're aboard this ship on the high seas I'm the big boss. Don't forget that." He raised his voice. "Mr. Kennerly, come here, please. Give this man twenty-four hours to recover and turn to. If he refuses to work, clap the irons on him and put him on bread and water until he changes his mind."

"Yes, sir." Kennerly caught Sprohl by the collar. "Come on, General Debility. The foc'sle for you, and no airs, or the starboard watch'll knock seven kinds of hell out of you."

As Sprohl was a hearty eater and fond of the good things of life, four days in the brig on hardtack and water sufficed to make him see reason. On the evening of the fifth day, when the Endymion was bucking the tide rip of Cooks straits between the North and South island of New Zealand, he was on his knees holystoning the deck with the starboard watch. A suit of dungarees and a cap had been given him from the slop chest. His tender hands were raw and chapped from the rough holystone and salt water. He obeyed orders sullenly and with hate smoldering in his bloodshot eyes, but he obeyed them.

Now and then he straightened up and stared at the two shore lines to port and starboard, as if calculating his chances of escape. A coastwise Lyttleton bound steamer hugged the land on the inside passage of the Brothers, two tall granite spurs that rose out of the sea to port. A topsail schooner on her starboard tack, bound for Hokitiki on the west coast, cut across the Endymion's wake a mile astern. Her outer jib rose dripping from the molten sunset sea as she breasted the long western swells. He glanced at the aerial above the Endymion's swelling sails. His knowledge of wireless was confined to what the operator of the Corsair had taught him in idle moments, the S. O. S. and one or two simple messages. He knew that the Corsair was still in New Zealand waters. His pale blue eyes narrowed as he dropped to his knees and fell to work again at a peremptory order from the second mate.

The Endymion carried no regular wireless operator. The mates had been instructed by the company which installed the outfit in the sending of calls for help, giving the ship's positions, and answering simple calls. Consequently the wireless room was deserted most of the time, and Sprohl found no difficulty in tiptoeing in there after dark. Shutting the door, he shot the bolt and proceeded to call the Corsair. He picked her up off Bank's peninsula and told his little tale haltingly to the yacht's operator and ordered the Corsair to stand by the Endymion and take him off.

Before the reply came back, the door of the wireless room was burst open and Sprohl was yanked out of the chair by the second mate, whose watch on deck it was. Two men dragged him to the brig and put him in irons.

"Forty-eight hours on hard tack and water," was the skipper's sentence, relayed to Sprohl via Mr. Corson, the second mate, but couched in much more picturesque terms. Corson then went back to the wireless room and received the insistent Corsair's reply. It was brief:

"What's the row? EDITH CROWELL."

The second mate sent back the following message at the skipper's dictation:

"No row. Just giving an employé of the company a taste of his own medicine. AUSTIN, Master, Endymion."

There was no reply from the Corsair to this message.

THREE weeks later, after a swift run across the south Pacific, the Edymion ran into a southeasterly gale off Cape Horn. It came at dark with a rush out of the antarctic. Her royals and topgallants had been furled an hour earlier, but even under the pressure of moderate canvas she keeled to the blast as if cuffed by a giant hand. Sleet and hailstones hammered against her straining topsail. Green water roared over her lee bulwarks and white froth lashed the windward.

The order "All hands on deck" was unnecessary. Men fought their way instinctively across the hurricane swept deck to clew and buntlines as the mates let go the upper topsail halyards on the run.

Kennerly, at the main top with the port watch, barked out his orders, his grizzled head thrust forward into the teeth of the gale as if to defy it by the simple act of butting.

"Belay there to windward. Lee clewline! Two of you to the bunt. Clew her up, boys, before she pounds to pieces. Another drag on the clewline, boson. All right. Belay! Six men aloft and furl 'er. Boson, take the rest of the watch to the mizzen. For'ard, ahoy! Mr. Corson, lay aft with your spare men!"

"Aye, aye, sir! Coming, sir!"

"You there, Brown; aft with you!" The mate bawled at Sprohl, who was clawing his way blindly, hand over hand, along the weather pinrail through the driving sleet. "Boson, see that the new man goes aloft. No shirking on this hooker!"

Terror stabbed at Sprohl's vitals at the order. He lumbered aft in the wake of the men, found the cabin door, and flung himself through it. His respite was shortlived. Captain Austin dragged him forth and drove him on deck, and he found himself pulling the stiff, frozen ropes on the poop deck.

"Up and make fast!"

The order came to his ears like a death knell. He tried to lose his great bulk in the tangle of ropes under the fife-rail, but the mate's iron claws groped for him in the darkness and dragged him forth.

"Aloft with you—and step lively!"

Half paralyzed by terror, Sprohl scrambled into the weather rigging. The boots of the sailors stamped on his fingers in the dark as he clutched the ratlines and the fury of the wind forced him flat against the shrouds. Hailstones rattled on the back of his oilskin coat. He lost his sou'wester and the wind driven frozen pellets lashed his neck and throat like a cat-o'-nine-tails. He blubbered with fright, prodded from beneath by the mate's bellowed roars.

Presently he found himself on the yard, beneath which the frozen sail pounded and slatted in great, lunging strokes. He clawed at its glossy surface until his fingernails sprang blood. Once he was nearly knocked off the yard by the pounding sail, and retreated, knees shaking and sobbing with fright, to the crows' nest, only to be discovered there by the boson and driven out on the yard arm again.

He hardly dared to look down. From his perch the Endymion looked like a tiny, slender wedge, an insignificant chip wallowing in an immense whirlpool. Water, whipped to froth, buried her decks for minutes at the time. Its rending weight was transmitted to him by the trembling of the spar to which he clung with numb fingers. The air seemed a solid mass of frozen projectiles that came hurtling out of the blackness to windward and all but beat him into insensibility when he essayed to breathe. He whimpered with pain, unable to shield his face in the fear of letting go his grip, even with one hand, for a moment.

After what seemed like an eternity the sail was finally furled, without any effort on his part, and he found himself back on deck. There was even less safety here. Tons of water poured over the vessel's bulwarks. He flung his arms about the nearest object, bellowing with fear, his outcry choked to a splutter by the deluge. Water swirled about him, tugged at his body, sucked at his legs, and almost wrenched his arms from their sockets as he hung on.

When the water receded he crawled forward on hands and knees from hawse-bit to ringbolt and scuttled for cover under the foc'sle head. Dripping wet and shaking with cold from his immersion, he groped his way about the dark space. The banging of the anchor chains against the great capstans as the heavily laden Endymion dived into the seas made him jump with fright. At each dive twin jets of water shot through the hawse pipes and leaped at him with a terrific hydraulic force that all but knocked him off his feet. The timbers above his head groaned as tons of water collapsed upon them and cascaded down the slanting decks.

Cold and terror drove him forth again. Confused by the darkness and the roar of the gale, he did not know what was going on. He was merely aware of dark, shouting figures pulling at ropes, and he joined them because he was afraid to die alone. For hours he dragged his leaden feet about the swirling water and pulled ropes stiff with ice.

At ten o'clock the Endymion was hove to under bare poles with fore staysail and a double reefed spanker. Captain Austin struck four bells.

"Lay aft for a round of grog," he shouted, as the second couplet of double notes was borne away on the rush of the wind.

The second mate passed the tumbler from one to the other of the oilskin coated figures that came trooping up the starboard ladder to the hurricane swept poop deck.

"Boson, rouse the cook. Hot coffee for all hands. Starboard watch go below, but don't turn in. There'll be no sleep tonight. Mr. Carson, have one of the lads bring a pot of coffee aft as soon's it's ready."

"Aye, aye, sir."

The skipper fought his way to the companionway hatch and went below. The cuddy lamp swung wide in its gimbals as he opened the door of the messroom. Its flame leaped in the rush of air and went out. He groped for matches and relit it. The aneroid barometer on the wall was still falling. The storm had not reached its apex and probably wouldn't, he knew, until midnight or one o'clock in the morning.

He was standing listening to the drumming of the gale above his head when Kennerly came in.

"I had the boson sound the well," the mate said.

"Eighteen inches, sir."

The skipper nodded.

"After they have had their coffee, you'd better man the pumps. Work them watch on watch and save the men as much as you can. We've got a dirty night ahead of us."

"Yes, sir."

"How about the new hand? Doing his share?" the skipper asked.

"Mostly in the way, sir, but I keep him hopping with the rest."

"Very well, Mr. Kennerly. Keep your eye on him. I don't want to lose him overboard. Don't let him take any unnecessary chances."

"No fear, sir. It's all I can do to keep him from hiding out when a sea breaks. He's got the heart of a rabbit."

AT six bells Kennerly came below again.

"The water is gaining on us fast, sir," he told the skipper. "I just sounded the well. Over three feet, sir. Another plate must have sprung. Glass still falling?" he asked.

"Yes."

The two men regarded each other in silence.

"Looks like we've weathered the Horn for the last time, Kennerly."

"Hm," was the mate's only reply.

"Tell Corson to get the wireless working, and pass out another round of grog and keep all hands at the pumps."

"Yes, sir."

When his mate had gone, the skipper went to the locker and got out the life preservers and carried them into the messroom. Then he buttoned his oilskin coat tightly about his throat and went on deck with one of the life belts.

The Endymion was canted extravagantly to the gale, staggering through the mountainous seas with her heavy cargo like an overloaded pack animal wallowing in snowdrifts. She seemed to have lost all buoyancy and was ramming her way through the smother and blackness by sheer weight and stubbornness.

Capt. Austin made his way to the wheel and tied the life belt around the helmsman's waist, then he sent for Sprohl.

The general manager came staggering into the messroom, where the skipper was waiting for him. His matted hair lay plastered against his temples like a wig pushed askew, and his pale blue eyes regarded Capt. Austin stonily in the dim light of the swinging cuddy lamp.

"I sent for you, Sprohl, to tell you that we're foundering," the skipper said. "I thought you might like to know."

Sprohl's face showed green in the dim light. He stared with bulging eyes at the life belts on the floor. He tried to speak, but terror made him inarticulate.

"I hope that you realize to what pass your vindictiveness has brought you," the skipper went on. "I did not send for you to gloat over your predicament. When one is facing death little hates and personal differences seem rather futile and foolish. I wanted merely to tell you that I bear you no malice." He paused and held out his hand. "I hope you feel the same about me."

Sprohl made no movement. His lips were working.

"Have you tried to call for help?" he finally managed to stammer.

"Corson is calling now, but even if he succeeds in picking up a vessel they'll not be able to do us much good in a sea like this. They'll have their own hands full."

"Why don't you square the yards and run before it?" Sprohl demanded thickly.

"And be pooped by the first sea with this heavy cargo?" the skipper ejaculated. He shook his head. "Our only chance is to ride it out until she founders. At the rate she's taking water, that'll be about daylight."

"I refuse to believe it," Sprohl whimpered. "You're only trying to frighten me. Some more of your inhuman treatment."

Capt. Austin tossed the man one of the life preservers.

"Believe it or not," he said succinctly, "but if I were you, I'd put that belt on."

Corson, the second mate, came in just then.

"Picked up the Corsair at Punta Arenas, sir," he said. "They're coming at full speed."

Capt. Austin straightened up. His broad chest rose under a deep intake of breath.

"The Corsair!" he repeated. "Are you sure, Corson?"

"Yes, sure, sir."

"All right; keep in touch with them constantly."

"Yes, sir."

When the second mate was gone Sprohl said, triumphantly, "You can thank me for that. When Miss Crowell got my call off Bank's peninsula she followed us. The Corsair has probably been scouring the Pacific ocean for us. Your piratical conduct will cost you your ticket, or my name's not Sprohl."

. . . . . .

Daylight was just breaking when the Corsair hove to windward of the sinking Endymion and launched two of her great self-bailing lifeboats. As the first one crept around the stern to leeward Capt. Austin ordered his men into the waist of the stricken ship with their life preservers.

"The youngsters first!" he ordered. "Mr. Kennerly, please see that this order is observed. Knock the first man down who attempts to break it."

"Aye, aye, sir."

Every man present knew that this was for the benefit of Sprohl. Not one of them would have stepped out of his turn. The boat hove to within fifty feet of the Endymion, which was as near as it was safe to approach in the heavy sea.

"One at a time, lads," the skipper shouted. "Give them a chance to pick you up."

The first, a lad of sixteen, dove over the side. His

TEMPTING MENUS FOR THE WEEK

by Jane Eddington

Nectars and Summer Ambrosias

THE juices of fruits are nectars enough. (In the material or everyday world lemonades with fruit juices are given that name.) So we need not sigh for what the gods enjoyed, but rather say that in these juices we are taking what the gods provide. The sirups we make for sweetening the juices may equal that which the flowers distill for bee drinks. Quite human people can provide these, and in such variety as to please a multitude of tastes. It is a pity in summer days to be poor in such supplies, which is not saying that we should be extravagant. Since the cool spring waters are among the lost blessings of humanity, it is reasonable to find some agreeable substitute, though the tinkling ice in the glass is not so good.

All of which reminds us that the modest mean in human affairs has in general but an orphan's lot—no parents and few others to love it. In the business of beverages this modest mean suffers almost total neglect—always the phenomenon most observable is too much or too little. A Greek word equivalent to the word "guzzle" dates back to something like 400 B. C. And yet one of the most quoted Greek mottoes was "In nothing too much."

Hot weather is drying weather, and a plain, practical view of the matter, without the warnings of thirst, should inform human beings that they have this problem to face. Facing it, they will not only prepare thirst quenchers, perhaps like the old fashioned switchel of the harvest field, and nutritive beverages like the barley waters, than which none is better nor more long established as a good and safe drink after great effort—safer than plain water, and agreeable too, if chilled and flavored with fruit juices. In one of the prettiest and most ancient of all mother stories there is a delightful mention of a barley posset, posset being no more than a spiced and flavored beverage, sort of curdled, as the jellylike beverage of long cooked barley may seem to be.

Books on invalid cookery are often largely made up of recipes for nutritive beverages, and bartender guides give us some recipes for "soft drinks," and much about the need of practicing every nicety in the preparing and serving of alluring beverages—the chilled or frosted glass, the beauty and tone of the bit of fruit, the coolness and heavenly aroma of the frosted mint. First and last, what a list of "ades," sippers, fizzes, cups, punches, English squashes, and German bowles there are! We have but to use our imaginations, with study to make the beverage taking side of living serviceable, pretty, and gratifying to most of our senses.

Beverage Sirup

Lemonades and similar beverages are superior when sweetened with a sirup. The business of preparing these is easy. Drinks made with them are smoother to the taste, while less sugar is required. The sirup is sometimes called a stock sirup—a supply to have on hand. For a small amount, cook two cups of sugar with two cups of water to the sirup stage, or to 220 degrees on the thermometer. The sugar should be thoroughly dissolved before it is cooked, and the same care used as in making candies.

Around the Horn - - By Carl Clausen

life belt kept him high in the water, and a man in the bow of the boat threw him a bowline and pulled him in. Again and again the operation was repeated until the boat was full and bore away for the Corsair. The second boat swung alongside and took off the rest. Capt. Austin, with his log book strapped under his life belt, was the last to leave.

As the second boat pulled away the Endymion, bereft of her boilers, swung broadside to the swells. The water in her hold rushed to one side. For a moment it looked as if she were going to turn turtle. The lifeboat missed being impaled on her dipping royal yard by a matter of inches. Then the old vessel righted herself slowly and swung to starboard. She staggered into the wind, decks awash, and went down by her head with the fore topsail fluttering.

Half an hour later there was a conference in the cabin of the Corsair between Capt. Austin, Miss Crowell, and Jay Sprohl—or rather there would have been a conference if Sprohl had given the other two a chance to voice an opinion. Miss Crowell listened in silence to his vituperative denunciation of the Endymion's skipper. Then she said:

"Suppose we have your version of matter, Capt. Austin."

"My version is the same as his, minus the epithets," the skipper replied.

The girl glanced at the general manager.

"Will you please leave us for a moment, Mr. Sprohl?" she said. "I would like to speak with Capt. Austin alone."

Sprohl left with an angry shrug. Miss Crowell looked at Capt. Austin as if trying to make up her mind about something.

"You have no excuse to offer?" she asked.

"None," he replied. "I was slated to go sooner or later. I wanted to give him a taste of discipline before I left. It's done him good. He'll be a better husband for—some one after this," he added wearily.

Miss Crowell regarded him thoughtfully.

"I didn't know that he was contemplating matrimony," she said in a low tone.

The skipper dropped his eyes.

"No woman is going to abandon a pleasure cruise and follow a man around the Horn unless she's in love with him," he retorted.

"I—I think you're right," she replied faintly.

He glanced at her quickly. Something in her tone and manner made him catch his breath. He took a step forward.

"Edith!" he exclaimed.

"Yes, dear!"

A moment later, when he released her, she said:

"You bad, bold sailor! Kidnaping my general manager, and then having nerve enough to come and get poor little me, who has been eating my heart out for you ever since you gave me my first lesson in boxing the Corsair's compass. When my wireless operator picked up Sprohl's frantic message off Bank's peninsula I knew the old Endymion was in a bad way, so I followed you to stand by in case anything should happen. My party is at the hotel at Punta Arenas. We'd been lying in one of the inlets with steam up for four days waiting for your S. O. S."

THE OTHER DAY - - The Boat That Didn't Float - - By Donald Ogden Stewart

MY wife and I were in our stateroom packing when the tender which was to convey us to French soil drew alongside our ship. The steward knocked at our door and asked if our bags were ready.

"Our bags will be ready in plenty of time to be taken off," I replied a little testily, for we had left our packing until the last minute and things weren't fitting in very well.

But the steward did not go away. His idea evidently was to confuse me.

"You go ahead about your duties as a sailor," I said to him, "and I will take care of the bags, myself. You surely must have other things to be doing in connection with tying a big ship like this to a tender."

I saw that I was not making my point, so I tried taunting. "Or perhaps you aren't good enough at tying knots. Perhaps they let the other boys tie the ship to the tender and make you hang around passengers' staterooms?"

To all of this the steward only smiled, which was just as well, as I was in no mood for an argument. I had just found three pair of extra trousers which I was sure I had not brought on board with me and which would not possibly fit into my suitcase.

"These aren't your trousers, are they?" I asked the steward. "You haven't taken to leaving your personal things about in my room on the way across, have you?"

"I don't think that he speaks much English," said my wife.

"I notice that he speaks enough English to have taken my tip," was my caustic reply.

"But you haven't tipped him yet," said my wife. "That was the bath steward you tipped."

"O, the bath steward, eh?" I sneered. "And yet they complain of the low birth rate in France. Quite the reverse, I should say." And with that I plucked off a crisp French note. "Here, take this, my good man," I said, thrusting it into his hand, "and this——" (shutting my suitcase at one corner and hanging it on his hand)—"and this——" (giving him my wife's suitcase)—"and these——" (draping the three pair of trousers over his shoulder)—"and the next time, don't go leaving your belongings in decent people's staterooms."

And with that we were out of the little room which had been our home, and down the gangplank to the tender which lay alongside.

Aboard this little boat all was bustle and confusion, while above us the side of the ship we had just left rose to what seemed a rather silly height.

"I didn't know it was such a big ship," said my wife.

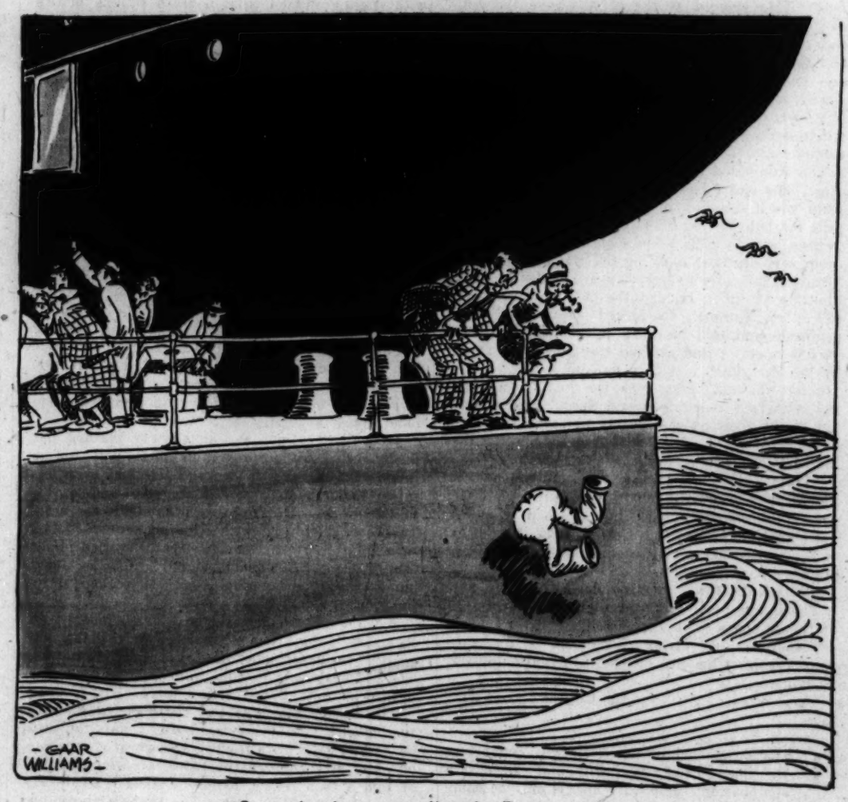
"You will find things like that all through life, my dear," I said a little sadly. "We never know how big our experiences are until after we have left them."

"You frighten me when you talk like that, dear," she said, clinging to my arm.

"There, there, I'm sorry," I reassured her. "I was a brute. Let's talk of cheerier things. I don't see our bags anywhere, do you?"

"Yes, there they are over there in a pile with all the others," she said, smiling through her tears. "At any rate, mine is. I don't see yours." And she laughed prettily.

I went over to the pile of suitcases and found mine under the three pair of trousers.



One pair of trousers slipped off my arm.

"I almost wish that we had taken a Dutch boat," I said. "The Dutch sailors are not so excitable."

I PICKED up the trousers and hung them neatly over my arm. "Let's go up here in the bow," I said, "and wait for the tender to start."

In the bow there were not so many people and we stood letting the sea breeze blow through our hair.

"That is America over there," I said.

"Where?" asked my wife.

"Well, in that general direction," I replied, motioning vaguely so that one pair of trousers slipped off my arm and into the water.

"You will have to get those pressed," said my wife, watching them slither softly through a wave. "I never liked them anyway. They made you look old. Why don't you let them go?"

"I've a good mind to do just that," I said. "It would be simply quixotic to jump in after them, I suppose."

"You have me to think of, too, now," she said softly. "You can't take the chances you did before you were married."

"Not for some time yet, anyway," I agreed. And when we looked again the trousers had disappeared.

"I wonder what the name of our tender is," said my wife. "It would be nice to remember—the name of the first tender we ever rode on together."

"It is probably the Douglas," I said, hardly able to hold back a smile.

"Why the Douglas?" asked my wife, totally unaware of the treat that was in store for her.

"Don't you remember the old poem, 'Douglas, Douglas, tender and true'?" I asked, and laughed in spite of myself.

"O dear," said my wife, "I do hope that you aren't going to be that way."

"What way is that, my dear?" I asked, pretending that I hadn't heard what had been going on.

"Making up jokes about names," she pouted, "or speaking Irish dialect."

"I didn't speak in Irish dialect," I said, a little hurt.

"No, but you looked as if you were going to," she replied.

This seemed to me to be a rather unfair criticism, but I said nothing. Most of the passengers had gone below by this time to avoid the chill wind which had sprung up, but still there was no sign of the tender's casting off.

A PORTER came up and said something in very bad French, some local patois, I suppose, for I didn't catch a word of it.

"He wants to know if we want him to take our bags off when we land," I explained to my wife. And to the man I said "Oui." I also carefully draped the remaining pairs of trousers over his arm and gave him three francs. He seemed very displeased and departed.

"I am sorry, in a way, to be leaving the old ship," I said, looking up at it towering above us in the deepening dusk. "We had many a good time aboard her."

"Name one!" said my wife, aggressively.

I ignored her remark. "A ship is, in many ways," I said, "like a woman——"

"——but a good cigar's a smoke," said my wife, throwing me all out of the mood for further reverie. And, anyway, the porter was approaching us again.

He seemed uneasy and was still carrying the trousers over his arm. Another volley of his abominable French, which I doubt if he himself understood, and I was placed in the position of having to answer him.

"He probably thinks you want those trousers pressed," suggested my wife.

"No, no!" I explained impatiently. "He merely wants to know if we don't want to go below. We probably are about to cast off. What do you think?"

"I'd rather stay up on deck here, if you don't mind," said my wife. "If all those people are below it must be awfully stuffy. I rather like to have the sea lashing my face."

I turned to the porter. "Nous restons ici," I said, only in French.

He shrugged his shoulders and disappeared down the companionway. We were left alone on deck with a few officers and a few of the braver passengers.

"They must expect a rough trip in shore," I said, looking at my watch. "I guess we can stand it, however. Do you know any hymns for those at sea?"

"I know the piano accompaniment to one," said my wife, "but not the words."

"Words mean nothing at a time like this," I said, turning up my collar. "Can you hum the accompaniment that you know?"

"It's just the bass accompaniment," said my wife apologetically.

"I guess that would probably get us in worse," I said. "You snuggle up to me and we'll face it alone."

An officer came along the deck and saw us. He must have admired our courage, but he did not show his feelings. Fortunately he spoke English.

"When do we push off, captain?" I asked. They always like to be called "captain."

"You can push off now whenever you like," he replied.

Could it be that there had been a mutiny and that I was in command of the tender?

"Are we in any danger?" I asked.

"Not unless you walk backward off the dock," he said.

"Off the what?" I asked, as quietly as possible.

"Off the dock—off this dock—off the dock you're standing on now," he replied, a little gruffly, I thought.

I looked at my wife, but it was so dark that I couldn't see her face. Perhaps it was just as well. I remembered now that this steamship line put in directly at a dock, thereby avoiding the long tender ride. I don't know why it hadn't occurred to me before. Perhaps it was the three pairs of trousers.

"And the train for Paris?" I asked.

"There is a little dandy in the morning," he answered. "It goes by way of Belgium. Do you know Belgium at all?"

"When does this ship go back to America?" I asked.

"In two days," he replied.

"Come on, dear," I said to my wife. "Let's get aboard now and get our passage. Perhaps we can sleep in our old room tonight. And that would be fun, wouldn't it?"

FASHION "TALKS COTTON" TO US

by Corinne Lowe

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—We shall probably never again go back to the excessive sentiment for cotton that young women cherished in the Mauve Decade. Those days, when our frail forms swooned under trailing folds of starched duck and pique skirts worn over equally starched and voluminous petticoats, and when our chins developed fallen arches from the Ascots and stiff, tight collars that completed our "Gibson" shirtwaists—these are as mercifully done with as are the passe-partout frames and the cozy corner effects that accompanied their sway.

Yes, we shall probably never again suffer those old cotton atrocities. Nevertheless, there is no gainsaying the fact that interest in cotton and linen fabrics has been more stimulated this season than for many, many summers. Last winter in California the wearing of these materials assumed the proportion of a real vogue, and at Palm Beach the emphasis upon washable sports frocks, although much fainter than on the Pacific coast, was sufficiently obvious for comment.

Undoubtedly the jacket has been one of the most active conspirators in restoring King Cotton and Queen Linen to their lost thrones. For this militant agent of summer fashion suggests such charming contrasts of one cotton material with another and such delightful ideas for the country club ensemble that it has managed to throw a new glamor over the cottons of our youth.

Long wave lengths of style are transmitted by the bathing suit of gaily flowered linen sashed and banded in navy blue satin, shown at the extreme right.

Next, one of the popular linen or cotton ensembles is represented in a jumper costume of white linen trimmed with touches of the same hand-blocked linen employed for its jacket.

In the center a flowered organdy trimmed with tucked plain-color organdy is recommended for a profitable morning at the resort.

The sleeveless cotton jumper creation now so much in the sunlight is located second from the left in a flowered gingham with pipings and bow of plain ginghams.

At the extreme left, a white linen frock is piped in green linen and finished with a vestee of green and white checked organdy.

Before proceeding with the activities of the jacket in this domain, let us first look at some of the varieties of cotton that stimulate renewed interest in the weaves of our Gibsonized girlhood. A very different cotton tail has been affixed to the main body of our story. O, yes, indeed, and it is an open season for such cotton tails.

To be sure, the main body is still with us. Here one of the prime favorites of the summer is the beautiful embroidered voile that they seem to do better in France, and here are other voiles of familiar mien. Also with us are organdies, and piques, and cotton crêpes, and ginghams, and dotted Swisses. But there are also newer names than these on the roll call.

One of these is a cotton frisca weave which is exceedingly smart and attractive and which looks awfully well in combination with more bromidic cotton weaves. Thus, when the designer tops a tailored frock of embroidered voile with a short, jaunty jacket of this cotton frisca, we get something so different from the old experiments in cotton that we must needs rub our bewildered eyes, and cry, "Can this be the same old fundamental thread we used in the nineties?"

Yet, of course, when we come to look closely at this cotton frisca, it turns out to be nothing more spectacular than a derivative of the old time ratine. Similarly with some of the new velveteens, notably those printed varieties that have borrowed the wisdom of the serpent in their designs. These latter are so unusual in their mood that at first we are persuaded there has never been anything like these snakeskin printed materials. Then we have to admit they have a whole line of perfectly good conventional velveteen ancestors.

Velveteen is certainly one of those fabrics now much in the public eye. Both jackets and coats for resort wear have appeared in response to the cotton vogue, and these are variously allied with wool, cotton, and silk frocks. The velveteen wrap is also recruited for street wear and is noted at some of the most fashionable New York haunts.

But, although there is such a widespread appearance of novelty, we have done quite a bit in the way of picking up old cotton threads. The quaint floral patterns of other days, for instance—these are a feature of some of the most successful organdies and dimities and voiles, and their use is especially notable in the revival of the basque frock.

And how old King Cotton has taken to ruling over the Basque province! For afternoon and morning wear at the summer resort nothing is more delightful than these other-worldly creations, with their full skirts, their fitted basques, and their short, puffed sleeves. I saw one the other day—a pale yellow organdy with green leaved white daisies, and I'd be willing to be 20 again just to wear it. Its appeal was all the more cogent because the hat that accompanied it was a ravishing, wide brimmed leghorn with a wreath of daisies and a green facing.

Some of these basqued frocks are absolutely sleeveless. But then, in a day when so many other things are in the same bereaved condition, this hardly justifies one in getting out one's diary. (No, I wasn't thinking of sleeves from my diary.) Now, indeed, that we have broached this sleeveless subject, let me say that many of the cotton frocks of today, whether basque or otherwise, are reserved in this particular.

There, for example, is the frock of white linen or linene, which so many tennis players today cherish because of its net results of tubability and durability. Such frocks, which are being ordered in quantity by many of the most fashionable sportswomen, are frequently without sleeves, or with such guarded versions of this detail that they are hardly worth mentioning. The same may be said of those jacket frocks which the same honest-to-court-or-links girl is choosing.

These jacket frocks are something quite new for the delight of the sportswoman. They are often carried out in plain color linen or cotton bound in contrasting color of the same material, and sometimes this sports schedule is varied by allying a skirt in monotone fabric with a sleeveless jacket of figured material. Still a third avenue for self-expression is found in a costume where both jacket and skirt are of figured cotton.

An illustration of this last named policy is found in a delightful frock for the tennis player which makes both sleeveless jacket and skirt of a printed cotton crêpe. The jacket, which is duly sleeveless, opens down the front in cardigan effect and is bound with plain color cotton crêpe.

Of course there is much made of the cotton ensemble, and the designer often develops this exactly as if he were working in silk crêpe or other more formal materials. Thus, an ensemble shown by one of our specialty shops poses a full length coat of plain voile over a frock of printed voile. The result is delightful and is just as suitable for a warm day in town as for an equally warm one in the country.

Speaking of cotton frocks in general, there is a tremendous variety of jumper and coat models, of aproned dimities and tiered voiles, of organdies, both period and otherwise. In fact, every reverberation from the world of silks and wools is caught up by these faithful cottons—to say nothing of the linens and of those rayons which have achieved such wonderful prestige among washable fabrics.

In this wide latitude of styles the jumper frock—and especially the one of sleeveless theory—scores as an extremely important development of the cotton revival. Many checked voiles and ginghams are used in this domain, and sometimes the jumper of one of these materials functions in conjunction with a plain white pique skirt.

An illustration of the approved behavior of these cotton sports frocks is supplied, second from the left, in a flowered gingham combining lavender and white. The former tone is employed as neck and armhole bindings, and a bow of the same plain lavender gingham is attached beneath the smocking at the left side of the blouse.

Organdy, especially when used as an organdy accompaniment to a frock of other weave, often succumbs to the check—an evidence of which is furnished at the extreme left in a morning model of white linen piped in green linen and set off with a vestee of green and white checked organdy.

While on the subject of this material, let us hasten to say that it does not always follow the basque lines with which its name is so frequently associated. It is frequently transcribed into just such a model as we see in the center. Here a figured organdy is combined with tucked monotone organdy which is, in turn, piped with self-material—this last, however, in contrasting tint. This frock, so admirably constructed for listening to what the wild waves are saying before noon, may be interpreted just as well in embroidered voile with tucked organdy finish.

The large clan of jacket ensembles is represented, second from the right, in a creation which touches up its jumper frock of white linen with the same hand blocked linen employed for the jacket.

THE SENTIMENTALISTS

by DALE COLLINS

THE STORY IN RESUME:

CAP'N WHELAN, owner of the brig Hirondelle, smuggles a shipment of rifles to a Malay chieftain on a South Sea island. As the vessel lies at anchor in the river the captain picks up a canoe containing a white baby. Mr. Carrington, the mate, makes an unsuccessful search for the parents of the child. The captain informally adopts it, christening it Samuel. In the city of Macassar Cap'n Whelan encounters Tina Murray, whom he employs to take care of the infant. Tina reveals to Cap'n Whelan that during the war she was married to Lieut. Martin Agnew, an Australian, who never came back to her, though he survived. Cap'n Whelan knows of Agnew, but keeps silence. Both Tina and the captain, as the brig continues its cruise, come to idolize Samuel. The vessel puts in at the port of Netherlandia. In the coterie of traders in bird of paradise plumes that frequent the store and bar of Li-Goon there are M. Paul Cuvelier, Tom Thompson, Boyce, Van Rossen, and Evan Jones. Also at the store, when Tina pays it a visit, is young Johnnie Summers, a too-regular drinker of Li-Goon's liquids. M. Cuvelier makes advances which Tina repulses. Johnnie, son of a rich widow, has been upset by the war. He begs Tina, whom he sets on a shining pedestal, to be his moral mainstay. He invites her to see a native dance with him. Mr. Carrington offers to read Tina's horoscope.

INSTALLMENT VII.

Jungle Madness.

THE mate made no further comment, and there was silence until the arrival of Cap'n Whelan half an hour later. With his entry the place became hot, crowded, and noisy. He puffed and panted as he surged about, throwing his coat on to the settee, rolling up his sleeves, wiping his face. He took up all the space, crowding Mr. Carrington and Tina, as it were, into corners. Shouting for the steward, he sank heavily into his chair, elbows on table to support his weight, and nodded briefly.

"Hot," he said.

They agreed. He seemed to be sucking up more than his share of the air, and it was as if the brown walls had drawn closer. The smell of his wet body percolated to them. Mr. Carrington gathered up the cards and put them in his pocket. The steward brought the meal. When they had eaten for a time Cap'n Whelan spoke.

"Samuel all right?"

"Yes; sleeping beautifully. He had three hours this afternoon, but when I put him down he went off again in no time. He's gained over a pound this week."

"Nothing wrong with that," said Cap'n Whelan, and, goggling at her, abruptly demanded: "Y'been encouraging that Frenchman?"

"M. Cuvelier? Good heavens, no! He's awful. Whatever made you ask that?"

Her eyes were frank and open for him to read. Cap'n Whelan, mouth pursed up, looked into them shrewdly.

"Nothing," he said, satisfied.

Tina pondered over the master's question, but it did not surprise her. She guessed he had met Cuvelier, and Cap'n Whelan had a way of knowing people's thoughts even when he appeared most lost in the world of his flesh. But she was not afraid of him. He was a man and she was his match.

"Hobson's gone," he grunted presently to the mate.

"Ay."

"Bigamy, eh?"

"So."

The subject was exhausted. Silence. Cap'n Whelan's mouth made squashy noises. A tinkle as the mate's plate touched a glass when he pushed it away. The steward brought the sweets. The three remained wrapped in their own thoughts, elbows almost touching and yet isolated, dependent each on each, but with nothing in common.

"O, captain," said Tina when the meal was over, "will you be aboard tonight?"

"Yes."

"I thought of going to see the native dance."

The master, picking his teeth with a sharpened match, looked at her keenly from beneath the bushes of his brows.

"Who's taking y'?"

"Mr. Carrington," Tina answered, with a veiled but anxious glance at the mate. He showed no surprise, accepting the announcement as he accepted all things. She blessed his resignation.

"Damn poor entertainment, but if Samuel'll be all right y' can go." Cap'n Whelan heaved himself out of his chair. "Hot down here," he grumbled, and left them, squeezing himself up the companionway.

"You don't mind?" asked Tina.

"No," said Mr. Carrington, laconically. "Ready?" He was busy with his pipe.

"In a moment," said Tina, and hurried to her cabin, for she was already nearly an hour late. Samuel lived up to his good character, for he lay asleep in his customary attitude, fists clenched above his head on the pillow, feet drawn up. For once, however, Tina found no time to gloat over him. She powdered, put on the cream and scarlet shawl Mr. Heathershaw had bought her at Colombo, patted her hair into place, and saw by a glance in the mirror that she was looking young, that her eyes sparkled, and that there was a flush in her cheeks. Excitement moved in her and she ran up on deck, where the imperturbable Mr. Carrington waited. The hush had turned to brooding quiet, through which, as a tremble in the air rather than a sound, drums spoke. A red glare on shore made the ship darker by contrast. The tip of Cap'n Whelan's cigar and the glow of the mate's pipe were like little watchful eyes.

"Now, Mr. Carrington!" called Tina.

A chair creaked as Cap'n Whelan rolled forward. The little eye glared at her suspiciously.

"See yer not t' late," he warned, and Tina gave her promise. She and Mr. Carrington went over the side into the dinghy, and Cap'n Whelan's thoughts toiled heavily after them. Native dance and all this fuss. . . . ? Was she honest? Or was that girl up to something? He wasn't going to be fooled by her—he took his oath to that. But, of course, all this New Guinea business was new to her. Might just want to see it. No telling. It was hot tonight, sweaty. Too pretty really, but with her head screwed on right. . . .

Tina made no attempt to engage her dumb cavalier in talk, but when they stood upon the jetty she asked: "Do you want to see the dance, Mr. Carrington?"

"Me? No." His tone was detached.

"Then you needn't come. Some of the others will meet me there. I thought you might like it—that was all. Run along to Li-Goon's. I'll be perfectly all right. Don't worry about me."

It was not Mr. Carrington's intention to worry about anybody. He made his choice.

"Me—Li-Goon's."

He had no opinion about the wisdom of leaving her unescorted; he was not hurt by his dismissal. Tina could not decide whether he was being tactful or merely lacked all interest. His very directness cloaked him in mystery.

"Good night, then, Mr. Carrington. And thanks for bringing me ashore."

"Good night."

Without another word his long shadow dwindled away, to be rediscovered against the brightness of the verandah. Tina, left alone, felt a flutter run under her skin like the stirring of leaves in a breeze. She opened her lips and drank in the heady draught of the night—black, bubbling with strange noise, heating the mind and senses with a thrill of excitement and adventure. The hills loomed over her; the sea whispered. Ahead through trees and bushes the glare waxed and waned, beckoning her on. As ever responsive to her surroundings, Tina felt intoxicated. Her feet moved almost mechanically on the dead dust of the road, and they moved to the surges of the drums. Thud-thud-thud, the drums muttered, and paused. Thud-thud-thud, and a pause—now loud, now low, but with no variation of time, steady as a pulse, ominous and yet fascinating.

TINA realized suddenly the danger of her mood. She was moving as if hypnotized. Checking herself, she fought against the forces which possessed her. A hand went to her heart. It had caught the rhythm of the drums. Out there the Hirondelle lay—lights burning placidly against the throbbing stars; she wanted to flee back to the safety and seclusion of the brig beyond the belt of calming water. Her ears heard the music of the dance and her eyes caught the wild lights of the fires; she wanted to hurry on swift feet to where the people of the dark island danced and where Johnnie Summers waited.

And, while she hesitated, from behind a hand pressed firmly on either hip and the nape of her neck tingled to a kiss hot, sudden, and passionate.

The rush of emotions stifled each other. She could only swing about with a cry of surprise on her lips and questions thronging her mind.

M. Cuvelier, dim seen, made his bow.

"O, so it's only you!" Tina exclaimed in a subsiding sigh of relief, amusement, and scorn.

"Mademoiselle——!" The word was a prayer of homage and admiration.

"M. Cuvelier, and his manners as bad as ever!"

His shoulders rose in a brief shrug of apology and explanation.

"I admit it, Mademoiselle Tina. Bad manners—but I am a man and 'uman. Who shall blame 'im who cannot resist temptation on such a night, in such a place, with such a girl. The very air alive——!" He raised his hand in a stroking motion, as if he caressed the waves of sound.

"Nicely put—but you can go!" Tina was amused now, and she enjoyed mocking M. Cuvelier, whose expertness put her at such an advantage.

"But no," he explained, shaking his head, "that is not possible. Those natives are crazed with betel nut and the dance. It is not the place for you alone. Surely mademoiselle is sufficiently interested to stay with me if I put the chain upon my emotions of the most natural?"

"A flattering offer, monsieur, but Mr. Summers——"

"Alas, Mis-tair Summers—'e is not 'ere, but drinks at Li-Goon's."

"Really? That's a pity," Tina answered, calmly. She understood both men well enough to know that M. Cuvelier was not lying. But despite her philosophy of facing things and her knowledge of the faults of Summers' character, the bubble of excitement was pricked and she experienced a sense of collapse and disappointment. She had not known before quite how much she had expected of the night.

"'E said you 'ad not kept the appointment and so 'e came back to console 'imself. But I, M. Cuvelier, said she has made a rendezvous—voila, I am 'ere!" He lapsed into a discreet, concerned silence, awaiting her decision.

But Tina was not making a decision. She was standing numbly aching to the throbs of the drum, and wondering vaguely why it was always the Martins and the Johnnies who could hurt her and whom she could not hurt.

Upon them out of the night lurched Summers, running on unsteady feet. He blundered into her.

"Tina," he panted, seizing her arms, "I thought you'd not been able to come. The mate's just told me——"

"I was late," said Tina, and no more. The absence of anger troubled her. When she liked men for their failings, forgave rather than blamed, it was serious.

"Ah, our young friend 'as torn 'imself away?"

Summers discovered the Frenchman and, releasing her, turned upon him.

"What the devil are you doing here?"

M. Cuvelier merely inclined his head toward Tina.

Waves of anger were added to the pulsations in the air. Tina promptly stepped between the two men and spoke in a normal voice of politeness.

"You've been sweet to wait with me, M. Cuvelier, but now, as you see, Mr. Summers has turned up, so we can say good night."

M. Cuvelier was not a coward, neither was he a fool. If he lingered, a clash was inevitable and it would do his cause no good. He could rely upon this girl. One with such spirit, such diablerie, such knowledge of the world, could not remain satisfied with the charms of a drunken infant. But nothing must happen which would drive her sympathy in the wrong direction.

"Bon," he agreed smoothly, "as ever mademoiselle's servant. Adieu!"

He made a graceful little gesture as if he kissed his finger tips to her, and strolled away, erect and well poised, leaving Summers humiliated and choking with rage. Tina smiled after M. Cuvelier. She admired him. He could carry off a situation and was a man of distinction! Also, he knew how to kiss. She could afford to pay him his due as an interesting and attractive specimen. But Johnnie, at her side, forlorn and more than a little drunk, belonged to a different class. He made her happy and afraid.

"Don't worry," she said. "I know. It was naughty of you, but there's no use making a fuss!" She might have been chiding a loved child.

"I feel awful about this," he answered, subdued and trying to keep each word distinct. "I waited and waited. You didn't come. Disappointment drove me back to Li-Goon's——"

"You mustn't let disappointment in me do that," warned Tina, but he did not heed.

"I suppose you won't go with me now? I suppose I've made a mess of things again?"

Tina laughed cheerfully.

"O, no," she told him, "you've invited me and you don't get out of it as easily as that. I'm not the first girl who's been taken to a dance by a young man smelling of gin. Come along!"

"Good Lord!" Relief enriched the words with gratitude and homage.

They went together down the road and a silence came upon them, for the night was so eloquent that there remained nothing to be said. The drums struck blow after blow, and to these now was added the chanting of the dancers. The notes were high, harsh, and few, but strangely accented, swelling where western ears expected them to die down, dying where western ears expected them to swell into a roar. The effect was of wild happiness and savage grief. It challenged and aroused; it was the naked song of naked people without morals, without restraints, without intellects, without learning—a song of untrammeled and untamed flesh and blood, shouting to the listening stars the things civilization does in hiding beneath roofs.

TINA understood that song.

The heart which beat in all the night opened before them, and they entered in. Torches and fires, flickering and leaping, filled the space with bloody light, which was never steady, never the same. It welded the whole scene into a living mass—a palpitating, indivisible body of flesh, earth, fire, music, air, and trees. Stars and darkness, mountains and sea were a great embracing presence. The two hundred dancers swayed forward while the drums beat thrice. Their bare feet crashed down as one. The shock quivered through the soil. The lines swayed back again unceasing, tireless, like the waves of the sea. The headdresses gave them an appearance of unhuman height. It was as if palms danced. Forward they surged again, the feet crashed down, the song roared out.

"Johnnie—O, Johnnie!" breathed Tina, dazed. She was burning, and yet she shivered; her eyes were wide and held the redness of the flames.

He took her hand and they went on, stiffly and slowly, without speech, the pulses in their fingers throbbing together. They seemed to move without effort of their muscles, straws sucked by the vortex toward its engulfing heart.

The belt of flesh became men, streaming with exertion, unseeing eyes rolling, lips snarling back from blackened teeth. Copper skins shone, paradise plumes flaunted, the teeth of sharks jangled upon breasts, muscles rippled, spears stabbed at the stars, and feathered shields swept up. Behind the dancers the old men and women drummed and sang—shapeless masses of bones in bags of leathery skin, their gumless mouth slobbering, gleams in their ancient eyes. At either end of the lines firm-breasted, full-lipped maidens pirouetted and strutted like courting birds. The air reeked with the stench of brown flesh. Through each jerk and pause and note and step ran a pagan urge, sinister in beauty but too flagrantly stark to become obscene.

SUMMERS and Tina were unheeded. Children of another world, they might have been invisible ghosts from another planet. But they were swept into the festival. Unconsciously their bodies moved—but ever so little, restrained by the training of generations. Their minds, their senses, less disciplined than the outer shells, were dancing mad with the dancing savages. They were caught in a torrent older than time.

Instinctively, as if seeking strength to resist, they drew closer together. Their bodies touched and trembled. They looked at each other almost without recognition. The wild light played strange tricks with their faces, burning away the masks, consuming a thousand years, lighting terrible and joyous fires. They had become emotionally excited by each other and were as tinder in a blazing world.

"Come away, Johnnie," Tina cried in panic. "Come away. This is mad! mad! mad!" The words fell into the universal rhythm. Mad! Mad! Mad! The drums took it up, checked with deliberation to dwell wickedly on the joy of such madness. Down smashed the bare feet, shattering sanity on the hot earth. Up swept the naked arms, flinging discretion to the black voids.

Their feet—long slaves to leather and the pavements—carried them at a walk back across the clearing, but their spirits ran before like hunted wild things. As their spirits fled, they danced also, because they could not contain themselves. The triumphant, conquering music of lizard skins stretched over hollowed logs and beaten by bare hands drummed them away to where the trees began and where the darkness was.

The night closed about them, and on the quivering margin, without speech or thought, they clung to each other, experiencing no surprise but as though the embrace was natural, inevitable, and beyond the need for explanation. Mouth was crushed to mouth and body pressed to body. Their lips were hot and wet, their eyes were hazy, their minds swooned. Tina, to whom sex had been an obedient and invaluable servant, lost control now. There was no reason in her; there was nothing in her. She was a small flame in the great fire.

"O, little white glory!" Summers panted brokenly into her lips.

At the sound of his voice the spell lifted sufficiently for Tina to recognize what they were about. Her soul revolted. They were drunk with primitive wine, and because she loved him—she accepted that fact without questioning—she had to regain her balance. Not like this! He was a child in such experience; she should have been a veteran. It wasn't fair to expect strength of him. He was drunk for the first time, while she had tasted such wine as this before, though in a different form. And although never in the past had it been so intoxicating, so firing, so worth draining to the last drop, she would not stoop to profit by the madness of a moment. She was not his Tina—he did not know. She burned for him, craved for him—but she loved too well to shame him and herself. Not while he was blind, ignorant of the truth, drunk with young passion! Not like this!

She struggled in his arms.

"Let me go! Let me go!" she implored, but he held her closer, his drumming ears deaf, his unaccustomed mouth blundering over her eyes, her cheeks, her throat.

Temptation was sweeping her away. She was a woman, not a frightened maid, and she had no moral scruples to steel her will. Honesty of soul was her only strength.

"Let me go! Let me go, I tell you!" she commanded, fighting him physically as she fought mightier things with all her spirit. "You've no right! O, I hate you! Let me go, damn you—let me go!"

Her clenched fists thrust into his face, forcing his head back. He was beyond surprise, but instinctively set her free, crying her name, his hands hungry for her.

Johnnie Summers was alone. Tina escaped down the strip of road towards the sanctuary of the Hirondelle, where love was a simple, domestic god, the patron of a babe.

The drums beat faster, louder, for the dance progressed, and ere the dawn the savages would hold strange carnival.

Tina could find no better excuse for leaving the breakfast table than that her head ached. The lameness of this pretext increased her sense of shaken assurance. Yesterday a dozen convincing reasons would have occurred to her for anything she had wished to do, but between yesterday and today the evening hung like a magic mist shot with rainbow lights through which she had passed, emerging changed, her self-confidence gone, the mastery of circumstance no longer hers. However—whether her plea was convincing or not—she had to escape from the narrow saloon, where, she felt, Cap'n Whelan's eyes rolled at her and where thought suffocated in the dead, cooped silence. She craved the empty deck and the wide, bright sweep of the morning. Cap'n Whelan jerked his head in assent and went on eating. The fact that he expressed no sympathy was not strange. If he had done so she would have known he was suspicious. Lifting Samuel from his cradle and signing to the steward to follow with it, she left master and mate to continue their meal.

Neither spoke for a time, and then Cap'n Whelan sat back and, knife and fork upright in clenched fists on either side of his plate, gave vent to a well considered opinion.

"Mister, that young woman is up t'something!"

"Ah," Mr. Carrington commented without prejudice.

"Up t'something, sure'n God. Me—I'm no fool. Was that 'Frog' wi'y' and her last night?"

"No." Mr. Carrington was not telling half the truth for Tina's sake; he was answering a question in the shortest way.

"Why didn't y'come back wi' her?"

"Playing poker."

Elaborate lies could not have foiled inquiry so completely. Cap'n Whelan ruminated, wiping up the fat on his plate with a crust of bread. He muttered at long intervals, not addressing Mr. Carrington, whose thoughts in any case were far away. "Up t'something. Too pretty, really—I always knew. Sound enough head on her, but t'pretty a face wi' them dagoes about." He took up his fork and drew a criss-cross pattern on the cloth.

The pause lengthened. Mr. Carrington dutifully remarked "Ah" and nodded. He produced his pipe and looked steadily into the bowl, as though he had lost something there. Cap'n Whelan's fork cut through the worn threads, but he continued to draw it to and fro. The steward, who had returned, stood by his shoulder, watching the process. The cloth belonged to the captain tuan—it was not his concern.

The master made a sudden jab, as if pinning down an elusive thought.

"Damn good wi' Samuel," he rumbled. "Needs her. Make it better for him—safer—Dagoes and such like—" He drew a portentous breath. "Safer—safer t' marry her."

The daring of the idea brought streams of sweat. He looked at the mate to see what had been the effect of this surprising announcement. The mate was pushing in the tobacco with a gnarled thumb. His face was blank.

"Marry her!" Cap'n Whelan repeated with emphasis, lifting his heavy brows interrogatively.

"So," Mr. Carrington agreed. He lit a match.

"Damn and blarst y', mister!" roared Cap'n Whelan, driven into a cyclone of rage. A stream of words jostled in his throat. "Bah!" was all he could say, but he struck the table a blow which made the crockery rattle. You told that mate something which meant a revolution in your life, and all he gave you was a grunt. Ponderously he flung himself out of his chair and across the saloon, and, recovering his voice as he reached the cabin door, hurled back: "Y'—a man'd be better off wi' a stinkin' dead dog to talk t' than y'—y' all fired mummy!"

He made peculiar gestures, almost as if he wrung his hands in impotent despair. Mr. Carrington watched and listened attentively now as became his position, but his expression, seen through a cloud of smoke, had not changed. For a minute the master fumed, and then with a curse gave it up. The door slammed behind him. Mr. Carrington rose, puffed stolidly, enjoying his after breakfast pipe, and went on deck.

THE day was still young and fresh. A breeze was astir, ruffling the water into skipping waves which set the Hirondelle straining gently at her cable, so that the patient ship seemed to intimate that she would be glad to go again about the seas. The palms danced upon the shore. Creamy puffs of cloud sailed across the sky and rested from their long voyaging upon the topmost peaks of the ranges. The mate paced up and down, passing within feet of Tina but paying no heed to her.

Tina also was absorbed. Samuel, as if conscious of treachery, was restless. She rocked him in her arms, but her thoughts were not of him. What was the meaning of last night? Was it madness or love? She rehearsed again the emotions of each moment, trying to decide how much was due to the setting—to the drums and the torches and the dancers—and how much was real. The memories flushed her cheeks and set her pulses hurrying. With desperate insistence she told herself that it was not love—could not be. She had only seen Johnnie three times, and he had done nothing at all to make her love him. On the contrary he had, as he would have said, made a mess of things. Poor dear Johnnie, making a mess of things—his tie undone . . .

She dreamed awhile.

No! No! It wasn't love. She had to remind herself again. This thing which danced dazzlingly before her was no more than a tropical will o' the wisp sent by unkind Fate to tempt her away from Samuel, the Hirondelle, and the peaceful joy she had so lately won. But she denied love without conviction. If there had been no past, self-deception would have been easier. Mere passion would have served as the explanation. But they had all been more passionate than Johnnie Summers, or would have been if Tina had allowed it. She had been able, then, to control the strangest situations. Her mind flashed to Mr. Heathershaw and the month with him on the mail boat, to Billy Bowden, to Joey Rubenstein, and back and back—right back to Martin and Peter. She had been mistress of all those delicate and dangerous adventures, but this one was her master. It had come upon her quickly, simply, and without warning, and she was vanquished.

She had to face it: this was love, and therein lay the whole explanation. There was no need for anything else. But, having admitted the truth, a problem remained which was the real cause of her distress and which she had been deliberately thrusting back into a corner of her brain. Johnnie did not love Tina. Johnnie, who was, how could a fellow put it without seeming a prig?—clean that away—Johnnie worshiped an image of Tina he had made for himself, an image virginal and pure, an image of crystal. She bent over the baby, lest Mr. Carrington should see her eyes. But Mr. Carrington, close beside her, was looking across the water. He took out his pipe and jerked his head toward Netherlandia.

"Fight," he said.

"What?" asked Tina to gain time.

"Fight." He pointed briefly with his pipe stem.

Tina had to strain now to appear normal. She jumped up with false eagerness.

"O, where?"

Mr. Carrington did not trouble to answer. Netherlandia lay before them at the foot of the great hills. The tossing palms, the straggling row of huts, the narrow road, the strip of black beach and its fringe of lacy foam stood out with stereoscopic clearness. The broad front of Li-Goon's house was a dignified brown block in the center of the settlement. Down the steps from the veranda figures were tumbling. At that distance they looked and moved like dancing dolls, white against the somber sand. Tina could recognise every miniature. Her heart beat against Samuel's. Johnnie was first in the stream and M. Cuvelier was close behind him. Mr. Carrington had said there was going to be a fight. One after another the people of the outpost appeared, with the small figure of Evan Jones last and looking cut off from the rest. They were hurrying, stumbling, excited. With jerky movements a circle was formed, leaving two in the center.

"It's Cuvelier and—and—Mr. Summers!" Tina tried to keep her voice at a normal pitch.

"So."

They were fighting now. Tina knew over whom they fought and why. The knowledge hurt her. She longed to cry out to them, to come between and thrust them apart. But she was powerless. The wide expanse of water robbed her of all senses save that of sight. The little figures danced about before each other. A tiny arm darted out. It was Cuvelier's, and his fist landed on Johnnie's chin. Her head ducked in sympathy, as if the blow had struck her. She wished to close her eyes, but could not. Johnnie was staggering back. His jaw was hurting him—perhaps his dear mouth bled. Hit him! Hit him! The unspoken encouragement was a prayer. He recovered his balance, and, rushing in, closed. They became a locked mass, punching, wrenching, and staggering. The other figures capered and shouted without sound. The dolls named Royce and Thompson finally parted the opponents, both of whom were unsteady on their feet. They circled about like drunken men, lashing out wildly. It was all so remote, so dehumanized by distance that to Mr. Carrington they looked like germs fighting under a microscope.

"Funny," he remarked gravely.

The smoke from his pipe drifted into Tina's eyes, making them redder than they had been.

To her the conflict was all too real. She could have borne it better if she had been on the beach hearing their quick drawn breathing and the thud of fist on flesh. Excitement would have helped her then, and the stress of conflict might have served to numb her sensibilities. But to be standing on the quiet brig with Mr. Carrington at her side, experiencing all the pain in an atmosphere of almost brutal dispassion, made her feel physically sick. And yet she could not turn away. She crushed Samuel to her, tightening her embrace as her nerves felt each blow. He cried unheard.

"Good!" she whispered.

The Frenchman was reeling and Summers sought to follow up his advantage. But, abruptly, Cuvelier had recovered. The attacker became the attacked and was subjected to a rain of stinging punches. Summers was beaten back and down. He was on his knees, but rose again, weakly. There was no respite for him. He fell back in staggering steps, Cuvelier toe to toe with him, arms darting like pistons. There could be no doubt about the outcome now. Time was the only question. Summers put up his arms together, trying to shield his head. He was bent double. The onlookers on the beach were agitated by their invisible wires.

"Brute! Brute! Brute!" sobbed Tina.

"Good fight," the mate commented impartially.

It was over. Summers had crumpled up into a white heap on the sand. Cuvelier stood swaying, wiping his brow and mouth. The others crowded about Summers.

"They've killed him—killed him!" Tina could not see the beach now for the mist in her eyes.

"No," said Mr. Carrington, and added in a burst of loquacity: "Fair go; best man won."

"Best man won!" Tina said scornfully between her teeth, but in her heart she knew that the mate was right. It did not trouble her. Whether Johnnie had won or not was nothing compared with the thought of his face all bruised and bloodied. She compelled herself to look at the shore. Johnnie was on his feet, Boyce supporting him. Cuvelier came forward. They shook hands. Tina had sporting instincts and knew that this was the right thing to do. But she remained a woman—the handshake filled her with surprise, almost with disappointment. In the next moment she was glad. How like Johnnie to forgive that hateful beast!

"Hell's bells!—are y'trying t'kill the kid?"

Cap'n Whelan's furious bellow jerked her back to the Hirondelle. She discovered Samuel screaming and with cause, for she held him bundled any way in a stifling grip. Remorse stung her. Her little Samuel! "There, there, darling, did I hurt you? Hush, pet, hush!"

The master stood with fists raised and eyes flaming.

"Have y'gone mad?"

"I—I don't know," Tina confessed feebly. She was distressed. Never before had Cap'n Whelan found reason to reprove her for neglect. Already, it seemed, the will-o'-the-wisp was drawing her away.

"What's the matter wi' y'?" He stared in disgusted astonishment. She made no answer, but gave all her attention to the babe, unable to meet his eyes. "What's the matter, mister?"

"Fight." Mr. Carrington indicated the beach. "Exciting," he added in a numb tone which betrayed that the word was meaningless to him.

CAP'N WHELAN'S interest was captured. He liked fights, for could he not hit a man on the top of the nose himself? He noted that Tina had shrunk away. She'd be more careful in the future. He'd put the fear of God into her. A fight, eh?

"Who was it?"

"Cuvelier and the young feller."

"Cuvelier?" Cap'n Whelan pounced on the name. So that was why she was in a fume? All his suspicions were confirmed. She was no better than the rest of them. The flash dago had ogled her and she had fallen for him. Cap'n Whelan began to march up and down, his mouth cooling an invisible plate of porridge. The project which had failed to stir the mate at breakfast quickened in his mind. Marriage, thought Cap'n Whelan, in his old fashioned way, would make things safe and permanent. A nuisance, it would be, but Samuel's welfare was his only consideration. He looked at Tina, who had gone back to her chair. Samuel, satisfied to have recaptured her attention, nestled to her. Good with that kid! Cap'n Whelan meditated putting his proposal to her without delay, but was restained by caution. You had to go carefully with young women about these things. He would plan it all out—arrange his arguments—and speak to her that night. Gloom mingled with his satisfaction. Samuel was the only force on earth or in heaven which could have driven Cap'n Whelan to such a desperate enterprise. To be tied—to have a wife always at your heels—hell! But it had to be. He wanted a mother for his babe, and he got what he wanted.

It did not occur to Cap'n Whelan that there was anything heroic or noble about his attitude of mind.

His glance wandered to Mr. Carrington. Lucky swine, he thought at first, untroubled and undisturbed as a piece of the brig's timber. He had a mind to pick a fight with that mate. But then he remembered Mr. Carrington was a poor thing, beneath contempt. Cap'n Whelan left it at that. He did not indulge in pity. There was a lot to be worked out, and he lowered himself into the hammock beneath the awning. It was pleasant in the shade with the cool breeze, and very soon he slept, the straining curve of the canvas almost touching the deck and his stomach sagging over the edge.

Tina got up restlessly. The beach was deserted and Li-Goon's presented an enigmatic face. She wondered when Johnnie would come and what she should say to him. Occupation was her need. The baby's clothes had to be ironed. The task fell to Nagashima, but she would do it herself. Anything would be better than this idle handed brooding. The cook showed no surprise at her intention. He looked at her once with his narrow, wise eyes and put the irons on the stove.

"I bring them, yes," he said.

The saloon now seemed pleasant, safe. The sense of being shut in no longer irked her. She had crept away from the sight of Netherlandia into the last heart of the Hirondelle. Samuel slept on the settee. The clothes were soft and comforting beneath her hands. She sprinkled a woolly vest and began to work. But nothing could banish thought. She guessed what M. Cuvelier had said—some sly, suggestive remark about the previous evening—but Tina suffered from the painful knowledge that Johnnie had fought for a delusion, since she was sure the Frenchman's thrust had not been so fatal as might have been justified.

The iron ran smoothly and the contents of the basket gradually joined the neatly folded pile upon the table. Tina took up one of Samuel's frocks and began upon it. A step on the stair did not disturb her, as she assumed that the cook had come for something. But as he paused and did not speak she looked up.

Johnnie Summers stood at the foot of the companionway.

"She's a Septic!"

Many women want to be, deserve to be, and could be far more popular than is their lot. Doctors know why. So do nurses. They call such cases septics.

To remedy obnoxious body odors and bad breath, you must recognise their cause. The trouble is deep-seated. Frankly, in the colon. Semi-constipation makes millions of systems septic. The bowels may move every day, but all the waste is not eliminated. The matter that remains poisons the blood, and permeates the perspiration. It taints the breath. Nature is signaling her need of a little calcium.

Calcium works wonders in one's appearance, too. With the inner system sweet and clean, the complexion clears most marvelously. Eyes brighten. Teeth whiten. The tongue is no longer coated, even on arising. And you never need take another harsh cathartic.

Perhaps you are septic, and don't know it. Try a tiny bit of calcium, and see! It may make all the difference in the world. Leave harsh, habit-forming cathartics alone. You never need them if you take an occasional calcium tablet.

Free five-day test of calcium is yours for the asking. Nearly every drug store has Stuart's calcium wafers, but a box will be sent you complimentary, postpaid, if you mail coupon.

Flattery

By W. E. Hill

(Copyright: 1927: By The Chicago Tribune.)

The doubtful compliment. Though imitation is, they say, the sincerest form of flattery, Margy isn't going to be the least bit flattered when she sees that two strange ladies (on Margy's right) have copied her new hat.

Trade Last—Gracie, who loves flattery, is going to be mad in a minute. She wants a trade last and her best boy is about to tell her he heard so and so say she was remarkably well preserved.

"O, I know I'm homely, and awkward, and absolutely devoid of charm, but do tell me what you think of me!" This, dear readers, is how a plain girl goes after it.

"It's the hair, not the hat." Men love to be flattered about their hair. And for just that reason many of our best and biggest business boys are going to the beauty parlors for their scalp treatment. Barbers mean well, but they are terribly brutal about some things. Take the man in the barber's chair. He is asking Tony Passementril, the barber, if he will have any hair left when he is old. "Well," answers Tony, unfeelingly, "guess that depends on how long you last!" Over at the Bide-a-Wee Beautye Shoppe they do things with tact. Only listen in while Miss Finnegan (of the South Side Finnegans, mind you) works at a male customer's scalp. This is only the second treatment, but the scalp has made such marvelous progress that Miss F. has called her side partner, Miss Nolan, to see. "Never," says she, "have I seen a scalp that responded to our treatment so quickly!"

Refined Flattery—"Why, Lillyan, how adepoise you is lookin'!" "And you, too, Alvanetta, seems like I never seen you so embonpoint and slender! Almost spectral like." Miss Jones, who works out intermittently, meets Miss Johnson, who works out at even rarer intervals, and a few well chosen compliments are bandied about.

Flattery in the Home—"If you only knew how much better you look in dark clothes!" This is as much as can be expected in the way of flattery by most aging married men.

"Really, chauffeur, I wouldn't know that awful photograph in the cab was you! It certainly doesn't flatter you!" Taxi drivers are just as susceptible to flattery as the rest of us. And how few are the compliments they receive! Most taxi drivers have inferiority complexes, due to their feeling so awfully about those uncomplimentary pictures of themselves framed inside the cab, and so a little flattery now and then is very necessary.

"You're a big, bold, bad boy—that's what you are! You lil' rascal!" This is a swell line for those old boys who frequent the night clubs and speakeasies. Flatters them to the skies!

"The Same Little Pitcher—"

Used for years in making rootbeer from Hires Household Extract

WOULD you like some rootbeer that I made yesterday from Hires Household Extract," inquired Mrs. Hamilton from the hollyhock side of the iron picket fence. "My Joe and the girls like it so much on these real warm days."

"Nothing would please me more," laughed Mrs. Adams, owner of the little gray house on the wallflower and sweet william side. "The children are always asking for rootbeer . . . 'the kind that Mrs. Hamilton makes.'"

"Oh, rootbeer is so perfectly simple to fix," Mrs. Hamilton went on. "I dip it up with the same little pitcher mother used to use. Hires Extract has been a fixture in our family for years."

"Yes, I intend to make some for my family very, very soon." And Mrs. Adams cut the last white sweet william for her pretty bouquet. She was wearing the brightest sort of smile as she turned toward the house, thinking to herself, "What a delightful treat for Betty and little Tom."

They all smack their lips over this drink

Delicious home-made rootbeer from Hires Household Extract
